WALLACE DOOMED TO DESTRUCTION BY FOREST FIRE

Coeur d'Alene Mining Town Ablaze in Many Places Last Night When All Wires Were Lost Women and Children Rushed Out on Special Trains Mullan Also Burning at Midnight and Sends Appeal for Aid.

MISSOULA, Mont., Aug. 20.—Wallace, Idaho, is doomed. At 10 30 o'clock the whole town was on fire. The flames were first communicated to the south end of the town from the forest fires.

The last words of the telephone operator were that fire was within 15 feet of him and that he had to run for his life.

At 11.30 p. m. the following message on the fire situation was received over the Northern Pacific's lone wire, the only means of communication the stricken city has with the outside world, and which is liable to go down at any moment:

"Every hill around the town is a mass of flames and the whole place looks like a death trap. No connections can be had with outside towns. Men, women and children are hysterical in the streets, and are endeavoring to leave town by every possible conveyance. Trains are being made up of box cars. The entire east side of town is in flames."

Shortly after 11 o'clock the district officers of the forestry service were notified that the little town of Libby, in northern Montana, was in imminent danger.

A telephone message from Mullan, a town six miles east of Wallace, received at midnight, says the town is burning and asks for aid.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 20. The Spokesman-Review's correspondent at Wallace, telephoning at 10:10 p. m., said about 20 buildings have been set afire by burning brands. They consisted of warehouses owned by mercantile firms and a few residences.

At 11:30 o'clock a message from Wallace states that 150 residences in the east part of town on Hotel Canyen and Cottage Grove streets and Cannon's addition, were burning, and the flames had spread to the plant of the Coeur d'Alene iron works.

The Providence hospital is in the direct path of the flames, and every effort of the fire fighters, under the direction of Mayor Hansen, to reach the building is unavailing. An attempt was made to get a path around the burning districts to the building. The hospital is filled with patients, and their only hope is that the brick building will prove fireproof.

Wallace, which is the county seat of Shoshone county and has a population of about 5,000, is densely built in a small cup-shaped basin surrounded on all sides by mountains. The only exits are three narrow canons. These are now hemmed in by fire.

A courier was dispatched on horseback from Mullan, six miles from Wallace, at midnight but he returned in an hour, saying he could not reach within two miles of the burning city, as the canon was a seething furnace.

Forest Rangers in Peril.

KALISPELL, Mont. Aug. 20. The forest fire situation in northern Montana is the worst in the history of this section as the result of high winds which set in this afternoon, causing the forest rangers practically to give up all hope of staying the progress of the timber conflagrations. Three big new fires were reported today together with the destruction of two forest rangers camps, with all their supplies and possessions. The men have fled and their whereabouts tonight are not known. They are in the gravest danger, however. Forest Supervisor Haynes will meet two companies of soldiers at Olney and an endeavor will be made to rescue the men.

The forestry officials tonight are fighting overwhelming odds with absolutely no chance of accomplishing anything without heavy rainfall. In the Blackfoot forest alone there are 8 distinct fires, many of which are practically beyond control. The whole region lying north of the Great Northern track extending toward the Canadian frontier is a mass of fire.

Eleven companies of United States troops are now on the forest reserves. Five more companies which arrived tonight from Camp Sparta, Wisconsin, and from Fulton, will be detailed to various points. Two companies are en route from American Lake Wash.

It was reported tonight that a fire had broken out near Smead, a little station on the Northern Pacific, just west of Thompson, and was doing considerable damage. The fire is burning so closely to the track that traffic over the line has been stopped.

Loyalton Is Saved.

RENO, Nev. Aug. 20.—The forest fire which threatened the town of Loyalton, Cal., this afternoon, is practically under control and did not come closer to the city than a mile, and a half.

The intense heat compelled the residents and the employes of the lumber mill to thoroughly soak the roofs of the houses and the huge lumber piles. The wind favored the fire fighters and the country between the town and the fire line being thinly wooded made the efforts of the fire fighters practically easy.

Fires Spreading in Oregon.

PORTLAND, Ore. Aug. 20.—The forest fires which are devastating various parts of the northwest are more threatening tonight than at any previous time this year. Except in the [illegible] country in Washington and the Wallowa fire in northeastern Oregon, where the flames are believed to be under control, the situation is most discouraging.

[illegible] the most serious situation [illegible] the Cascades [illegible] The fire is threatening the water supply and the electric light plants of Ashland. Fear is expressed for the safety of the town itself but this danger probably is exaggerated.

No hope of relief from the present dry spell is given by the district forecaster of the United States weather bureau of this city.

Colonel Roosevelt, in Letter to A. E. Carlton, Says That He Cannot Attend Tunnel Opening

The Outlook
287 Fourth Avenue
New York

Office of Theodore Roosevelt

August 12th, 1910.

My Dear Sir:

I wish I could accept, but it is a simple impossibility. I have received literally thousands of similar requests, and with the best wishes in the world it has proved impossible for me to accept one in a hundred of these invitations. I deeply appreciate the courtesy and kindness of those who ask me to speak, but you have no conception of the drain it is upon me even to accept the very limited proportion that I am physically able to accept, and I could not greatly increase this proportion or accept more of the invitations that come to me without absolutely abandoning all thought of any other work.

Faithfully yours,

T. Roosevelt

A. E. Carlton, Esq.,
First National Bank,
Cripple Creek, Colo.

The above letter from Colonel Roosevelt regarding his attendance at the official opening of the Roosevelt deep drainage tunnel explains itself. The committee on arrangements is of course sorry that he can not attend but will proceed with the arrangements for the opening, confident that the celebration will be worthy of the interest and support of the entire state. No definite date for the celebration of the tunnel opening can be set at present, owing to the steel object [illegible] struck by the El Paso mine engineers in endeavoring to connect with the cross cut from the deep drainage tunnel.

Nevertheless since there [illegible] feet to be bored by the [illegible] to connect with the deep drainage [illegible] it is probable that the celebration will be held shortly after September 1.

Superintendent Nichols of the drill gang at the mine last night explained the work yet to be done before the connection will be made.

The engineers of the deep drainage tunnel said he began their cross cut yesterday. After they have cut at right angle [illegible] the present course of the tunnel a distance of 65 feet they will be directly under our shaft. We

CAUCUS BILL IS MARKED FOR DEFFAT

Initiative and Referendum Measure Gets but 18 Votes in Senate.

SKINNER DODGES AND BOLTS

Republicans Embarrass Him by Offering His Own Bill as a Substitute.

DENVER, Aug 20.—Governor Shafroth has notified the Democratic senators until Monday night to break up their caucus agreement. He is making efforts to force the platform Democrats, led by Tully Scott, to join with the Republicans and endeavor to pass measures in accordance with his call for the special session. It is considered unlikely that he will succeed.

Hopeless defeat for the initiative and referendum measure in the special session of the state legislature [illegible] presaged by a vote in the senate [illegible] today. The Democratic caucus bill was introduced on its second reading and resulted in a vote of 18 for and 14 against. Senators Skinner and [illegible] did not vote for it. Senator Skinner, a supposedly staunch caucus man, created a sensation by refusing to vote. He was piqued by the taunts of the Republicans and walked out of the chamber.

The vote as cast is six short of the necessary 24 to insure victory for this one of the measures advocated by Governor Shafroth and one of the most important of the preelection pledges. The six votes needed must necessarily be recruited from the Republican side and not one vote is promised from that quarter. The Republicans have declared absolutely against the measure.

Skinner in Tight Box

[illegible] the routes of today [illegible] the senate was perpetrated [illegible] Senator Skinner [illegible] the initiative and referendum bill [illegible] committee of the whole [illegible] its second reading proceed [illegible] duce, as a substitute for the caucus bill the original Skinner bill which provides for an 8 per cent petition on the initiative and referendum features.

NO STAIN LEFT ON SHERMAN OR CURTIS

GORE REQUESTS STATEMENT

No Warrant for Use of Two Names Shown in Mass of Testimony Heard.

SULPHUR, Okla., Aug. 20.—The select committee appointed by the House of Representatives to investigate Indian land affairs and the so-called McMurray contracts, and which also has been investigating the Gore bribery charges, tonight issued the following statement:

"The committee has heard and carefully considered all of the testimony submitted, and is unanimous in the opinion that there is and was no warrant for any person to use the name of Vice President Sherman and Senator Charles Curtis in connection with any improper relation with any Indian contract whatever."

This is the opinion of the committee after hearing scores of witnesses who appeared following the testimony of Senator T. P. Gore. Senator Gore declared he had been approached by Jake L. Hamon and that Hamon, acting in the interest of J. F. McMurray, had offered him (Senator Gore) $25,000 or $50,000 as a bribe to promote in Congress the contracts by which McMurray was to receive 10 per cent attorneys fees on the sale of $30,000,000 worth of Indian lands.

[illegible] testified Hamon [illegible] Vice President [illegible] being interested [illegible] Sherman being named as [illegible] Hamon on the [illegible] had ever said anything [illegible] to Gore.

The [illegible] report was signed by Representatives Charles Burke, South Dakota; C. B. Miller, Minnesota; F. W. Saunder, Virginia; J. H. Stephens, Texas, and Phillip H. Campbell, Kansas.

Gore Suggests Action.

In giving its decision today the committee announced it had received from Senator Gore a statement relative to Vice President Sherman and Senator Curtis and that the committee "commended" Senator Gore's statement.

This statement concluded as follows:

"The investigation is now practically concluded. Many witnesses have been examined, a volume of evidence has been adduced and there is no testimony tending to establish any improper connection on the part of either official (Sherman and Curtis) with the approval of the so-called [illegible] contracts. While the public [illegible] no reason to suspect any such improper connection, yet I would venture to suggest and if I may be pardoned, would request that the committee at the earliest practical moment make an authoritative finding and statement to the effect that no evidence has been presented tending to establish any improper conduct on the part of either Vice President Sherman or Senator Curtis respecting the subject of this investigation."

The committee announced that the investigation had not been concluded. McMurray will continue his testimony Monday.

Much of McMurray's testimony today related to Richard C. Adams, an attorney of Washington. After President Taft had permitted to be made public a letter in which he expressed [illegible] that the Indian enrollment should not be reopened and that only the Indians now on the rolls should be allowed to participate in the division of the lands, McMurray had a copy of the Indians send telegrams to Adams commending the President's attitude and incidentally [illegible] the McMurray contracts.

Senator Thurston's "Mistake."

These telegrams were afterwards turned over to the attorney [illegible] by former Senator John M. Thurston, McMurray's [illegible] as the [illegible] sentiment of the Indians. The witness said Mr. Thurston probably was mistaken when he said the telegrams were unsolicited.

McMurray [illegible] it to be his belief that President Taft and the attorney general [illegible] that [illegible]

It [illegible] that when McMurray [illegible] $125,000 fee in the citizenship [illegible] a claim for $800,000 of the fee was made by M. A. Love, an attorney of [illegible] and F. Evans, an attorney of St. Louis.

McMurray [illegible] to both of these [illegible] but he had not agreed to give them part of his fee and they had no part. McMurray [illegible] any [illegible] C. M. Chilger of Oklahoma, but all that these Creeks had asked [illegible] for a [illegible]

RUSH L. HOLLAND WEDS AT GLENWOOD SPRINGS

The marriage of Mrs. Mary L. Fox [illegible] L. Holland, both of this city, was announced last night in a telegram from Glenwood Springs received by W. L. Strachan, an associate of Mr. Holland in his legal practice here. The telegram was brief and gave no details, save that the ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by the Rev. J. M. Dickey.

R. L. HOLLAND,

Prominent Local Attorney, Who Was Married Yesterday.

When Mr. Holland left this city last week, he stated that he expected to return within 10 days or two weeks but gave no intimation that he proposed to return a married man. Mr. and Mrs. Holland were accompanied to Glenwood Springs by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Vining of Denver, formerly of this city and their close friends.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Holland have many friends in this city. Mr. Holland being prominent in his profession as a lawyer, and the attorney for the Colorado Springs Light Heat & Power company. He is also past grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. E. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Holland will shortly return to this city to make their home.

SAILS FOR LONDON WITH 2 PRISONERS

QUEBEC, Aug. 20.—Hawley Harvey Crippen and Ethel Clare Le Neve sailed for London on the White Star liner Megantic at 7 o'clock tonight and are due at Liverpool at noon next Saturday. By Saturday night they probably will be lodged in a London jail to await trial for the murder of a woman supposed to be Crippen's wife Belle Elmore.

An extraordinary accident which occurred as Crippen crossed the gangplank carried an omen that might well depress a man in the shadow of the gallows. Crippen who was handcuffed, had his hat pulled low over his eyes and his chin buried in his collar, trying apparently to dodge the photographers. In his haste he ran squarely into a rope that held the gangway steady. The rope caught him under the chin and jerked him backwards and had not Inspector Dew caught him, Crippen would have fallen and possibly pitched between the two vessels into the water.

Miss Le Neve had to be supported as she crossed the gang plank. As she reached the deck of the Megantic, she fainted and had to be carried to her cabin.

MAYOR GAYNOR GAINING RAPIDLY IN STRENGTH

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Still cheerful, still gaining in strength and showing no signs of a setback, Mayor Gaynor came one step nearer recovery today. His physicians predict that within a week or 10 days he will be out of the hospital fully recovered from the wound inflicted by James J. Gallagher. The following bulletin was issued at 9 o'clock tonight:

"The mayor is gaining rapidly in strength."

COL. ROOSEVELT DENIES RUMOR

HAS NOT SENT AN ULTIMATUM TO TAFT.

Vice President Sherman May Relinquish Convention Chairmanship.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y. Aug. 20.—Theodore Roosevelt denied emphatically today that he had sent an ultimatum to President Taft demanding that the President break with Vice President Sherman. Colonel Roosevelt's attention was called to a report that Lloyd C. Griscom, chairman of the New York Republican committee was to go to the summer White House next week to "carry the terms of peace between Beverly and Sagamore Hill."

The report had it that Mr. Sherman was chiefly responsible for the action of the state committee in refusing to select Colonel Roosevelt as temporary chairman of the New York state Republican convention and in recommending the vice president instead.

"I have sent no ultimatum to President Taft," Colonel Roosevelt said. "The report is a tissue of falsehood from beginning to end."

The colonel added that he had not sent Mr. Griscom or anyone else to Beverly on any mission. He made it clear he had no intention of doing so and recognized no situation which could call for such a step.

Historic Coach to be Feature of Trail Day

LAS ANIMAS, Colo., Aug. 20. The stage coach that carried Horace Greeley across the continent in 1859, the subject of one of the best stories that Mark Twain ever wrote, and which, in part, helped make Twain, Greeley and the stage famous, has been purchased by the Bent County Fair association and in the future will be displayed by them at their annual Santa Fe Trail Day at Las Animas. The old coach [illegible] the west, has been stored in Denver for a long time. It has been in many holdups and its history would fill a page.

REVOLUTION IS NEARING END

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 20.—That the revolution in Nicaragua is nearing an end is indicated in cable reports received in New Orleans tonight from Managua and other Central American points.

These advices were received not only by the sympathizers of the revolutionists, but by those of Madriz and agents of commercial organizations and steamship lines as well.

For the first time since the revolution started all advices are practically the same. They are to the effect that the Madriz troops have met with serious reverses almost at the very gate of Managua the capital city, that Granada had been captured by General Luis Mena with an insurgent army, that the inhabitants of the interior are flocking to the standards of the revolutionists and that Madriz has been succeeded in the presidency by Jose Estrada, a brother of Juan Estrada, head of the provisional government set up by the insurgents.

Whether Jose Estrada will be permitted to retain the presidency if the revolutionists take Managua appears doubtful. General Mena is said to be marching on Managua and Madriz is reported to have fled.

MINERS' CONVENTION FINISHES ITS WORK

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 21.—The special convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourned sine die at 2.30 this morning after the substitute report with two amendments.

FAREWELL SERVICES REV. SANDERSON AND OTHERS

Pastor of St. Paul M. E. Church and Several Members of Congregation Soon to Leave City

At the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal church tomorrow evening there will be held farewell services for the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Sanderson, and several members of the congregation who are about to leave the city. A short program has been arranged, which will be given in the church at 425 South Nevada avenue, and members of the congregation and friends are invited.

Besides the Rev. and Mrs. Sanderson the services are in honor of Beryl McKowan, O. Aschurd and James Draper.

The Rev. Mr. Sanderson came to the church six months ago as a supply pastor and leaves Monday for the Methodist Episcopal conference at Fort Morgan. He has [illegible] will not return here but will take up his former work that of a conference evangelist. Mr. McKowan goes to the conference to enter into the ministry, while Mr. Aschurd leaves for the Iowa School of Theology to study for the ministry. Mr. Draper, who is well-known in this city, will go to the Beverly school in California, where he will take the four-year electrical course, preparatory to entering into foreign mission work.

CAUCUS BILL

without any other limitations as to the number of counties that shall be represented in the petitions

This measure has the support of the Republican side but this move got nowhere, except to cause an avalanche of talk and place Senator Skinner in an embarassing position, as he was made to appear as if repudiating his own measure Senator Skinner charged Senator Berger with insincerity Berger dared Skinner to break the caucus agreement and vote for his own bill Skinner then refused to vote either way and left the senate in a huff

The feature of today's session was an address by Senator Stephen, who lambasted the eight platform Democrats for tieing themselves up to a caucus measure.

Scott Roasts Gove.

Senator Scott of El Paso and Teller opened the hearfest this morning by making a savage attack upon the address of Senator Gove delivered yesterday before the senate He attacked the position taken by the Denver senator declaring that he had accepted a nomination under a platform that declared in favor of certain things, and then had repudiated that platform No man had a right so to do he declared

Senator Scott also declared the statement that not many of the people really understood the initiative and referendum to be not true

After ha[illegible] the Denver senator an artistic roasting, the Colorado Springs man took his turn at the spit Senator Burger of Denver touched with acid every part of the Scott anatomy, trying to find one that was raw enough to make the senator wince Senator Burger is always witty, making his shafts cut deep

Yesterday the house voted itself to be a business body really anxious to transact some of the things for which it has been called together To make that bluff good the house yesterday resolved upon having a Saturday session This morning the members gathered in the chamber, were prayed for listened to the reading of the journal of yesterday and then adjourned to Monday

are at present working to remove a steel plug about 350 feet over them, and since we expect to proceed at the rate of 35 feet a day after we get the steel obstruction removed we ought to tap the end of their cross cut in 10 days or two weeks from the time we get started

The first obstruction with which we met was a steel plate. After we had pierced that we continued boring until we found that we were again in steel of some sort. After some allocating, we determined that we had tried to bore our eight inch hole through a steel plug which had been put in the bottom of the test hole drilled before the water came in the mine, several years ago

"We have now made an instrument at our own forges by which we expect to grasp and pull out this steel plug, after which we can proceed with our drilling. We expect to do that tomorrow.

The deep drainage tunnel is now 14,484 feet in from the opening and yesterday its direction was changed so as to proceed toward the Elkton property. An indication that the tunnel is already doing its work is seen in the fact that the Rainer property situated on the side of Beacon hill near the El Paso mine was found to be practically unwatered when entered Friday by new lessees. It is expected that the remaining 1,000 feet before the deep drainage tunnel is expected to strike the main water course will be finished inside of 30 days

The method of unwatering the El Paso mine will be unique. At the end of the cross cut tunnel from the main deep drainage tunnel a bulkhead will be constructed into which the drill hole coming from the bottom shaft of the El Paso mine will go. As soon as the bulkhead is penetrated the eight inch hole will be partially closed by an arrangement worked from the top of the shaft, and so regulated that only about 5,000 gallons of water per minute will be discharged into the bulkhead and thence from the mouth of the big tunnel itself. It is estimated that were the water to be allowed to rush out unrestrictedly there is enough pressure from the immense body of water in the El Paso mine to force 5,000 gallons of water a minute through the tunnel, which would be sufficient to tear up the tracks in the tunnel itself and do great damage

Report Shows Better Water Department Under Charter

Through a request of the Mayor, as head of the water department, Superintendent E. B. McReynolds and Water Commissioner W. R. Allen have submitted reports covering the first year of operating the Colorado Springs water system under the charter form of government.

Other departments of the city will submit annual statements within the next few days with a view of making comparisons under the form of government which became effective here in July 1909. Superintendent McReynolds, in compiling facts and figures under his department of the system, has the following to say:

"To Mayor H. F. Avery, Commissioner of Water and Water Works:

"In response to your request, we hereby place before you a short summary of the operations of the water department for the first year under the charter form of government, and that you may be able to judge more correctly as to its efficiency or non-efficiency we have also made, and submit herewith, a report of the operations of the year just preceding the inauguration of the present form of government that you may, by comparison of the two reports, bring out more clearly the differences that may appear therein.

"First we call your attention to the comparative statements attached hereto relating to the finances of the two years and showing the disbursements of the department for each month therein, and the total for each year. From it you will observe that the total disbursements for labor, materials, etc., for the year subsequent to the inauguration of the charter was $1,775.36 less than the year just previous. And this in the face of the fact that more construction and repair work has been carried on in the past year than was done in the preceding year. To mention a few of the principal items of expense in this line, we would say that the mains and fire hydrants added to the system show an increase over those of the previous year 40 to 50 per cent. We have, also at considerable expense, added to and otherwise materially improved the condition of our equipment.

"As another matter of primary importance, we submit a comparative statement showing the amount of bonds issued and paid during the periods under consideration. In the year from August, 1908, to August, 1909, the year preceding the adoption of our charter, bonds to the amount of $25,000 were issued, and for the same period bonds to the amount of $15,000 were paid. The past year no bonds have been issued and $100.00 paid. Not only in the finances of our department have we sought to make a favorable showing, but by applying the same business principles we have endeavored in every way possible to improve also the physical condition of the system. By raising the spillways and installing weirs at reservoirs Nos. 7 and 8, the holding capacity of said reservoirs has been materially increased. By the adoption of a new system of tapping, furnishing [illegible] flange union instead of the stipulated [illegible] think we have a superior connection and effect a saving to the department on every tap made.

"The plan of keeping and making regular monthly reports of the amount of water in storage in our mountain reservoirs, as shown by the appended chart, is an innovation introduced by us. We have extended this system of keeping complete data on our water until now we keep an account of the amount of water made by our mountain streams each day, the amount lost by seepage from reservoirs, and the amount consumed so we can tell approximately the amount on hand at the end of each day.

"By a special and persistent effort during the past year we have discovered and placed on the records of the office the location of approximately 500 stop or shutoff boxes and 100 taps. To this extent at least our records are more complete than they were a year ago and yet much remains to be done in this line. Much of this credit is due our turn-off man, who in the last seven months, by actual count, has located 468 of these boxes. His records show that within the last year he has made 852 turnoffs and 706 turnons. To do this he has traveled more than 3,000 miles."

Comparative statements of payrolls read: August, 1908, to July, 1909, $23,468.90, and from August, 1909, to July, 1910, inclusive, $25,883.78, an increase of $2,394.97. Bills paid during the same years were: 1908-1909, $15,770.43, and 1909-1910, $11,600.09, a decrease of $4,170.34. Four thousand more feet of water pipe were laid last year than in the same 12 months of 1908-1909.

Water Commissioner Allen's report, dealing more in detail with the financial side of the department, shows that the total increase from all account amounts to $19,161.59 under the first year of the charter.

This large increase is due to a certain extent to increased population, but the greater portion of it is made up in collections for water rent that have heretofore not been collected.

Under the new order of things, the water accounts are now kept in two ledgers, where formerly 12 ledgers were used for the same purpose.

The commissioner's report for the year 1909-1910 shows the following increases in revenue over 1908-1909 in the appended divisions: Flat rate $12,468.67; meter rate, $4,936.71; construction, $151.32; miscellaneous, $1,533.44; penalties, $47; tapping, $19.45, making a total increase for the year just closed of $19,161.59.

RASH APPEARS AGAIN

Summer Eczema, and Hot Weather Skin Troubles Demand Prompt Treatment With Poslam.

All skin troubles which are prevalent in hot weather rashes inflammations so-called 'summer' eczema itching spots, hives pimples etc demand the use of poslam for their prompt eradication. Their causes are found in overheated blood, skin irritation digestive disorders, etc. In some persons the eating of fish or berries in certain months always brings them on. For clearing the complexion red or inflamed noses sunburn, mosquito bites, burns, etc., poslam should be used in preference to aught else, surprising results being noted after a single application.

The readiness with which poslam heals small surfaces and minor troubles is but an indication of its rapid action in curing eczema, tetter, scabies, itch, etc., on hands, limbs, scalp or any part of the body.

A special 50-cent package of poslam is prepared for minor uses, and this as well as the regular $1 jar, is on sale by all druggists, particularly The Robinson Drug Co. and the Red Cross Pharmacy Co.

But a free sample, which will afford a convincing test, may be obtained by mail by writing to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

HOUSE-WARMING HELD AT NEW ROYAL PALACE

POSEN, Aug. 20.—Emperor William, the empress, Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, and Crown Princess Cecelie, Prince Eitel Friedrich and the younger members of the imperial family, arrived here today for the house warming of the new royal residence. The festivities will last three days.

This palace, the fifty-first owned by the emperor, to maintain which he recently sold two of his smaller country places, has been built for reasons of state to symbolize to the Poles the Prussian supremacy in German Poland. It has been designed by the emperor as the permanent residence of Prince Eitel Friedrich, his second son.

It is a massive structure built at a cost of $1,[illegible],000, covers nearly an acre and a half, and contains more than 900 rooms. The great banquet hall is a fifth larger than the famous white hall in the imperial castle in Berlin.

A tour 240 feet high surmounts the chapel, which is exquisitely decorated with mosaics executed by Prof. August Oetken of the imperial technical school at Charlottenburg. In this Emperor William will personally conduct divine services when in residence here, as is his custom.

PEACE ADVOCATES ADOPT DECLARATION

They Would Abolish Capital Punishment and Liquor Business as Well as Wars.

MYSTIC, Conn., Aug. 20.—The peace advocates who have been in conference here this week adopted their declaration of convictions today. They believe that capital punishment and the liquor business should be legislated out of existence, that the ballot should be immediate and without restriction as to race, color or sex, that newspapers should be free from injurious publications and personal denunciations, that no deadly weapon should be sold without a special license or legal certificate.

The convention favored the meeting of heads of nations with each other, as a powerful agency for peace. Appeal is made for a permanent court of arbitration or tribunal of justice.

The demand is made that school books should be examined before approval to secure further elimination of the so-called glory of war.

President A. H. Love of Philadelphia and all the other officers were re-elected.

WALLACE DOOMED

received a telephone message from Brigadier General Maus at American Lake, stating that, pending the adjustment of difficulties that have arisen the 250 troops promised for fighting fire purposes in southern Oregon will not be sent.

Forester Cecil declared today that if more fire fighters are not on the scene within the next few hours it will be just as well to let the fire burn itself out without attempting to combat it.

He says that the forestry service has drafted every available man in southern Oregon into service but the number—410—is absolutely powerless to stay the progress of the fire which now has a frontage of about 25 miles.

Cecil tonight telegraphed to Washington urging that the forestry department arrange with the war department to have the entire Oregon National guard ordered to the fire.

The difficulty which prevents the sending of the federal troops appears to be that there is no available appropriation to defray the expenses of the troops.

STARVES HIMSELF TO DEATH

Leader of Band of Fanatics Who Stopped Eating Passes Away With Smile on His Lips.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20.—John Irving O'Neill, leader of the queer little sect, members of which for many days have been starving themselves in obedience to a religious mania and who were discovered in a lonely spot by the authorities yesterday on the verge of starvation, died today.

Alice Priffon, a 16-year old girl who has been starving herself, has little chance to recover, it is said.

Lying on pallets, too weak to move, detectives found in a bungalow four members of the new sect deliberately starving themselves to death in anticipation of the end of the world. There were two men, a woman and a girl. They had not touched a morsel of food for six weeks, and for the last 10 days had not stirred from their couches on the floor of a room that had not been aired since the long fast began.

O'Neill said he was the leader of the sect, which he called Disciples of the Holy Ghost With the Gift of Tongues, and invited the curses of heaven upon those who compelled him to break the fast.

"The appearance of the comet was the sign of the end of the world," he said. "We were starving because fasting will gain us heaven, and there is no better way of getting to heaven than starving to death."

O'Neill's companions, Mrs. Nellie E. Doyle, aged 40, and James E. Butler, an old man, declared that they had willingly entered the death fast, but the girl, Alice Priffon, according to the detectives, said she had been forced to starve, and that she was quite willing to live.

By weaving the broken threads of a story told by the dying girl, the authorities here learned that O'Neill was formerly a Baptist minister at Dallas, Texas.

ROOSEVELT DENIES RUMOR

that Vice President Sherman might announce in the interest of harmony that he did not fully understand the position in which he was placed when he let his name go before the New York state committee for temporary chairman of the state convention, and that he would retire in order that Colonel Roosevelt might have the unanimous vote of the committee for the temporary chairmanship.

Criticises Sherman's Action.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 20.—At the Saturday afternoon luncheon of the Republican league in this city today, ex-Alderman Hart, who has returned from a visit to Colonel Roosevelt in New York declared that the vote in the state committee that chose Mr. Sherman for temporary chairman of the convention was "cooked up." In the course of his speech, Mr. Hart said:

I assert that Mr. Sherman knew full well that it was Mr. Taft's wish that no move be made toward choosing a temporary chairman without the fullest consultation with Mr. Roosevelt. A telegram from Mr. Taft to Mr. Sherman to this effect appears to have been suppressed, for nothing has been heard of it.

"I ask Mr. Sherman if it is not true in spite of knowing that Mr. Roosevelt had shown a willingness to act as temporary chairman and in the face of Mr. Taft's telegram he personally solicited votes for himself as temporary chairman on Monday night in New York city.

"Mr. Sherman by lending himself to this act of pettiest politics and by insisting on holding the appointment as convention chairman if he can hold it, has allied himself openly with the Woodruff-Barnes element and has threatened the disruption of the party in the state."

Beverly Remains Silent.

BEVERLY, Mass., Aug. 20.—Beverly was as silent as ever today concerning the tangled condition of affairs in New York state politics and the reported break between President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt.

President Taft was up at 5:30 o'clock this morning working on the letter he is to contribute to the Republican congressional campaign text book, and at 11 o'clock he boarded the yacht Sylph and went out to see the sonders races.

ISSUE OFFICIAL PROGRAM

Paper, "Should Gas Companies Handle Appliances? If So, Can Proper Co-operation and Friendly Relations Be Maintained With Dealers?" W. C. Duncan, manager commercial department, the Pueblo Gas and Fuel company.

As has been announced, the burro race on top of Mount Manitou is expected to cause merriment galore, and, after that is finished, there will be a picnic supper and a moonlight ride down the Scenic railway.

It is expected that there will be several hundred delegates and visitors to the convention, which will be participated in by practically all of the gas men in the state.

EX-POSTMASTER TWOMBLY OF DENVER DEAD

DENVER, Aug. 20.—Word was received here today of the death of former Postmaster John Curtis Twombly of Denver, at Los Angeles last night. Death was due to pericarditis. Mr. Twombly was county commissioner of Arapahoe county for four years, vice president of the Sons of Colorado and a prominent Knight Templar. He left Denver, July 8, in an effort to regain his health, his wife going with him.

Mr. Twombly was born at Dover, N. H., in 1853, and 11 years later came to Colorado, where he engaged in stock raising.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system.

THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs. Alcohol creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most precious possession—your health—by the use it is. See that you get what you ask for.

IMPROVEMENTS ON ROADS NOTICEABLE

From records gathered at the county commissioners office, the [illegible] work being done by the board during the last two years shows an [illegible] large [illegible], both in quantity and quality.

The work of the board is most noticeable in the volume and scope of road building and repairing, the building of the new Colorado Springs-Canon City highway being one of the most noteworthy examples. The road will be completed from this city to March's ranch, west of Dead Man's canon, by October 1, largely through the efforts of the county commissioners. Roads extending both north and south of Colorado Springs for a distance of half a dozen miles have been crowned and graded and put in first-class condition, in addition to the building and putting in place of many metal and concrete culverts and small bridges. A bridge 120 feet long has been put in across Fountain creek at Buttes, another concrete structure across Monument creek on the road to the Woodmen sanatorium, and others in various parts of the county.

Roads have been straightened, railroad crossings eliminated, and permanent grading and filling done and much other work accomplished. Local road overseers have been located in every settled township in the county.

A great deal of work is being contemplated at the present time, and this is to be carried out as rapidly as possible. Substantial culverts and metal crossings will be put in east from Colorado Springs to the county line. A road will be opened from Falcon to Peyton along the Rock Island railroad, completing a road over the nearest route from this city to Ramah. Other county roads will also be opened up in the near future and all needed improvements not now provided for on the road from Palmer Lake to the Pueblo county line will be made.

Ute pass road will be widened until it is a perfect mountain road; the Cripple Creek road by way of Cheyenne canon will be put in first-class condition to the El Paso county line, and all traveled roads will be made good as fast as money and conditions will permit.

The commissioners estimate that with the ending of the present fiscal year they will have spent $8,500 within the last two years for county highway improvements.

NEW GOLD DISTRICT DRAWS ATTENTION

Horace F. Lunt, a mining engineer of this city has recently returned from a business trip to Porcupine, the new gold district of northern Ontario. In discussing the district, Mr. Lunt said:

"Porcupine is about 150 miles north of the well known silver camp of Cobalt. At present it is not very easy to get to as it is 28 miles from the railroad [illegible] on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railroad. Porcupine is reached by stage, gasoline launch, canoe ferries and on foot. However, the government is building a wagon road into the camp and a franchise has been granted for an electric road so that in a short time the transportation facilities will probably be all that can be desired. The country is quite flat and heavily wooded with very few rock outcrops, which makes it difficult to prospect. In spite of these difficulties about 9,000 claims have been staked since last summer. The majority of these, of course, have no present value as mines and probably never will have, but being in Porcupine they can doubtless be sold. There are some remarkably good looking prospects in the district and the occurrence of gold-bearing quartz is remarkably widespread. Most of the discoveries of importance are in the township of Tisdale, but there are some in Whitney, Shaw and on the adjoining forest reserve. Reports of good discoveries from a camp called Cripple Creek, on Kenelakotia lake about 50 miles west of Porcupine were coming in but I could not find out anything very definite about it.

"The quartz occurs in veins and in detached masses in schistose rocks and in many places there are most spectacular showings of free gold on the surface. The only two properties that have done underground work of any consequence are the Timmons and the Dome. Both of these have three or more shafts down about 100 feet and have done considerable drifting and crosscutting at this depth, it is said with very satisfactory results. They both have hoisting machinery and small prospecting mills that were brought in over the snow last winter. It is probable that they will bring in 30 or 40 stamps each as soon as the snow comes again. These two properties are controlled by experienced mining people and are being prospected in a most thorough and businesslike manner.

"Porcupine is still in the prospect stage but it has the earmarks of a producing camp. The fact that experienced mining men are taking up options at high figures and spending large sums in development shows that there is something more than 'hot air' behind the boom that is rapidly assuming large proportions in the district."

A WELL-KNOWN FACT that Elgin and Waltham Watch companies make a cheap grade as well as a high-grade watch. As also the manufacturer of spectacles and eyeglasses make a cheap grade of spectacles as well as a high grade. It is poor economy to purchase cheap-grade lenses for the delicate eye. Cheap lenses do harm instead of good. Only the best grade of lenses used, and at moderate prices, at the Modern Optical Parlors, Nichols block, 20 S. Tejon St.

FLOWER SHOW WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

If you saw an [illegible] looking man [illegible] wending [illegible] yesterday last evening with his arms laden with large and radiant vegetables, or with huge bunches of flowers, you were seeing the final aftermath of the flower show of the El Paso County Horticultural society, for at the close of the big show last night all of the exhibits were auctioned off to the highest bidder. Consequently many a prominent citizen trudged toward his roof tree looking more like a vegetable huckster than a man of affairs. Incidentally the sale netted a goodly sum for the show, which was, in every way, an unqualified success.

Yesterday was "Missouri-Iowa day," and loyal present or former citizens of those states were at the show in numbers. And an equally large number of residents of the Pikes Peak region were present to enjoy their last opportunity, for a year, of seeing as fine a collection of flowers and vegetables as have been gathered together in this county in a long time.

Practically all of them gathered in the afternoon to hear the welcoming speech of Mayor H. F. Avery. At the close of his speech a musical program was given. Those taking part were Miss Hazel Marie Kaiser of Kansas City, Duncan Roderick Cumming of Oil City, Pa.; Mrs. Julia Stephens Bacon, accompanist, and D. S. Wagley of West Virginia.

Many were the expressions of pleasure and appreciation when the singers had finished, for all present realized that to them had been given a chance to listen to finer singers than usually grace the towns and cities at the foot of the backbone of the continent. Material expression of their enjoyment was shown when Miss Kaiser and Mrs. Bacon received beautiful bouquets, the former American Beauties, and the latter sweet peas and maidenhair fern.

FOR SALE—1909 Model 35-45 Renault roadster; practically new; owner leaving town, 3-passenger body; extra 2-passenger racing body, top, large trunk, imported fine glass front, automatic air starter and tire pump; speedometer, clock, extra tires, tools, etc., etc. Apply at Strang's Machine and Automobile shop, 8-12 N. Letter Carriers of Country Turn Down Proposition With a Vote of 9,730 to 5,[illegible]

The proposition to have a national letter carriers home in this city was defeated by the referendum vote of the carriers during the months of June and July by a vote of 9,730 to 5,586, according to the returns just received. The principal city in the country, so far as the letter carriers union is concerned, New York, voted almost solidly against the proposition.

Local carriers say that the question of a home for this city is now settled for some years, as the result of the referendum vote.

SURPRISE CLIFF HOUSE GUEST WITH PARTY

Charles Blackwell, who has been a guest at the Cliff house for several weeks, was pleasantly surprised by a number of his friends last Friday night, on the occasion of his birthday anniversary. The party, numbering 25 or 30, gathered in the hotel parlors and spent the evening pleasantly with music and various lively games. Late in the evening refreshments were served, and the company adjourned to the porch where popular songs added to the pleasure of the fine evening.

Mr. Blackwell left yesterday for his home, accompanied by his sister, Miss Blackwell.

Stops Falling Hair and Removes Dandruff

FEW people are aware of the number of Dandruff Germs that infest the human hair and scalp. The germs which locate themselves in the follicle or sack which envelopes the root of the hair, spend a lazy existence in sucking up the juices which should go to keep life and strength in the hair. These germs cannot be seen by the naked eye, but with a magnifying glass of from 300 to 400 diameters the spores of this hair destroyer may be seen in masses, clinging to the hair.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy

Kills the Dandruff Germ when applied to the hair, and prevents the curse of Baldness. It also restores faded or gray hair to its natural color and beauty. No matter how gray or how long it has been gray, it will restore it to its rich color and keep it soft, glossy and beautiful. Don't experiment with old-fashioned hair dyes, but save and restore your hair by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.

OIL WELL DEVELOPING INTO REGULAR GUSHER

The oil well in the Kern River district, California, in which R. P. Davis and several other prominent Colorado Springs men are interested, is developing into a gusher, according to a telegram received yesterday from the manager of the Consolidated Midway company, the holding company. He states that the well flowed 3,000 barrels in one hour last Friday, in the presence of several representatives of the Standard Oil company, which is negotiating for the entire output of the well.

The flow of the gusher can be controlled at will. The oil sells at the well for about 50 cents a barrel.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphans Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this Institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates all vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up pale, thin, weak children or rundown people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at Hefley-Arcularius Drug Co., 21 South Tejon street.

COLORADO SHARES IN MILITARY APPROPRIATION

Colorado will get $15,332 of the recent federal appropriation of $1,600,000 for the purchase of ammunition and supplies for the state militia, according to Col. W. A. Davis of the Second regiment. The allotment to this section must be drawn out in equipment and 25 per cent must be expended for the purpose of rifle practice.

Every state and territory in the Union gets a portion of the allotment, varying from $206,000 received by the state of New York to $4,778 which Utah gets.

The war department has also allotted $2,000,000 to the states and territories on a basis of representation in Congress for arms, equipment, camp purposes and promotion of rifle practice.

CONGRATULATES SPRINGS ON ITS MANY LIGHTS

Glenn Marston of New York city, now on a trip through the west, investigating the methods adopted by various commercial clubs, has been in this city for several days, and is much pleased with the progress which Colorado Springs has made since he was here in connection with the electric light company. He says that electric signs, of the number and brilliancy found here, are an unusual advertisement of immense value. Tourists are attracted in many numbers, and naturally go to those places where there are well-lighted displays. In the same way, Mr. Marston congratulated the citizens' committee on their plans for lighting the city at the time of the meeting of the state Republican convention.

Mr. Marston said that there is an immense difference in lighting conditions here and in the old countries of Europe, where there are stringent regulations in some of the towns and cities against electric lights because they would frighten the horses.

COUNCIL OF SORROW

DAVID J. SWISHER DIES

Was Next to Oldest Man in Point of Service on Colorado Midland Railway.

David J. Swisher, aged 75 years, for many years a resident of Colorado City, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at his home, 128 East Rio Grande street, in Colorado Springs, after a brief illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Swisher, and a daughter, Mrs. C. J. Turpin, now of Woodland Park, Colo.

Mr. Swisher came to Colorado City in the early days, and was next to the oldest man in point of service employed by the Colorado Midland road at the time of his death. For years he was a railway engineer, but retired from that active occupation several years ago, and has been employed by the Midland as watchman at the South Tejon street crossing. He was a prominent member of Colorado City lodge No. 76, A. F. and A. M., and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, division branch No. 385.

The funeral services will be Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Church of the Good Shepherd, and will be under the auspices of the local lodge of Masons. Interment will be at Fairview cemetery.

HUSBAND THROWS FLOUR: MUST EXPLAIN IN COURT

Whether it is disturbance of the peace or just plain deviltry for a man to get drunk and scatter a sack of flour through the house will be decided in Justice Irvin's court at a near date, when the case of Mrs. Sadie Carson against her husband, Oliver Carson, who is charged with disturbance, will be tried. The offense is alleged to have occurred last Thursday. The case was taken to Justice Irvin's court on a change of venue from Justice Russell.

REPORT CARELESS SHOOTING

Constable Kimsey is investigating a case of alleged reckless shooting reported by Harry Dennis and R. J. McParland, surveyors, working in the Ramona addition in the northeastern part of the town. They say that several times this week they have heard shooting and the singing of bullets uncomfortably near their heads. It is believed by the authorities that the shooting is done by careless boys.

Wilbur's

End of the Season Sale of Millinery

Values up to $20.00 and $35.00

Women within the influence of this store know the high character and splendid style of Wilbur hats. They know that the quality is perfectly reliable, no matter how low we make the price. In this end-of-the-season sale it is unnecessary to say we are taking a big loss in following our policy of selling all of a season's stock during the season for which it was intended. With this end in view we offer, beginning MONDAY MORNING AT 8:30, the choice of about 40 this season's fine hats, including French pattern hats and imported models, ranging in price and value up to $35.00, for the nominal price of

$5.00 Each

Waist Sale Monday

Our entire stock of popular price waists to be closed out at a nominal price Monday. About 300 in all, including lingerie garments of all kinds, dimity waists, printed mulls, swisses, etc. Every size in the lot but not of every kind. Values range $1.50, $2.00, $2.25 and $2.50.

98c Values up to $2.50

Lingerie Waists $4.50 to $20.00, now HALF PRICE

Glove Sale Monday

A special purchase of these well known gloves enables us to make this very unusual offer. The price we quote is often made, but seldom if ever in connection with this class of gloves. In this lot of over 50 dozen are all the popular colors in a complete range of sizes, and being new and fresh the kid is unusually soft and smooth. At the regular price, $1.50, we know of no better goods on the market. At our special price, 98c a pair, wise buyers will secure a season's supply during this sale. During sale day, patrons are not limited as to the number of pairs that may be purchased, but are requested not to ask us to fit more than one pair until after the rush. Guarantee extends only through the fitting.

98c For regular $1.50 Values

$25.00, $30.00, $35.00, $40.00 and $45.00 Linen Suits and Lingerie Dresses Monday Only

We have left some 25 or 30 summer dresses and linen suits that will be closed out Monday for less than the price of an ordinary skirt or separate coat. The suits are in white, natural or colors in fashionable linen fabrics made up in a variety of styles. The lingerie dresses are the things ordinarily priced at 2 or 3 times this special figure. As the number is limited and the price extremely low we make this strictly a one-day sale. The price,

$9.85 Monday

Plenty of linen suits and dresses at this price but never before such values as these. Don't miss this sale if you can have the least need of this class of garments.

BIG BARBECUE THIS AFTERNOON AT ZOO

Two ball games, a band concert and a big barbecue all free are the features of the entertainment prepared for the inhabitants of the Pikes Peak region today by Owner J. J. Coughlin of the Zoo. Admission to the grounds will be free all day, and it is expected that this fact, and the knowledge of the big feed which is coming to them, will draw thousands of people to the "White City" of Colorado Springs. To enumerate the amount of beef, mutton and pork which has been slaughtered especially for this occasion, would be to tax the imagination, but there will be enough for everybody.

In charge of the entire cooking arrangements is M. Lapert, chef at the Antlers hotel, and he will spend his entire time in supervising the preparation of the food.

REV. FRANKLIN COMPLETES INVESTIGATIONS IN CONGO

The Rev. J. H. Franklin, who left here in March for the Congo region in Africa, has practically completed his labors in investigating the conditions of the missions there, and will return to this city in November, according to letters received here by C. E. Emery.

In number of missions visited and time consumed, he and his companions made a record trip through the territory and states that he had a harder time keeping warm at night than he did keeping cool in the daytime, since this is the cool season of the year there.

WOMAN'S STUDY CLUB

The Woman's Study club of Colorado City spent the afternoon last Friday in the home of Mrs. L. A. Miller, 1912 Colorado avenue. Mrs. Rebecca Toof Sherwood entertained those present with a study of Lady Macbeth. Her presentation of the murder and sleep-walking scenes were especially fine.

After the reading, Mrs. M. T. Burwell, president of the club, on behalf of the members, presented Mrs. Sherwood with some water color views of this region as a token of their appreciation of her service to them. A social hour followed, during which the entertainment committee served refreshments. The house was decorated with masses of early autumn flowers.

Feet So Sore — Couldn't Walk Down Stairs

TIZ Cured Her Quick.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

MUCH INTEREST IN CONTEST

Expected That Many Rare and Artistic Views Will Be Turned in by Kodakers.

As a result of the prizes, aggregating $200 offered by the Chamber of Commerce and other interests for the best new photographs of the Pikes Peak region taken this summer by nonresidents, kodakers have been more than ordinarily busy during the season, and it is expected that many artistic and striking views will be submitted in the various contests.

The contest was inaugurated with the idea of securing for advertising purposes a number of entirely new photographs. There are in the Pikes Peak region scores of views which have never before been photographed, and it was with the thought of offering an inducement to the visitors that the contest was arranged.

Considerable interest has been taken in the contest, which does not close until November 10, and it is expected that a large number of photographs will be entered by that time.

A prize of $50 in gold has been offered by the Chamber of Commerce for the best new photograph of any scene in the Pikes Peak region, and a like amount has been offered by the Cripple Creek Trip, the Pikes Peak Cog road and the Crystal Park company for the best new photograph taken along these respective lines.

Conditions governing the contest have been printed and may be secured at the various hotels, railroad offices, kodak stores, and also at the Chamber of Commerce and the offices of the various roads.

TWINS ENTERTAIN AT A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. J. C. Soper of Ivywild gave a lawn party Friday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock, in celebration of the thirteenth birthday anniversary of her twin children, Dorothy and Donald. After games on the lawn, which was illuminated with Japanese lanterns, refreshments were served in the dining room from a table decorated with sweet peas. Afterwards, in the parlor, there was an impromptu program. Donald McPherson recited, and there were violin and piano solos by Miss Roxie Soper and Miss Onnolee Stelley.

The guests were: Elizabeth Belschner, Winifred Ross, Ellen Boyden, Gwendolyn Peifer, Onnolee Stelley, Belle Cowgill, Ruth Madden, Elizabeth Maybury, William Ross, Donald McPherson, Louis Belschner, Arthur and Raymond Mattocks, Samuel Parbee and Joseph McCuen, Jr.

MR. AND MRS. L. W. MAILLEY GO TO VENTURA, CAL.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Ward Mailley, who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Garrett for several days, coming here from Kansas City, where they were married August 14, departed yesterday for Ventura, Cal., where Mr. Mailley takes charge of the Y. M. C. A. work in that city. He is the son of the Rev. J. Mailley, formerly pastor of the First Christian church here, and a student at Colorado College in 1908-1909. While at college he was the leader of the Glee club and active in student movements.

His brother, Charles Mailley, of Annapolis, Md., has been a guest at the Antlers hotel for several days.

In buying a cough medicine, don't be afraid to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it, and relief is sure to follow. Especially recommended for coughs, colds and whooping cough. Sold by all dealers.

The Wonderful

Cave of the Winds

Manitou, Colorado

AND IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND YEARS TO CREATE IT.

The Cave is spoken of in Scientific Publications as "The Geological Miracle of Colorado"

The interior is not wet, nor dirty, nor rough to the feet, nor in any sense dangerous, and as for "Darkness," that is completely eaten up by the hundreds of electric lights.

The Alabaster Flowers and other beautiful crystals are, by a Natural Law formed by Nature only in the DARK. They never exist where daylight is encountered.

In many rooms this formation is only two feet or three feet from your face, and at that distance the beam of the powerful "Electric Search Light," blazing at your side, creates to your delighted senses

CONCERT NETS $600; IRVINE THANKS ALL

The testimonial band concert in honor of Harry T Irvine, director of the Colorado Midland band, netted approximately $600, according to reports turned in to Harry P Robison, secretary of the band This money will be turned over to Mr Irvine at once

Yesterday Mr Irvine, who is suffering with partial paralysis, gave out the first public statement he has made since being stricken with his illness. This was a word of thanks, and, because of his weakness, was necessarily short. It is as follows

"My boys and my friends have been kind to me I have tried to be the friend of Colorado Springs in my band work I don't know whether I can be such a friend next year or not, but I want to thank my friends for their appreciation of what I have tried to do in the past"

He was greatly moved when he was told of the testimonial, and tears rolled down his face when he was informed of its outcome

The members of the band who took part in the testimonial yesterday issued the following letter to the public:

"It is with the deepest feeling, such as we tried to put into our music in the concert in honor of Mr. Irvine, that the Colorado Midland band desires to express its appreciation of the assistance rendered by the public at large, and by certain individuals, in the success achieved in the concert

"First, we wish to thank Mr H O. Wheeler, our acting director, for his enthusiastic work in arranging the program. Then we wish to thank the trio, Mrs. E. E. Taliaferro, Mr. Vernon G. Clark and Mr. Henry Howard Brown, for their aid to us, and we appreciate deeply the kindness of leading orchestra players of the city, who volunteered their services to assist in making the concert a success.

"As for the thousands of friends who turned out to hear the concert, and to lend their support, words are inexpressive in a matter of this kind. We can but say we feel deeply grateful. Thanking you all, in the name of Harry Irvine, and in our own behalf, we beg the privilege of remaining.

"Yours for Colorado Springs

COUNCIL MAY CONSIDER WOODEN BLOCK PAVING

Wooden blocks, the nearest approach to "noiseless" street paving yet known, may be given consideration at the meeting of the City Council on Wednesday when the Mayor and commissioners propose to pass on first reading a paving district ordinance.

While it is known that Sarco has a general call for popularity so far as the selection of a paving material has been discussed and investigated the question of wooden blocks is also to be given consideration.

Commissioner Lasto examined a number of streets paved with wooden blocks on his last trip to St Louis and finds that they are practically noiseless. They also make a smooth and uniform street. The blocks are made waterproof by a generous treatment of creosote 16 pounds of the chemical being used in preparing a cubic foot of wood. Other cities that have put in wooden paving find that it is extremely durable

NEW STATION OPENED

D. & R. G. and Western Pacific Trains Now Using Own Magnificent Depot at Salt Lake City.

According to a telegram received by Local Passenger Agent Cundey, last night, the Denver and Rio Grande railroad yesterday started running its trains in and out of its magnificent station at Salt Lake. With the official opening of the Western Pacific, the Denver and Rio Grande's new connection with San Francisco, tomorrow, the trains on that road will also begin using the station.

The station, which is said to be one of the most complete in the west, was erected at a cost of approximately $850,000, and required two years to build.

News of Local Courts

F. F. Slatterly was fined $10 by Police Magistrate Starrett in police court yesterday, for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk.

Detective Tom Gavin returned from Denver last night, where he went to bring D. Jones to this city for trial on a charge of obtaining money under false pretense. Jones is alleged to have passed a number of checks for small amounts on business men of both Colorado Springs and Colorado City.

Believing that Charles White is losing his mind, owing to domestic trouble, Thomas White, his attorney, has asked that he be removed to the county jail, where he can secure better treatment. The man was arrested a few nights ago, charged with stoning a man who was escorting Mrs. White home from a dance.

L. M. Reynolds was divorced from Cora L. Reynolds in the county court yesterday, on the grounds of cruelty. The couple were married in Godland, Kan., in February, 1906.

Winifred O. Schwaebe filed suit in the county court yesterday, asking for a decree from E. F. Schwaebe, whom she married in Denver two years ago. She alleges cruelty in the complaint.

Mrs. Mary Andrews, 3007 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, has written to the police asking them to help find her son, John Andrews. According to the letter, Andrews was last heard from in Colorado Springs.

Edward Johnson, formerly employed at a local cafe, made an escape yesterday afternoon when he heard the patrol approaching. Johnson, it is said, was creating a disturbance in McRae's cafe and the police were notified. Johnson ran when he heard the wagon.

Miss G. Adamson of 220 South El Paso street, was robbed in a peculiar manner about 11 o'clock Friday night. She was standing on a street corner when a man snatched a cloak from her shoulders and made off. The matter has been reported to the police.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures any aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

AGENT BRUNO WANTS DEFICIT WIPED OUT

Agent F. J. Bruno of the Associated Charities states that calls for assistance, particularly from cases of illness, are now more than usually urgent and numerous. The finances of the society are at present in a rather bad condition, there being a deficit of nearly $1,000, and for this reason Mr. Bruno says that the usefulness of the organization as a whole will now more than ever be gauged by the generosity of the people of Colorado Springs.

The fiscal year of the society begins October 1, and Mr. Bruno feels that it would be refreshing could he start the year, not only "square" with the world, but with a surplus with which to attend to the many cases needing attention. The yearly expenditures of the society run close to the $10,000 mark, and while that is a large sum, nevertheless a few hundred subscriptions of $5 apiece would take care of the larger part of it. For this reason Agent Bruno hopes that before the winter rush starts in there may be a snug surplus from donations in the exchequer.

He particularly desires that the unrenewed subscriptions might again receive the attention of those people who last year, and in past years, have so materially aided the society.

SENORA CHAVES ELECTED

Local Woman Named as a Vice President of Universal Peace Union, Now in Session.

Dispatches from Mystic, conn., announce that Senora M. M. Chaves of Colorado Springs has been appointed by President Alfred H. Love of Philadelphia as one of the vice presidents of the Universal Peace union, which is now meeting in Peace Grove, Conn.

The dispatch remarks that although the convention is in the interests of universal peace, the union is having something very like a fight with the town of Groton, over $130 back taxes, which the town alleges is due from the union, but which the organization declines to pay on the grounds that it is a religious body and therefore exempt.

ENJOY MOONLIGHT TRIP

Two Automobiles Carry Guests of the Crystal Park Company on Skyrocket Excursion.

That the moonlight excursions instituted last night by the Crystal Park company will prove popular to home people and tourists as well, was amply evidenced last night when two cars full of excursionists made the initial trip. The moon was shining brightly and the searchlights used by the company on their huge automobiles lighted up the mountain, giving an effect at once weird and enchanting.

A feature of the trip was the fireworks provided by the company, a number of four, six and eight-round skyrockets being fired off at the end of the trip, to the delight of those who witnessed them.

DOG POISONER AGAIN

C. J. Huneke, 1220 Glen Avenue, Finds His Valuable Scotch Collie Dead on Doorstep.

The dog poisoner is again at work in Colorado Springs, a valuable Scotch collie belonging to C. J. Huneke, 1220 Glen avenue, which was killed by poison late Friday night being the latest victim. Huneke found his pet dead on the doorstep yesterday morning. The matter has not been reported to the police. Huneke has no clew to the poisoner or poisoners, except that the night his dog was killed he saw two women and a boy acting suspiciously. He saw them throw something into a neighboring yard, and believes that it was poisoned meat.

If your liver is sluggish and out of tone, and you feel dull, bilious, constipated, take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets tonight before retiring and you will feel all right in the morning. Sold by all dealers.

CONSIDERABLE STOLEN GOODS ARE RECOVERED

Within the last few days the police department has recovered stolen property valued at about $100. F. M. Cochrane now doing detective work, caused the return of two gold watches, one stolen from Mrs. Emily Escoe, 117 East Kiowa street and another taken from Miss Minnie Leach of 403 South Weber street. The latter has caused the arrest of Curley Fritz charging him with the theft. He will be tried in Justice Toombs court. John Green, alleged to have taken the watch belonging to Mrs. Escoe, has been released at her request.

A gold watch the property of Charles D. Lane, a switchman employed by the Santa Fe, was found in a Denver pawnshop, and returned to its owner.

Miss Amy Rush, an operator in the Postal Telegraph company's office, has reported to the police the loss of a purse containing $10. She believes it was stolen from her on an Pikes Peak ...

GARBAGE INVESTIGATION RESULTS IN COMPROMISE

As a result of the city's threat to cancel its contract with the El Paso Utilization company for the removal of garbage, on the ground that the work was not being done in a satisfactory manner, a conference between city officials and the company's officers resulted in the decision that both sides are to blame. The company agrees to be more careful in its work, and the city, through the health department, will issue an order that general rubbish shall not be placed in garbage cans.

T. G. BRINKER BREAKS LEG

Tom G. Brinker of Las Animas, who has been spending the summer in Colorado Springs with an uncle, W. T. Christopher, was kicked by a horse at Sedalia yesterday, necessitating a broken leg. Details of the accident had not been received here last night. Brinker and two friends had ridden to Sedalia on motorcycles to spend the day.

UNSAFE BRIDGE MAKES OTHER ROUTE DESIRABLE

Leonard E. Curtis, president of the Automobile club of Colorado Springs, has sent an open letter to The Gazette, which will be of interest to automobile parties going to Denver over a new road that is soon to be opened. The letter is dated yesterday, and is as follows.

Editor the Colorado Springs Gazette, City.

Dear Sir—On going over the proposed new road to Denver yesterday in regard to which I wrote you a short time since I found that a bridge two or three miles below the county line road, on the road to Greenland, had been undermined and rendered unsafe by a recent cloudburst. We got around it by going through a wire gate on the west side of the road about a quarter of a mile south of the bridge crossing the creek and keeping north to another gate where we found a good road running down through the fields to Greenland.

The bridge will be repaired in a few days, but I should advise those who wish to go to Denver by that route to turn off from the north road just below the cemetery about half a mile above Monument and take the northeast road, which crosses the county line road by a white school house. This road is about 1½ miles longer to Greenland, but was in very good condition the last time I went over it.

Yours very truly,
LEONARD E. CURTIS,
President.

The Duc de Montpensier, brother of the Duc d'Orleans, and next to him the heir to anything that may be coming in France in the way of a monarchy, who witnessed a murder in the streets of New York recently that had all the cold-bloodedness of an Apache assassination after dark in Paris. The duc and a detective or two were about to start in on a tour of the town after dark. Suddenly right at the corner of the street where they stood for a moment, one man shot another. The man shot staggered and fell dead right at the duke's feet. The man who shot him keeled over a few feet away mortally wounded. "Wonderful," said the duke. "When one a man wishes to see you him the sight produce. Wonderful. Very much indeed a la Apache."

The Commercial Possibilities of the Flying Machine

By Waldemar Kaempffert

LET it not be supposed that the flying machines in which Paulhan, Curtiss, Hamilton and Farman risk their neck for the sum of $5,000 a week are the machines in which you and I will some day serenely take passage for a tour through the atmosphere, nor let it be supposed that the commercial flyer of the future will be simply a enlarged Wright biplane or a Bleriot monoplane. The ugly 100-pound affair that fathered the 21-pound safety bicycle was more like its graceful offspring than the present flying machine is like the aeroplane that will skim the air 10 or 20 years hence. Above all things flying must be safe—safer than it is now. Although the dangers of a sport will inevitably attract to it adventurous spirits a really commercial machine must satisfy the requirements of the highly nervous man or woman to whom sailing a catboat seems a suicidal pastime.

The early days of the bicycle and the automobile industries offer a close parallel to the present position of the aeroplane industry. The pioneers having shown the way, the machine immediately became an instrument of sport. Speed was the thing first desired, and the speed of anything that moves can best be demonstrated in a competition. Bicycle and automobile races became and still are to some extent, the manufacturer's opportunity of testing and demonstrating the quality of his machines. Long before the manufacture of either touring bicycles or touring automobiles assumed their present proportions, the production of the racing machine was all important. The flying machine is now in this stage. Races and endurance tests will be the battles from which will emerge the flying machine of the future—the commercial machine capable of sustained flights, many hours in duration, at speeds of 80 and 100 miles an hour. The races will give birth to the touring-flyer, just as the touring car of today was evolved from the racing car of five years ago.

Incredible as it may seem, in less than a year from the date when Bleriot flew over the English channel, a feat which set France aeroplane mad, the actual sales of flying machines outnumber the actual sales of automobiles in the first year of their commercial development. Here are a few actual figures of flying machine sales made by the more prominent manufacturers since July 25, 1909.

Santos Dumont, 100; machines Bleriot, 30; Farman, 150; Clemenceau, 90; Wright, 90; Voisin, 110; Antoinette, 170.

All these machines are not in actual flight. It is safe to say that over half of them have been built to take the place of wrecked and deteriorated flyers.

Even now flying machines sell at prices that compare favorably with those charged for automobiles. Santos-Dumont charges only $1,000 for his machine, the smallest and lightest made. Bleriot's price for one of his monoplanes is $2,500; Levavasseur receives for the Antoinette machine, in which Latham has accomplished such wonders, from $4,000 to $5,000, depending on the size. The Wrights and Curtiss sell biplanes for $5,000.

A flying Frenchman clamors for his Bleriot or Farman as impatiently as an automobiling American millionaire for his high-powered car ordered months in advance. The one is no more inclined to bide his time than the other. Hence agents have sprung up in Paris who order machines from Bleriot or Voisin on speculation, and receive as much as $600 to $1,000 above the factory price for immediate delivery. In Paris at least such signs as "Bouvard et Pecuchet, Agents pour Monoplanes Antoinette" can be seen even now—the harbinger of a great industry of the future and of a flying machine quarter of Paris.

Flight Swifter Than any Storm.

Compared with the flying-machine of the future, the automobile would seem as tame and dull as a buggy drawn by a weary nag on a dusty country road. Confined to no road in particular, unhampered by speed restrictions, the speed maniac can drink his fill in the high-powered monoplane. Even the most leisurely of the touring machines will travel at speeds that only a racing automobile now attains, while the air racer will flit over us, a mere blur to the eye and a buzz to the ear. In an hour or two a whole state will be traversed; in a day half a continent. An air tourist, a few years hence, will breakfast in New York and sup the same evening in Chicago. His air-charts, the equivalent of our present road automobile maps, will be an atlas, a book in which the air routes of a whole continent are laid down. Swifter than any storm will be his flight. If the black, whirling maelstrom of a cyclone looms up before him he can make a detour or even outspeed it for the velocity of his machine will be greater than that of the fiercest of howling, wintry blasts. At a gale which now drives every aviator timorously to cover, he will snap a contemptuous finger, plunge through it in a breathless dash and emerge again in the sunshine, as indifferent to his experience as a locomotive engineer after running through a shower.

The aspect of the heavens will be wonderfully changed when the pleasure plane of the air has arrived. Black specks will dot the blue sky, more like birds than machines—specks that the practiced eye will recognize as impetuous and daring high flyers. Lower down the less reckless will perform their evolutions, and the whir of their motors will be as the droning of bees, so numerous will they be.

There are indications enough at the present time that the aeroplane is destined to outdo the automobile as a vehicle of sport. There are hardly enough men to serve as teachers for aspiring aviators of wealth. To meet the popular demand schools have sprung up in France to teach the art of the bird.

At Issy-les-Moulineaux, Buc, Etampes, Juvisy, Chalons, and Pau rival schools may be found where the handling of monoplanes and biplanes is taught. The school at Chalons is the most popular, sometimes as many as 15 machines may be seen there at one time—more than at any meet. All told there are no less than 500 pilots in France at the present time. At its last meeting the Aero club of France announced that no less than 151 men had qualified as pilots.

The Commercial Possibilities.

All this deals with the sport. Has the aeroplane no commercial future? Shall we see flocks of gigantic artificial birds freighted with heavy cargoes, darkening the sky as they wing their way across the Atlantic or the continent? Will traveling by steamship and railway car give way to the aeroplane?

He would be a rash man indeed, who would limit the possibilities of a machine that has come into being only yesterday, as it were. Yet the most sanguine aeronautic engineer would not venture to predict the supplanting of the freight train or the tramp steamer by the aeroplane. For many, many years to come the flying-machine will remain what it is now—a vehicle of sport and war only. Perhaps it may never be anything more. Why? Because it can not be made big enough. It may be doubted if the aeroplane will ever exceed its present dimensions greatly. Its carrying capacity depends on its spread of plane. To increase the load means so important an increase in spread that an unmanageable area of supporting surface would be necessary. In order to secure the necessary strength to withhold this increased area, an increased weight per square yard is entailed. Hence, it is unlikely that aeroplanes carrying many passengers will be built in our time. Not so very long ago Mr. Orville Wright expressed the opinion that aeroplanes "will never take the place of trains or steamships for the carrying of passengers. My brother and I have never figured on building large passenger-carrying machines. Our idea has been to get one that would carry two, three or five passengers, but this will be the limit of our endeavors."

Mail and Express by Aeroplane.

The sizes of aeroplanes for two men are now bordering on the unmanageable. In the future, it may be necessary to put the pilot and engineer and the motor on one plane, and the passengers on another, without power, the two plans being coupled together somewhat after the manner of a locomotive and its tender but more rigidly. Such a train of aeroplanes might carry a considerable load at high speed, but never as economically as a railway freight train.

The late Professor Samuel P. Langley discovered in the course of his classic experiments that the higher the speed at which a plane travels through the air the less is the supporting surface required. Hence, there is a chance that a machine may be constructed in the future which, taking advantage of this law, will be provided with a supporting surface adjustable in area, so that it can start with a large surface and fold up its planes when traveling at full speed. In such a machine the supporting surface would be ultimately reduced until it becomes a thin edge. We would have an aeroplane propelled by great power, supported largely by the pressure against its body, its wings reduced to mere fins, serving to guide its motion. So powerful would the motor necessarily be that it would drive the machine at a speed of over 100 miles an hour, so that the machine would be entirely independent of ordinary winds.

If it comes at all, the freight carrying aeroplane of the future will be but lightly taxed at first. One of its first commercial tasks will be the carrying of small, light packages at great speed for long distances when speed of transportation is essential and cost of transport of minor importance. We have special delivery stamps now which insure the rapid delivery of mail matter. Some day we may purchase stamps embellished with an engraving of a flying machine, stamps which when affixed to letters will insure their transmission by aeroplanes at high speed. The aerial branch of the postal service will find its counterpart in the aerial express company, whose business it will be to carry money and other valuables at the rate of 60 or 100 miles an hour.

The Outlook for the Airship.

As a future commercial possibility, the airship is far more promising than the aeroplane. To the size of the airship there is no limit. Indeed the larger it can be built the more economically can it be driven, when we measure economy by ratio of carrying power to cost of operation. Just how large an airship can be constructed is a question of constructive engineering. In considering that question the late Professor Simon Newcomb pointed out that economy is gained only when the dimensions of an airship are so increased that it will carry more than an ocean steamer or a railroad train. To attain that end he estimated that it would be necessary to build an airship at least half a mile in length and six hundred feet in diameter. Such an airship might carry a cargo of ten thousand tons or fifteen thousand passenger.

Because the construction of so huge a craft is not an utter engineering absurdity, it is possible that our grandchildren will cleave the air in future aerial leviathans. We recently witnessed something like this when Count von Zeppelin's passenger-carrying airship made a voyage that excited the admiration of the world, even though the vessel was wrecked in a storm. Some fourteen passengers were transported on that remarkable trip for whom adequate seating and dining accommodations were provided. But the cost of operating such a giant of the air is enormous. Merely to sustain the cargo in the air at the height of a mile, more than 40,000 cubic feet of hydrogen, costing nearly $200 are required, without considering the cost of fuel for the motors.

Money Will Decide.

After all is said, money will decide the question of the commercial possibilities of flying-machines and airships. How much does it cost to build? How much does it cost to maintain? How much does it cost to operate? Not until these questions are answered satisfactorily can we tell whether or not the aeroplane will ever be anything more than a racing machine for gilded youth and the dirigible an air-yacht for bankers too old for the more perilous aeroplane.

TOO MUCH FOR THE BIRD

From the Detroit News-Tribune.

A trained ostrich recently disconcerted its exhibitor at a music hall by continually endeavoring to break away from all restraint and to climb over the footlights into the orchestra. The widely advertised act came to a sudden end when the professor emerged from behind the curtain and apologized for the actions of his pet in about these words:

Ladies and gentlemen—He hain't very sorry to disappoint you this evening. We are compelled to cease our engagement until the management engages a new horchestra. The bird at present employed ate up the leader on top of his head, and my friend takes it for a hoax.

ONLY A GOVERNOR

From the National Monthly.

Governor Gilchrist of Florida, who was one of the many governors accompanying President Taft on his recent trip down the Mississippi, has discovered a new definition which he will endeavor to have placed in all of the standard dictionaries. Here it is: Governor. A small potato.

"At Cape Girardeau I got off the St. Paul expecting to accompany President Taft to the state normal school," he said. "A long line of automobiles was drawn up in the main street and I expected to ride in one of them.

"'Guess you can't hold my coat,' a member of the local reception committee.

"'Why?' I asked.

"'Well,' he replied, 'you're only a governor. These machines are for the President, the diplomats and the newspaper men.'

"We walked."

WOMEN GROW TALLER NOW

Ohio State Journal.

The contention of a writer in Health and Strength that with woman's progress toward equal rights her physical strength is also asserting itself, has caused much controversy in European journals. The average height of England's girls, says a writer in Figaro, "was five feet three inches in 1895, and today it is five feet five inches. This would be pleasanter news to me if it were not also a fact that the sterner sex is growing shorter." Marcel Prevost, deploring the fact that women are taller and says: "Be on your guard, modern man! Your position was never in greater danger than now. Check the retrogression or stop the advance of women while yet you are the larger and stronger. Another inch and you will have become the weaker sex."

INSURGENCY'S GROWING STRENGTH.

AND now California has shown that its Republicanism is progressive.

The latest returns from Tuesday's Republican primaries indicate an overwhelming victory for the "insurgents" all down the line. Aided by a whirlwind campaign on the part of Gifford Pinchot, Hiram W. Johnson, progressive candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, defeated his "regular" opponent by a plurality of approximately 30,000, and apparently he carried the entire state ticket with him, although in some of the contests the vote is close. Progressive candidates were nominated for Congress in the Second and Seventh Districts, and on the so-called advisory vote for United States Senator—by which the electors simply indicate their preference for the guidance of the Legislature—the Progressive candidate, John D. Works, appears to have a substantial plurality. It is claimed, however, that the "regular" candidate leads in 53 of the 100 districts, which, if true, would impose a quasi-legal obligation upon the Republican members of the Legislature to vote for him.

Four states now—four great states—have declared themselves in favor of a new Republicanism, a Republicanism that stands for popular rights. In Indiana, where the power of Beveridge prevented an indorsement of Taft and the tariff, the step forward has not been long, but in Kansas, Iowa and California the party has taken a tremendous stride. It was not in the least surprising that in the Sunflower State, where radicalism of every kind has always found a fruitful breeding place, the overthrow of the standpatters should have been decisive and almost complete. Nor was there any occasion for surprise that Iowa Republicans, with Cummins and Dolliver to lead the way, should have taken an aggressive stand against reactionism, even to the extent of repudiating, practically in toto, the Taft Administration. But it could not have been anticipated with any degree of confidence that California—a consistently conservative Commonwealth, comparatively speaking—would line up so definitely and aggressively with the Progressives.

GROWTH OF MOVEMENT REMARKABLE.

We confess that the display of insurgent strength in these last few weeks throughout the Middle West, with its hardly less resonant echo on the Pacific coast, and the unmistakable signs of a similar spirit of revolt in the more slowly moving East, is rather more than we had hoped for; not, however, because we had not the fullest faith in the righteousness of insurgency or questioned its inherent vitality, but because we doubted whether in so short a time the country at large would come to comprehend its momentous import.

But it is becoming daily more apparent that the whole nation, in the few months since insurgency began to make itself felt in Congress, has awakened to the fact that the fight against the Cannon system of gag rule, the war on Ballinger, the repudiation of the Aldrich-made tariff law, the struggle for a railroad bill that would give the Government real power over the railroads, were all battles in behalf of the people; that they did not merely represent the opposition of a few malcontents to the regular party leaders, but voiced a national demand that the Government should be administered in the interest of the whole people.

That demand, when the insurgents, with prophetic insight, began their unequal battle, was vague, unformed—merely a passive spirit of discontent. Today it is a powerful, unified, national movement, specific in its aims and expressive of the fundamental principle that government in the United States shall be of the people, by the people and for the people.

A CHANCE TO DO GOOD.

ATTENTION is called in another column to the urgent need of the Associated Charities for immediate financial assistance. Every year the organization runs badly in debt during the months between May and October, perhaps because in warm weather the needs of the poor are more easily forgotten than in the winter time, and at present its books show a deficit of close to $1,000. This condition naturally hampers its work, and assistance is needed particularly at this time, not so much for the sake of avoiding a larger indebtedness, as to permit the organization to respond to the many calls for assistance it is now receiving.

The work of the Associated Charities commends itself to all, and it is sincerely to be hoped that its present appeal for assistance will bring forth a generous response on the part not only of those who have assisted the society in the past, but of all others interested in its praiseworthy labors in behalf of the poor and unfortunate.

ENOUGH!

THE really regrettable feature of the farce now being staged at the State Capitol under the title of the Extra Session is not that the leading actor is playing behind the wings, not that the gentleman who staged the performance is being made a fool of by the members of the company, not that the production is costing the people, for whose benefit it was arranged, a thousand or so dollars a day, but that the State is being disgraced by the shamelessness of the exhibition.

It is as plain as day that none of the reform legislation demanded by the Governor will be enacted, unless so doctored as to be worthless, and every additional day that the Legislature remains in session means new outrage to the already sorely offended dignity of the State. Often enough in the past has Colorado, by its rotten politics, attracted the finger of scorn and derision. Let us have an end of this new travesty on representative government done in the name of the people.

Were there the remotest possibility that any substantial reform would be accomplished at the present session, it would be different. But there isn't.

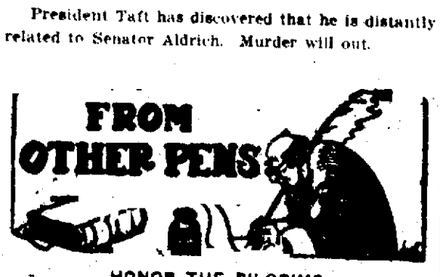

It is reported that sharks are rapidly increasing in Florida waters. Can that have reference to visitors from Wall Street?

Poor Lo is certainly catching on rapidly to the ways of civilization. One Indian who was associated with McMurray, the land agent, deposited $75,000 in a Texas bank shortly after the attorney received a $750,000 fee, and on the witness stand averred blandly that he had forgotten where it came from.

HONOR THE PILGRIMS.

From the Syracuse Herald.

The Pilgrims deserve that monument for landing on these shores three hundred years ago. They had to contend with starvation, scalping, lack of gas ranges, poor telephone service and many other hardships. But among them were strong men, whose slogan was: "Stick around; there may be something doing."

OUR FREEDOM IS SAFE.

From the Monticello (Ia.) Times.

The glorious Independence day was celebrated with enthusiasm in every town, village and hamlet in the United States. It was well.

The 134 years which have passed since the grand and heroic men of the Continental congress voted in the Pennsylvania state house to sever the ties with Great Britain and establish a new government, shows how wisely and well they builded for the liberty, happiness and prosperity of the people. * * *

The fires of liberty, burning on the altars of American patriotism, near the beacon lights which guided the people of other lands in their struggle lessen the despotism which they were enduring.

So glorious was the peoples achievement in this land of liberty that there has not been a single kingdom or empire established since the Declaration of Independence received the signature of John Hancock. * * *

If the members of the Continental congress had been unequal to the emergency of the hour in 1776, the cause of liberty would have been lost and all the world would have been shrouded in monarchial darkness. They passed the declaration and made us free and as a result we are rich, prosperous and happy. They did noble work. Let us celebrate, let the cannon boom, the drum beat, the flag wave. Let there be rejoicing and celebrating through all the land.

Sound the loud timbrils from Mountain to sea,
Jehovah has triumphed, the
People are free.

PUNISHMENT SWIFT AND CONDIGN.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Everyone will hope that the punishment of the miserable miscreant who attempted the life of Mayor Gaynor may be swift and condign, and it is gratifying to know that this is likely, because he will be tried under the laws and process of a state which has won an honorable reputation for the expedition and efficiency with which its criminal law is administered. "Jersey justice" has come to be a synonym for a justice which is at once direct, impartial and unswerving, and which goes straight to its end after the manner of the criminal courts of England with little or no regard for confusing and obstructive technicalities. This is more than can truthfully be said of New York, whose procedure affords such facilities for delay that an indicted or convicted person is able to postpone the infliction of his punishment almost as long as he has money left wherewith to pay lawyers' fees, and it is a matter for congratulation that the crime in mind was committed on the Jersey shore.

Of course, the charge on which Gallagher is to be indicted must await the issue of the injuries which he inflicted. Happily the present probabilities favor Mayor Gaynor's recovery and should these be realized the indictment will be for assault with intent to kill. In the contrary event the offense to which he will have to answer will be that of murder in the first degree for which in New Jersey, as mostly elsewhere, the penalty is death. It is not being vindictive to express the hope that should this latter be the charge embodied in the indictment a verdict of guilty may be quickly found and a sentence to capital punishment as quickly follow. Already, as always in such cases, it is being said that the would-be assassin is irresponsible, that his mind had become unbalanced with brooding over his fancied wrongs, that he could not control his actions or did not fully understand what he was doing and the enormity of the offense which he was committing. It is difficult to listen with patience to that kind of talk.

"MOSQUITOES CLOSE A CHURCH."

From the New York Globe.

Fair insect! that, with threadlike legs spread out,
And blood-extracting bill and filmy wing,
Dost murmur, as thou slowly sailst about,
In pitiless ears full many a plaintive song.

Thou art a wayward being: well—come near
And pour thy tale of sorrow in my ear.

Mr. Bryant, to a Mosquito.

The American mosquito of the middle third of the nineteenth century must have been of rather more lovable disposition than his present-day descendants. Mr. Bryant's gentle chiding, his patient listening to this insect's complaint about rouge and "china bloom" which then so much hampered its prospecting on Manhattan island (how changed things are today!), his kindly advice that they seek plump aldermen rather than "gaunt poets"—indeed the whole tenor of this entomological poem is quite out of joint with our modern attitude toward the Culicidae (to be scientific).

None of our modern poets would dare to address the mosquito, even in playful irony, as "fair insect." Such a phrase seems as grotesquely facetious as would "beautiful typhoid germ" or "ravishing tubercle bacillus." We use a great many unnecessary adjectives today, for qualifying the mosquito, but none of them are synonyms for "fair." Since the discovery of its lethal powers, joking with it has ceased.

This is merely by the way, however. What we started to call attention to was the fact that a congregation at Hilton Gt is probably unnecessary to add N. J. has been forced to close its church for the summer because of the ravenous hordes of mosquitoes that attack the worshipers. The Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald's sermons were so overpunctuated with slaps (and sole remarks) that it was felt expedient by all hands to close the church until frost, in the interest of true religion.

This was the excuse given. But what about screens? For much less than the cost of one stained glass window the congregation could render its meetings mosquitoless and nonmalarious. In view of this obvious fact, the sudden clapping on of the lid throws suspicion, to put it mildly, upon Hilton's passion for church attendance in hot weather. The mosquito has enough guilt on his shoulders already without "ringing him in" to account for waning church attendance.

My cow's gone dry, my hens won't lay, my horse has got the croup, the hot winds spoiled my budding hay, and I am in the soup. And while my life is sad and sore, and earthly joys are few, I'll write a note to Theodore, he'll tell me what to do. I wasn't home when Fortune called, my feet had strayed afar; I fear that I am going bald, and I have got catarrh. The wolf is howling at my door, I've naught to smoke or chew; but I shall write to Theodore, he'll tell me what to do. My Sunday suit is old and sere, I'm wearing last year's lids; my aunt is coming for a year, to visit, with her kids. They will not trust me at the store, and I am feeling blue, so I shall write to Theodore—he'll tell me what to do. When we are weary and distraught, from worldly strife and care, and we're deified the balm we sought, and given black despair, ah, then, my friends, there is one chore devolves on me and you: we'll simply write to Theodore, he'll tell us what to do.

The Daily Chit-Chat

In a little commentary on the characteristics of the French people I was much interested by this paragraph:

"The advent of a baby into a French family means the opening of a bank account. If its mother and father are humble people, such as those who do concierge work in apartment buildings, then they give to this baby whatever they gain from blacking the shoes and whatever tips they get from opening the doors late at night. No sacrifice is too great to make for a child."

Isn't that a suggestion for American parents?

I do not mean so much the opening of a bank account at the child's birth. I suppose all parents know that is what ought to be done whether they do it or not. What I mean is the method of saving—the putting aside of the proceeds from some definite source for the child's benefit.

Of course, as a rule, it wouldn't be from blacking shoes.

In one family that I know of, a little calf born the same day as the baby girl was straightway christened Louisa May's cow, and was always treated as such, not only in name, but in fact. A strict account was kept of the milk sold from that cow, and all the money so brought in, and the money made later by the sale of her calves, was put into the bank in Louisa May's name.

Consequently, when Louisa May grew up and found she had a talent for the violin, with that nucleus in the bank, the course at the country's best music school was not the impossibility that it might otherwise have been.

In a farmer's family the proceeds from a certain 10-acre potato field, set aside from his birth, sent the son of the family to Harvard.

Of course, the man who has a regular salary does not have like opportunities for saving. But what's to prevent any man, from the day the little foreigner makes his appearance in the home, from putting aside all the pennies that pass through his hands?

Of course, the child's education is going to cost just so much money, no matter whether it be saved from some particular source or simply put aside in a lump sum each year.

I'm not trying to show that it wouldn't. All that I want to show is that there's a much more interesting way.

Also one that you will feel much less.

For if you come to regard any part of your income as not belonging to you to spend, you will straightway find that you do not count upon it, and hence do not find it so hard to put it away.

In my giving and saving I have found that out. Recently I have gotten into the habit of thinking of my earnings, not as the whole amount, but as the whole amount less the sum I have promised myself to put aside for charity and to save, and I find that makes both the giving and saving easier.

RUTH CAMERON.

GOOD EVIL

Something good for some one done, makes you and him one a brotherhood of two.
Be good to self, better to the wrecked stranger, and best of all to your fallen enemy.
The "ill wind" that blows not the good is only thought so because not understood.
The good man will love an enemy, but a bad man will loot his friend.
Goodness shown an enemy for the wrong he has done to you makes him look up to you—makes him feel so little.
The pure heart and the perfect purpose bless man's efforts and show him his God, who gives him his good.
Motive is the motor that runs the mill by which each one grinds out his good or ill.
Be good and become glad; attempt to tell others how to become good and you will be sad.
Cause and effect is the law, not luck; as the seed so the harvest; sow good or evil and it's heaven or hell, here and now.
If you judge as evil the actions of another, through the judging comes evil to you.
Cution cannot prevent every slip, for most men fall; no mortal yet has lived who did not err at all.
Be unswerving, be deserving; cease your whimperings and complainings; God is good and fate is fair.
A man with evil in his heart, the worse becomes the more he apes the goodness of the saint.
Throw with an evil sling a stone at another, and it will rebound against your own glass house.
The evil man does visits its own punishment upon the evildoer; evil is the opposite of real life; evil is "live" spelled backwards.
It is said to be good piety to resign one's self to the trials of life; the desire to be good is a good sign of piety.

FEAR.

Fear is a fanciful terror in our hearts that steals away accomplishments.
Fear is conquered not by fleeing, but by facing and fighting.
Doubt doubles your fears and from fear spring all your sufferings; a doubter does from self-destruction.
Fear rashly runs away from imagined evil, thereby losing sight of the good; fear follows a perverted foresight.
The fear fever is fatal and makes men fall where foes could not conquer.
Excuse a fault and you tell how weak you are; believe you are weak and you invite your fears to abide with you, leaving hope with a home.
Fear affects the nerve of man and makes him knuckle down to needless knavery; fate does not make fear and you only blame yourself.
Cause and effect is a primal law and as we think we speak, also he who feeds on worry and fear makes perfect his indigestion.

ACCOUNTING OF STOCK.

Come here, little girl, come here!
Your daddy has serious fears
That no one took care, when combing your hair
To see what became of your ears.
Why, bless me! I shouldn't have said
There was one on each side of your head!
But perhaps it is done that way for the fun
Of hearing two secrets as easy as one!

Come here, little girl, come here!
Your daddy is anxious to see
If that nose is in place on the front of your face
Just where it's intended to be.
Dear, dear, it's too found at the end!
But that'll be easy to mend—
A little girl's nose grows just where it grows,
So it'll be easy to pinch, I suppose.

Come here, little girl, come here!
Your daddy with trouble is tossed
It's ages since he has counted to see
That none of your toes have been lost.
Thank goodness! There's ten of 'em here—
There was no occasion for fear,
But every one knows a little girl's toes

And cure your poor daddy's alarm
He really can't say, from so far away,
If you've got the right number of arms.
What! No more than two? Is that right?
Let's see if they're fastened in tight.
But two isn't bad—and I'm specially glad

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. Dr. Linscott for the Personal Service Bible Study Club.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

August 21, 1910.

Jesus Nearing Jerusalem. Matt. xx: 17-34.

Golden Text—The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many. Matt. xx:28.

Verses 17-19—Did Jesus know from the beginning of his ministry that the Jews would reject and put him to death?

At what period in the life of Jesus did he begin to tell his disciples of his approaching crucifixion? (See Chap. 16:21, Mark 8:31, Luke 9:22.)

Did God in any sense cause the chief priests and the scribes to betray Jesus, or the Gentiles to scourge and crucify him?

Why did Jesus tell of his coming death confidentially, and to the twelve disciples only?

Verses 20-21—Who were the two sons of Zebedee?

What had probably inspired this mother, to make the ambitious request, that her two sons may sit, one on his right hand and the other on his left, in his kingdom?

What, if any, reason is there to believe that the two sons got their mother to make this request for them?

What was probably their idea concerning the coming kingdom of Jesus?

Can you state possible circumstances where it would be right to get others to ask for us, what we are ashamed to ask personally?

Verse 22—How may we know, or get into a condition, so as not to pray for foolish, or unprofitable things?

What does the expression signify, "to drink the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?"

Why have we a right to conclude that these two disciples, notwithstanding their unwise request, loved Jesus dearly, and were prepared to suffer with him?

Verse 23—Is suffering for Jesus as necessary now as then, or does the change in the circumstances make suffering now unnecessary? Why?

Why cannot God show partiality to any, notwithstanding his tender love to each?

Suffering is no doubt the lot of all, who would be free and faithful, but on what basis does God make promotions, or put his servants in prominent positions? (This question must be answered in writing, by members of the club.)

Verse 24—Which were the more blameable, the two for making a foolish request, of the ten for being "moved with indignation" against them?

Verses 25-29—Who is the greatest in the kingdom of God on the earth?

What are the two view points of greatness in the kingdom of God and in the world?

Can a man remain a subject in the kingdom of God, who is not anxious to serve, or, who seeks honor and plots for promotion? Why or why not?

Verses 30-34—It was Jesus' policy when on earth to miraculously heal sickness, and infirmities, but what reason is there to believe that this policy was meant to be permanent?

Suppose, instead of healing these blind men, he had given them a keener spiritual vision; which would have been the better blessing?

Your home improves it

A piece of Van Briggle Pottery that attracts you here will look ten times better in your home than it does in our stock. So much pottery of all shades in one grouping destroys the individuality of each piece. When you place one of them amongst the artistic furnishings of your home you will be pleasantly surprised at the result. The attractive surroundings will bring out the best qualities of the ware and it in turn will add to their appearance. The longer you own a piece of Van Briggle Pottery the more attached to it you become. Our selection is at its best now and we shall welcome the opportunity of showing it to you.

Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican state committee of New York state, who has just been in long and earnest consultation with President Taft at Beverly, looking toward a solution of the Republican situation in the state that will mean victory at the coming election. When it is recalled that Mr. Woodruff and Colonel Roosevelt have been pulling at opposite ends of the rope for some time the importance of the conference, that may force a climax compelling the former President to run for governor, is better comprehended. Chairman Woodruff has been much flouted of late by Colonel Roosevelt, and, as a result of the Taft conference, something may have to be taken back or diplomatically accounted for.

JOB'S AFFLICTIONS PALED.

From the Philadelphia Record.

"And it has a great future before it," she said. "I have no doubt that a century hence the members of the league will regard the woman of today as we now regard the farmer's wife of the early '40s.

"A Maine deacon of the early '40s was talking to the minister. He sniffed and whined:

"'Oh, yes, Job suffered some. I ain't denyin' that, parson. But Job never knowed what it was to have his team run off and kill his wife right in the midst of the harvest season with hired girls wantin' $2.50 a week.'"

THE WHY OF HIGH PRICES

A Jocular Explanation That Yet Contains Wisdom.

E. W. Thompson in the Boston Transcript.

Why have prices of the necessaries and ordinary comforts of human life increased greatly of late years? Many reputed explanations go the rounds. If lengthy rumination on the subject entitle one to chip in with a theory, he might begin by quoting the butler of Theophrastus Such concerning the cause of the tides. "Some says one thing, and some says another, but if I was to give my opinion I'd be different."

The deflation of good value, caused by greatly increased production of that commodity, is one quoted cause. Another is the diversion of labor from agriculture due to crowding of cities. One philosopher holds that the secularization of primary education has so corrupted public morals that people won't work as they did when religiously bred in ignorance of the three Rs. Another, in my morning paper argued that increased prices evince the truth of the proposition of Malthus to wit that population tends to increase faster than the means of subsistence, from which he optimistically concludes that everything is all right, though it is not easy to perceive his reasons for feeling thus consoled. Certain radicals see in the art collections of Mr. Pierpont Morgan et al., in their palaces and their yachts, the true cause of the excessive price of early onions. Others argue that we might all butter our pancakes regardless of cost if Mr. John Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and their skilful kind had not so vast a control of capital. An eminent Montreal thinker and essayist would lower beans and potatoes, bread and meat, by inducing the wealthy to live in the country all the year round like unto the nobility and Squierarchy of old. My dear high church pastor is sure that comestibles are withheld, or diminished in quantity proportionate to the demand, by the dispensation of an overruling beneficence, who (or which) desires that mankind should learn to mortify their appetites daily to fast weekly and to praise God steadfastly, especially for enforcing discipline. The Madame and certain other notable housekeepers her associates, censure the ineptitude and wastefulness of latter-day cooks for the scarcity of provisions. A gentleman, who consumes none but tenderest porterhouse steak and choicest loin chops, bewails the infamous wickedness of highly paid workingmen who compete in the market for these meats just as if they had a gentleman's right to pamper preferences of palate. No need to lengthen the list. If the theories be all considered thoroughly they will be found to fit into one another pretty well. They agree that necessaries are dear because the demand for them outruns the supply at previous prices.

Mr. Hill Hits the Nail.

Has not the profound thing been said; as usual, by Mr. J. J. Hill—the trouble does not come of the high price of living but of the price of high living. It is this that diverts labor from the production of ordinary necessities [illegible] labor produces [illegible] aeroplanes [illegible] books [illegible] newspaper contributions to mention only a few of the superfluities. Some have held intoxicants to be needless or even harmful including beer. At least 10 cigars and cigar[illegible] where one was extraordinary when Plautus was consul. In all [illegible] manner of superfluities [illegible] abound they employ [illegible] multitudes of [illegible] producing servants [illegible] nonproducers. All these consume necessaries and ordinary comforts as well as superfluities and luxuries. The [illegible] paying highest cash rates [illegible] out of the producers [illegible] necessaries. These have to pay ever more and more for their just share of needments, because of the continual augmentation of the demand of nonproducers. So the masses who really work for one another are deprived in two ways, their candle is burned at both ends. Luxury lessens the production of necessaries by diverting to its service much labor that should serve the masses, and luxury, to maintain its satellites, cuts into the reduced and actual production of general needments.

To hear some people talk, one might imagine that the great capitalists, and especially Mr. John Rockefeller, are the causes of the harrowing prices we have to pay for liver and bacon. Those men are about as much to blame as Tentenden Steeple for Goodwin sands. True, the big rich in so far as they be luxurious, in so far as commercial and social worship of them causes imitation of their ostentation, do help to enhance the cost of baked beans. But the degree in which they so assist is in proportion to their luxury or ostentation and not in proportion to their possession of capital. If one man owned all the capital and if he could and did handle it as productively as its present multitude of owners, no economic harm would be done. Very much the contrary—let the second be remembered. One sole capitalist would imply—and that not necessarily—only one family living luxuriously, ostentatiously, with many servants, and with much consequent diversion of labor from production of ordinary supplies. Mr. John Rockefeller's establishments are said to be modest. Many far smaller capitalists divert far more labor from useful production, since these live more luxuriously than John—the Baptist. It is the enormous increase in the number of luxurious families in the States, in Canada, in Great Britian, in every country, that has raised the unproductive demand for needments, and consequently exaggerated the price of my favorite tripe. It is the cost of high living for so many that makes poor living for so many more.

The Yearning for Luxuries

To allege that workingmen, mechanics, laborers, small clerks, farmers, etc., live substantially better now than their fathers did is to allege what is, on the whole, false. I remember when it was scarcely an exaggeration to say that "meat and drink snowed in the houses" of the working and farmer folk of this continent. The rural element of them have now better houses, better furniture, clothing, essentially worse, though less clumsily made, dearer and poorer but handsomer boots and shoes; far worse and more costly stockings, costlier and scarcer fuel, better burners and far worse prospects for their children. If they had sensibly maintained their modest social ideals if they had employed their political power to tax luxury and ostentation relentlessly if they had not let themselves as a public be robbed by tariffs and by concessions of privileges there would now be an abundance of cheap beef and the children of the carpenter and the capitalist would have equal opportunities. "Capitalist" says somebody. "But that program would prevent capitalism." Not at all. It would prevent only the waste of capital.

Relentless taxation even unto suppression of notable luxury and pomp—which at ever [illegible] to all concerned would [illegible] all labor to be employed on needments and conveniences for the majority, including the necessaries of sound pleasure and genuine art. Inasmuch as Mr. Lloyd-George has caused this truth to be clearly apprehended by multitudes he is hated, not so much by the House of Have as by the House of Waste. This is the establishment that also detests the scheme of a federal income tax in America.

An Unsettled Question.

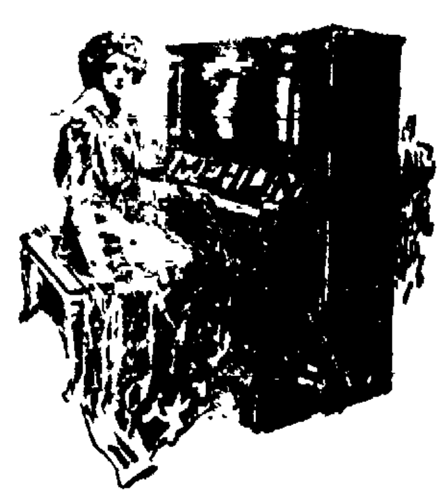

Whether it would be judicious to tax that house not out of its capital, but rigidly down to a scale of living luxurious enough for the tastes of Washington, Quincy, Lowell, Longfellow, Eliot or any of the other truly great worthies of the republic, is a large question, which one may beg leave to refrain from settling forever just now. Nor is it necessary to show immediately reasons for believing that nearly all the unrest of the better woman, her anxious diversion from pleasure in her natural tasks and duties, her clamor for the political power that might enable her to reform society reasonably, are due to the distracting, imitation provoking woman of the House of Waste. Also one may ignore the easy task of showing that in every city, village and township multitudes of children whose infant countenances promise all the talents, beauties and virtues, are being daily damned to hopelessness and hate and stupidity and vice, for lack of the public and private care that could be provided handsomely were "the cost of high living" abolished by abolition of the thing itself. This communication began by proposing to deal only with the cause of the increase of the price of pork.

The Right Hon. Henry James, Earl of Euston, heir to the dukedom of Grafton, most eminent supreme provincial master of the great priories of the Knights Templar of England and Wales, who attended the thirty-first conclave of the order in this country, recently held in Chicago. The earl's prominence is such that great throngs of his countrymen met him at his arrival in Chicago and almost took him from the escorting care of his fellow knights in the exuberance of their welcome.

French Admiral Desires Large Aerial Fleets

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Admiral De La Peysere, the French minister of marine, has become an enthusiastic convert to the possibilities of the aeroplane in naval warfare, in view of the results attained in the Paris-London flight of Leblanc, the great cross country course just completed by aviators and other recent achievements in the air.

In a statement today he expressed the wish that the French fleet should take first rank in the world in aerial navigation, as it does now in submarine feats, and proposed the establishment of flotillas of aeroplanes at the French naval bases of Cherbourg, Brest, Toulon, and Bizerta, Africa, to protect the ports and locate the mines and submarines of a possibly enemy.

"For the price of a single cruiser," said the minister, "we may have thousands of aeroplanes. They will be our scouts."

STRONG DETECTIVE IS SHOT TO DEATH

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 20.—Charles Costelli, a New York detective who was well known for his enormous strength, was murdered early today in a fight with a crowd at the landing of the Seawanhaka Yacht club's boat house.

Costelli had been acting as keeper of the boat house during the summer while he was recuperating from a bullet wound. An attempt was made to assassinate him in New York last spring while he was arresting a man who was suspected of robbery.

His assailant fled, leaving him for dead, and was not captured.

Costelli had had trouble all summer with a crowd of men, who insisted on loitering about the boat house, and a week ago he fought several of them single-handed, driving them away.

Half a dozen of them went to the boat house last night and Costelli drove them away. They returned in a few minutes, one of them carrying a shotgun. Three shots were fired, two from the detective's revolver and one from the shotgun. Costelli fell dead on the wharf.

Costelli came to America several years ago from Denmark. He said little of his past life. He prized greatly a [illegible] ring, on which was a crest of arms, and was believed to be a member of a noble family.

RAILROAD DAY PARADE WITNESSED BY 30,000

Seven Thousand Employes of Colorado Lines Participate in Denver Celebration.

DENVER, Aug. 20.—Thirty thousand persons witnessed the railroad day parade here today. Seven thousand employes of the Colorado roads, including all branches of the service, from wipers in the round houses to general passenger and freight agents and general managers were in line. The Denver and Rio Grande was the only system not represented.

The Union Pacific band from Ellis, Kan., and a platoon of police led the parade. The procession was reviewed at Fifteenth and Glenarm streets by executive officials of railroads and invited guests. Among the latter were Governor Shafroth, Mayor Speer and P. H. Morrissey, president of the American Railroad Employes and Investors association, of Chicago.

The employes were brought here by 15 special trains. About 12,000 visitors came to the city.

During the afternoon there was a big picnic at an amusement park, where Governor Shafroth, Mr. Morrissey and others delivered addresses.

ITALIAN AVIATOR DASHED TO DEATH

ROME, Aug. 20.—Lieutenant Vivaldi of the Italian army was killed this morning by a fall from his aeroplane. He had made a trip in the early morning hours from the military aviation field at Centocelle to Cittavecchia, on the Mediterranean sea 38 miles from Rome, and was returning to Rome when the acident happened. A few miles outside of Rome, for some unexplained reason the machine dashed to earth.

At the time of the accident the aeroplane was at a height of 1,000 feet and the body of Vivaldi was crushed to an unrecognizable mass.

S.S.S. NO HARMFUL MINERALS PURELY VEGETABLE

There are certain mineral medicines which will temporarily remove the outward symptoms of Contagious Blood Poison, and shut the disease up in the system for awhile, but when the treatment is left off the trouble always returns in worse form. But that is not all; the delicate membranes and tissues of the stomach and bowels are usually injured by these strong minerals, and frequently stomach trouble, chronic dyspepsia, and mercurial rheumatism are added to the destructive blood poison. S. S. S. is the only remedy that can be used with perfect safety in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison, and with the assurance that a lasting cure will result. This medicine, made entirely of non-injurious roots, herbs and barks of recognized curative and tonic value, removes every particle of the virus from the circulation, and by enriching and strengthening the blood removes every symptom permanently. S. S. S. does not hide or cover up the disease in any way, but cures it by removing it from the system. Home Treatment Book, and any medical advice free to all who write.

He Contemplates a Change

The Bill Clerk Doesn't Want to Be a Mossback

By KENNETH HARRIS.

"Of course I don't want to mention it, but I'm thinking of making a change," the bill clerk confided.

"What kind of a change do you contemplate, Johnnie?" asked the cashier. "A change in your habits or a clean collar?"

"Do I need a clean collar?" inquired the bill clerk anxiously. "This one isn't more than an hour and a half old. Say, you make me tired with your funny business I thought I'd have to go out and buy a new one."

"Some good habits wouldn't hurt you, son," suggested the cashier.

"I've got all I can stagger under now," declared the bill clerk. "If a fellow grows too good, it isn't long before he gets to be a good thing. What I was considering was a new job."

"Has somebody offered you one worth considering?" asked the cashier.

"Well, the rush hasn't begun yet," replied the bill clerk. "It's not generally known that I could be induced to resign my present position. I was thinking of making a change on general principles. What do you think about it?"

"Do you really want my advice?" said the cashier. "Would you like me to speak my mind frankly and candidly, without any reservations or concealments?"

"As long as you don't get insulting, I'd like to know what you think about it. I've got an idea I'd do better in some other place." "If it offered you a larger salary, less confining hours and a better prospect for advancement, I am inclined to agree with you my boy," said the cashier. "If not, not so much so, if any at all. The wisdom of the ages has condensed itself into the proverb, 'A rolling stone gathers no moss.'"

Mossbacks and Greenbacks.

"I don't want to be a mossback," objected the bill clerk.

"I supposed you would say that," rejoined the cashier. "It was the altogether natural thing for you to say. Everybody says it. But you want greenbacks, don't you? I take it that a comfortable accumulation of that sort is implied rather than a vegetable growth of an entirely useless character, and from that point of view the old saw is tolerably sharp in the tooth yet. To ring in another old standby, you don't want to jump out of the frying pan into the fire."

"I'll call you on that," said the bill clerk. If it's got to be one of the two things, I'll take the fire every time. If you want to roast to death slowly you can; not any for Reginald, thanks"

"After you've been in the frying pan for a while, you won't be so raw as you were," said the cashier "To that extent the frying pan is useful, you'll admit; but, leaving metaphor, a change is a very good thing if it's for the better. A change of diet is good sometimes, and so is a change of air and a change of clothes. Even small change has its uses and a change of heart benefits most people. It pays, now and then, to change your politics and your mind. Perhaps you'd better change your mind, son."

"I may," admitted the bill clerk. "I think I've been here about long enough, though."

Wasting On the Vacant Chair

"Think how we'd miss you, Johnnie," urged the cashier. "You don't get the idea that you are due to go out in the garden and eat worms. We may not show it as much as we might, but we haven't been oblivious of your bright, sunny nature and your cute little ways. A pang would shoot through many a heart in this joint at the sight of your empty chair."

"Oh, cut it out," said the bill clerk.

"Say not so," begged the cashier. "I want you to reflect before you do anything that you might afterwards regret. I want to appeal to your regard for us, that's why I speak of our affection for you. Have you thought what will happen to the concern if you should leave? Do you know that in the event of its going to smash over fifty souls would be thrown out of employment, and that innocent women and children would suffer? I myself—I don't want to be selfish or to stand in your way, but I myself have a family dependent upon me for support."

"I always have felt sorry for your family," said the bill clerk.

"Then don't talk of leaving us please," implored the cashier. "I'll tell you what you do, Johnnie, if you want a change," he continued after a moment's pause.

"What's that?" asked the bill clerk, incautiously.

"Do a little real work while you're here," answered the cashier. "If you do that I wouldn't wonder if I didn't get instruction to put something extra in your envelope."

"I wouldn't wonder if you didn't, either," said the bill clerk.

"Do a little real work to get something extra in your pay envelope."

WHY WE MAY STARVE FOR WANT OF BIRDS

The Sparrow and the Crow Are Routing the More Useful Birds Which Would Protect Vegetation Against the Inroads of Insect Life.

From the Philadelphia North American.

We are all liable to starve for lack of the birds of the air.

That is the belief of John Davey of Kent, O., who has undertaken the biggest contract and the biggest crusade which any man, of modern or ancient times, ever fastened grip upon.

The train of reasoning is as clear as the hole in a millstone: The insects are omnipotent destroyers of vegetation. Our native birds are their natural foes. The enemies of those native birds of ours the combative English sparrow and the bloodthirsty crow are waging incessant war upon them. If that war continue with no interference by man, all the native birds must speedily vanish, neither crows nor sparrows will destroy the insects, and the people thus deprived must perish for lack of the fruits of the earth.

The department of agriculture at Washington and the departments of many of the states have been doing their utmost, by means of informative literature, to prevent the population from helping the marauders starve this nation to death. Exhaustive observations have been made and published which relate to the lives of resources countless species of birds previously deemed ruinous to the crops of the farmer. Instructions in the finest detail have been circulated to enable the husbandmen to induce the beneficent birds of his latitude to make their homes on his acres.

But Mr. Davey contends that, in the present, desperate condition of bird affairs, none of these belated measures on the part of humanity is going to suffice. The only real salvation is to be sought in the destruction of bird life's arch enemies, the crow and the sparrow.

One of the things that astonished him during his travels was the discovery that the crow is protected in Kentucky. He is emphatic in his comment on this branch of earth's bird enemy, for he says:

Protecting an Enemy.

"The lawmakers of that state must have been most woefully lacking in the knowledge of the real facts concerning the habits of this omnivorous creature to pass a law for its protection. If the English sparrows are the rats of the air, those black devils are the escaped convicts of the infernal. Each crow requires about a pound of meat daily, and to obtain this in the nesting season he spends about six weeks in hunting the contents of other birds' nests. He takes both eggs and young birds.

"Crows will devour anything from the egg of a song sparrow to that of a common hen, and will follow the turkey to the woods, wait till she has laid, and as soon as she has gone carry off her egg. They will light down in the midst of a flock of chickens, play a confidence game by strutting around as if they were one of the company, then pick up a chick and fly off with it."

If the crows eat the insectivorous birds, the sparrows combine to starve them. All American birds, except the predatory species, are gradually but rapidly being driven out by the English sparrow, for which, whatever may be thought of him by any other students of bird life, Mr Davey has not one good word.

The woodpecker needs about 1,000 ants for a meal and gets them, if he has half a chance to reach them. But the sparrows harry the woodpecker and other ant-destroying birds, until they vanish from the face of the land, and then the ants carry on their ruinous work.

"The tender leaves on the tops of young shoots of trees," Mr. Davey points out, will be found, in the latter part of May or the beginning of June, to roll up and perish Examination will reveal a filthy mass of green, gray or black aphis. These suck the juices from the leaves and kill them. The leaves make the building material for the tree Destruction of the leaves, by any agency, means the death of the tree The scientist tells us that the aphides a pair of them are capable of becoming the progenitors of 5,000,000,000 in one season'

The Ants' Cows.

The aphis exudes a sweetish substance called honey dew. On this the ants feed; hence the aphides are commonly called the ants' cows. The ants are farmers by nature; they take care of their cows, carry them into their burrows in the fall and bring them back in the spring; [illegible] Hence the destruction of the insectivorous birds [illegible] an increase of ants to an extent that no mind can calculate, and the consequent increase of the aphides would destroy all vegetation."

The guilt of flies, against which national and state and local governments have [illegible] waging universal warfare, is found by Mr. Davey to be mainly due to the past of the sparrows. He reviews some of their crimes.

"They buffet and drive away the martins and barn swallows—birds worth their weight in gold as destroyers of mosquitoes and flies gathering nearly all their food 'on the wing,' each bird consuming not less than 3,000 flies daily As a result of the destruction of the swallows by the English sparrows, we are being eaten up with flies, and [illegible] of bacteria being carried into our food in upon the [illegible] by the flies."

A Menace to Tree Life.

But the fly nuisance is no worse than the impending misfortune due to the webworm, on which nearly all American song birds feed ravenously The destruction of birds has resulted in their multiplication to such an alarming extent, that, if not checked, this pest alone will destroy every deciduous tree in a [illegible] Ohio, the upper part of Pennsylvania, New York and [illegible]

[illegible]

The [illegible] try.

[illegible]

"If we put the English sparrows at 5,000,000,000 at the present [illegible] you can safely multiply by five annually and the crow by two annually, and at this rate in 10 years it is [illegible] that any of our native [illegible] will be [illegible]

"Indeed, it is a grave question if nearly all the [illegible] will not be about gone in that time."

Wind Flowers

WHITE and cool, and delicate as snow flakes are the fragile windflowers of the Colorado mountains

They blossom in sequestered places on high wind swept ledges, and beneath gray cliffs where gentle winds bend and sway the dainty flowers upon their slender stems

Long and slender are the blossoms possessing an elusive fragrance, faintly exquisite though scarcely discernible

Wind flowers the name breathes of soft southern winds tenderly bending the white sweet flowers in cool blue dawn lights of summer days, or, through purpling twilights, blowing their fragrance over the hills, and drooping the fragile blossoms into sleep

This exquisitely dainty white flower haunts the high windy slopes and shadowed nooks and rocky ledges of the hills through all the sweet time of summer blossoming

Sketching Picnic.

Tuesday afternoon several of the pupils of Mr George O. Beardsley participated in a sketching picnic on the grounds of Mr. A. Z. Sheldon on Colorado avenue, the hostess being Mr. Sheldon's daughter, Mrs. Janes. Toward evening a bountiful luncheon was served and then the company repaired to the house, where there was a most delightful informal musical and literary program. The vocal numbers were by Miss Hazel Marie Kaiser and Mr. D. R. Cumming, and Miss Alberta Carper recited from Riley. Afterwards, until a late hour, dancing was enjoyed by about 40 guests in Mr. Sheldon's hall.

If You Are Fat and Hot Read This Article

There is no necessity of fat people suffering as they do. Most fat people are so good-natured they do not care how they look or how they get along during the hot weather. As a matter of fact there is a natural fat reducer that in the past several years has been demonstrating that it will reduce fat and not tear down the body or leave big, flabby rolls of skin and wrinkles. This method is the famous Marmola prescription, which is now prepared in tablet form to meet the demands of fat people in the summer and to enable them at all times to take their fat reducer after each meal. One of these little tablets taken after a meal turns that meal into good food for the blood and stops all fat-producing elements from going into the system. Marmola Tablets has an army of men and women who testify to its success and you would tire reading what they say of its triumphs. Marmola tablets not only stop producing fat in the body but they reduce flesh at the rate of from 12 to 16 ounces a day. They are harmless and do nothing but assist nature to give to the body the nourishment it requires. They are sold at all drug stores, price 75 cents, or you may write The Marmola Company, 284 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

WHEN THE FIRST UMBRELLA WAS CARRIED

From an Exchange.

What is it that will not go up a chimney up but will go down a chimney down? That is a conundrum. If it had been asked of a Providence man 140 years ago, or, for that matter, of almost any other man in the American colonies, that man could not, unless he had been abroad, have given any possible guess at the answer. The reason is that the answer is an umbrella, and there were very few umbrellas in this country at that time.

In Guild's "Early History of Brown University," a passage is quoted from Howland's memories, which reads in part as follows:

"Governor Wanton headed the procession with the president. The governor's wig, which had been made in England, was of the size and pattern of that of the speaker of the house of commons and so large that his shallow-crowned hat could not be placed on his head without disturbing the curls. He therefore placed it under his left arm and held his umbrella in his right hand. This was the first umbrella ever seen carried by a gentleman in Providence, though they had been some time in use by ladies on a sunny day."

In carrying umbrellas on a sunny day the ladies God bless them—were using the umbrella according to its name. It is the Anglicised diminutive of the Latin "umbra," meaning shade, and the protection was originally used only for the purpose of keeping off the rays of the sun as a parasol is used today, says the Providence Journal.

Umbrellas originated in the Orient and were used in that part of the world thousands of years ago. Engravings on stones found in Egyptian excavations have been discovered in which umbrellas were pictured. They were at that time and are today in some of the eastern countries an emblem of rank. In 1855 the King of Burmah told the English who had come into his kingdom that he was "the monarch who reigned over the great umbrella-wearing chiefs of the eastern countries."

Jonas Hanway was the first Englishman to carry an umbrella, and he appeared with it in London in 1756. He was hooted and jeered at, but he had picked up the habit in the Far East, and stuck to it, living to see his example followed, until now an Englishman without his umbrella is as undressed as a man without a hat.

Governor Wanton's umbrella was an imported one, as were all these in Providence in the early part of the nineteenth century, for umbrellas were not made in this country until 1812 in any quantity sufficient to supply the trade, which had grown to fairly large proportions.

Providence was conservative then, and it was not until 1820 or thereabouts that a man who carried an umbrella could escape the charge of effeminacy which is made today against a man who carries a parasol. The umbrellas then were crude affairs with long bone handles, stretchers of cane or whalebone roughly joined and covered with oiled silk or cotton. Later on gingham was substituted, then alpaca and now a really good umbrella is covered with silk.

Silk, however, took the place of cotton, gingham and alpaca. The Providence papers of 1830 or thereabouts frequently advertised the importation of a "case of silk and gingham umbrellas," along with a list of other things.

But with the introduction of the umbrella into the city Providence entered upon a carnival of crime, theft being the nature of the crime. Ministers, deacons and respectable citizens, who would sooner commit suicide than take money, lost all moral sense when they caught sight of an umbrella. If a man came to a gathering of any sort without an umbrella, he was almost certain, if he left a little bit early, to return home with one.

It became a habit with all classes of citizens to take umbrellas whenever they could do so unobserved, and the habit has continued until this day.

AFTERWARD

I'm glad I was always so good to her;
I was just up there in the nursery
Picking up things you know that were Left strewn about as carelessly
As a child will do when she's tired from play;
I picked them up with a mist and blur
In my eyes, and I laid them all away.
I'm glad I was always so good to her.

And many's the plate [illegible] to me,
That came to me o'er a [illegible]
Or a doll or a whole tin infantry
Arrayed in a battle column there;
Picture on picture of girls and girls
(One year and two years and three) that were;
Of pinafores and blue [illegible]
I'm glad I was always so good to her.

Dreams on dreams and they ride me down,
Column and phalanx and [illegible]
And grasses grow [illegible] and brown,
And leaves bud, [illegible] and fall;
She had been six [illegible] and ten—
So tall and so tall [illegible] were,
How fair they were [illegible] been.
Those lost ones I'm glad I was good to her.

SOME UGLY LADY-KILLERS

From Tit-Bits.

"No woman worthy of the name," wrote one of the loveliest ladies in London society recently, "really cares a brass farthing whether the man she honors with her hand is handsome or ugly, so long as he possesses the manly qualities of brains, physical strength, honor, and so on, which make such a powerful appeal to our sex."

And certainly history supports this rather unconventional view, for many of the plainest men of whom we have any record have not only won pretty and well-dowered brides, but have been able to pick and choose among the fairest, to the confusion of their more well favored rivals.

Was there ever a plainer man, we wonder, that John Wilkes the famous champion of popular liberties, and one of the most dissolute rogues of his day? So ugly was Wilkes that the very children ran away, shrieking at sight of him in the streets, and yet such was the spell he cast over women that ladies of beauty and fashion vied with each other for his notice, while most men of handsome exterior and all courtly graces looked enviously and impotently on."

"Give me a quarter of an hour start," he used to boast "and I will win any lady's hand against the handsomest man in England. And he could have done it, too. There were few beauties, however fair or highly placed, whose hands could not have been his for the asking, and in the very early twenties he won for his wife one of the loveliest heiresses of the time—a lady who refused more than one coronet to be his bride.

"'Beauty and the Beast,' they call us," Wilkes is said to a friend; and really I can not find fault with the description."

Brougham, the great lord chancellor, was a man of almost repellent ugliness, without a solitary compensating grace of speech or manner. Conscious of his unattractiveness, he shunned ladies' society as he might have shunned the plague. And what was the result? The [illegible] the [illegible] loveliest and aristocratic in the land simply mobbed the "ugly lawyer," and were as proud to win a smile from him as an offer of a coronet from any other man.

When any one asked "Where is Brougham?" the invariable answer was, "Where the ladies are thickest." And sure enough, there he was, and the more he repelled his fair persecutors, the more they clustered round him.

Another famous "lady killer" was Jean Paul Marat, one of the leading and most infamous figures in the French revolution. "Beyond any question," wrote a contemporary, "M. Marat is the ugliest man in the whole of France and not merely ugly, but positively repulsive in person, habits and manners."

And yet, in his early years he was, beyond rivalry, the most popular physician in Paris. His consulting rooms were crowded daily by the loveliest women in the French capital, pushing and jostling to get a word with or perhaps win a smile from him. That he turned a deaf ear and a cold shoulder to their allurements only stimulated their ardor, until their attentions [illegible] that at one time he [illegible] tated flight.

Even when he contracted a loathsome skin disease, while hiding in the sewers of Paris, he was devotedly nursed by one of the loveliest of his many admirers, whom he "married one fine day in the presence of the sun."

If possible, a still more repulsive man was Potemkin, the ex-private soldier who enslaved the fancy of Catherine the Great, and by her favor was made virtually czar of Russia. "Dreadful and repulsive" was the description of him by one who knew him. "He has an unwieldy figure and knock-knees is swarthy of skin, coarse in feature, and has lost one eye. He often passes whole days in his room, half-dressed, uncombed, unwashed, biting his nails and scratching his untidy head." And yet, says Durand, "the empress is quite crazy over him, as is proved by her passionate letters, in which she addresses him as 'my lord,' 'my king,' 'my inestimable treasure.'"

But perhaps the most remarkable of all these cases of women's infatuation for ugly men was that of W. Hamilton, a Scotsman of a century and a half ago. Hamilton was not only preternaturally ugly, but he was terribly deformed. "His legs," we are told, "were drawn up to his ears, his arms were twisted backward, and almost every member was out of joint."

In spite of these terrible physical drawbacks, Hamilton easily outstripped all the gallants in his district in the favor of the ladies. "He might have married any of them for the asking—indeed, it is said several of them actually asked him," says a chronicler. But he remained proof against all their wiles until after his 80th birthday, and then he married a girl of 20, being carried to the altar on men's shoulders.

ODORS

London Chronicle.

No substance that [illegible] to dissolve in water has an odor, [illegible] it is the actual [illegible] it in floating in particles in the air that appeal to the nose, and not simply a vibration of the air, as in the case of light and sound. The damper a thing is the more powerful the odor it gives off. The fragrance of wet overcoats in a church on a rainy Sunday evening is a case in point. A pleasanter proof of the fact can be had by walking in the garden after a rain.

But there is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells, and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostril the nose refuses to recognize any odor at all. It is, by the way, not in the nostril that the sense of smell lies, but in the upper third of the nose. There the red lining of the nostril changes into brown and becomes much more sensitive.

KAISER'S WORKROOM

A friend translates the following from a German newspaper for The Outlook:

In the workroom of the kaiser are the following sentences, so arranged that he has them always before him when sitting at his desk:

Be strong in pain.

To wish for anything that is unattainable is worthless.

Be content with the day as it is; look for the good in everything.

Rejoice in nature and people, and take them as they are.

Give from your heart and mind always the best, even if you do not receive thanks. He who can learn and practice this is indeed a happy, free and proud one; his life will always be beautiful. He who is mistrusting wrongs others and harms himself.

It is our duty to believe every one to be good as long as we have not the proof to the contrary; the world is so large and we ourselves so small that everything cannot revolve around us.

If something damages us, hurts us, who can tell if that is not necessary to the welfare of creation?

In everything of this world, whether dead or alive, lives the mighty wise will of the almighty and all-knowing Creator; we little people only lack the reason to comprehend it.

As everything is, so it has to be in this world, and, however it may be, should always serve good to the mind of the creature.

TOOK TIME BY THE FORELOCK.

From the New York Globe

The family were to leave town on the 2 p. m. train, so the mother said as she was hurrying along the preparations in the Brooklyn home:

"Now, children, get ready to go before luncheon. Don't leave anything to be done at the very last minute."

And the children said they wouldn't. Luncheon ended, they hustled into their wraps and started. In the hall the mother said:

"Edward, you didn't brush your teeth."

"Yes, ma'am, I did."

"But you couldn't," she said. "You didn't have time. Why, you just this minute got up from the table."

"I know that," said Edward, "but we were in such a hurry that I brushed 'em before I ate."

CLEVER IN OBEDIENCE.

From Youth's Companion.

When Bobby returned in a drenching rain from the children's party to which he had gone with reluctance he was wet to the skin but in high spirits. "Oh, Bobby," said his mother, "you'll catch an awful cold, I'm afraid. I heard your father tell you to telephone for a cab if it rained hard—and you with your very best clothes on! Why didn't you do as he told you?" "I did," said Bobby, stoutly, "and I sat on the box with the driver, same as I've always wanted to, and I had such a good time I'm almost glad I went to the party."

Health and Beauty Notes

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

G. O. I.: Many women, particularly at this season of the year, have the same trouble that now vexes you—that is, ordinary cold creams leave the skin so oily that the complexion loses instead of gains from their use. Make this cream jelly yourself at home and there will be an end to your troubles. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, put it in a fruit jar, add one half pint of cold water and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, stir briskly for a few minutes and let stand over night. This satisfactory cream is used for massaging to prevent and remove wrinkles, fill out hollow cheeks and round off angles. It gives a clear, fresh and soft skin, because it removes every particle of dust and dirt from the pores. It removes blackheads, and by making large pores small prevents their return. This cream contains no oils or fats that will cause a growth of hair. It prevents freckles, tan and sunburn.

Miss New York: You cannot be too careful in caring for your hair. Yes, take a shampoo every week if it is necessary to keep your hair and scalp free from dust. Never use soda, as it fades the hair; many soaps, too, are harmful, as they leave the hair dry and brittle and cause streaks. For a quick drying home shampoo, there is nothing so good as plain canthrox. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water; pour on the head a little at a time and rub well, just as you would with any other shampoo. Then rinse well. Canthrox makes a rich and plentiful lather that thoroughly cleanses the scalp, removes dandruff, relieves itching and irritation and leaves the hair soft, bright and fluffy—so that it is easily dressed.

F. P. E.: Your eyes are weak and need a strengthening tonic. Get from your druggist an ounce of crystos and dissolve it in a pint of water. Drop one or two drops in each eye whenever they are tired, red or inflamed. This simple eye tonic helps wonderfully in keeping the eyes bright and clear and does away with that lack-lustre and expressionless look that so detracts from an otherwise attractive girl's appearance.

I. I.: To remove the superfluous hair from your face and forearms mix a little delatone with enough water to form a paste, cover the skin on which the annoying hairs appear and let it remain two or three minutes; then wipe off the paste and wash the skin in warm water. Get the delatone in the original one-ounce package as it comes from the chemical works. It retails at one dollar and is sold in up-to-date drug stores. Should the hairs reappear they will be light and thin, and a second application of delatone will generally rid you of th[illegible]

Country Girl: Isn't it your own fault that your sweetheart appears to be losing interest in you? If other girls take pains to make themselves attractive to him, instead of pouting or repining, you should immediately take steps to put you. If on an equal footing with them. To clear your complexion and keep it rosy and fresh, follow the advice given above to G. O. I. and apply to your face, neck and arms daily a lotion made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in a half pint of hot water and adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This will help your dark face and neck. It will give you a beautiful complexion and is much better than powder because it will not rub off or show. Spurmax lotion is inexpensive and there is nothing better to prevent freckles, tan and sunburn. Girls who work in stores or offices use this face wash, because it removes the necessity of retouching the complexion during the day.

G. S. O.: Your scalp is not in a healthy condition, or it would not be so hot, dry and hard, nor would your hair be brittle, splitting at the ends and falling out. You can refresh and invigorate your scalp and the hair roots by the use of a quinine hair tonic made as follows. Get from your druggist one ounce of quinzoin, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol and add one half pint of water. Rub this into the scalp and hair roots two or three times a week and it will give new life to your hair, making it soft, rich and glossy. Regular use of this tonic destroys the germ that causes dandruff and baldness. You will find this tonic much better than any ready-prepared tonic you can buy and it will not stain the hair or scalp.

Mrs. O.: Yes, a fleshy woman is at a disadvantage in [illegible]. To reduce your weight, dissolve four ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints of hot water and take one tablespoonful three times a day, before meals. This simple and harmless remedy takes off superfluous fat quickly and without injurious effect.

Millie: (1) Don't waste your [illegible] on external [illegible] for pimples and blotches when the trouble is internal. To make a good blood tonic and liver invigorator get an original one small package of kardine from your [illegible] it with one-half cup of [illegible] solve in one half pint of [illegible] and [illegible] 1½ pints hot [illegible]. [illegible] a full quart of tonic [illegible] take one [illegible] a day, before [illegible] has no [illegible] appetite [illegible] it purifies the blood and the [illegible] your skin will soon disappear. Legg Wins Championship by Defeating Wm. Sheehan 1 Up

DENVER, Aug. 20.—In a match decided by the narrowest of margins, Harry G. Legg of Minikhada, Minneapolis, won the transmississippi golf championship from William Sheehan of the Hyperion club of Des Moines by 1 up.

A 20-inch put by Sheehan, which struck the edge of the cup on the 34th green and bounced out, lost him the match. It seemed certain another hole would be necessary to decide the championship.

While Sheehan never led the champion at any time in the match, he pulled up even with him time after time. Both men showed remarkable ability to recover from bad lies, but Sheehan apparently was not able to take advantage of opportunities which would have given him the lead several times had he accepted them.

Legg's work with his iron clubs has been remarkable throughout the tournament and he placed full reliance on them this afternoon, using a driving iron with startling accuracy on many of his tee shots.

After Sheehan had squared the match on the 35th hole, both got away with their drives on the home hole, which was to decide the match. On his second shot Sheehan dropped into a sand bunker, while Legg's ball bounced over and stopped just off the green. Sheehan made a beautiful recovery, but his fourth placed him 20 inches from the hole.

Legg overran the hole on his third and missed the cup less than an inch for a four. It seemed Sheehan was sure to halve the hole in 5, but his ball struck the rim of the cup and jumped out and Legg's put won him the hole and the championship.

In a hard-fought morning round, in which both played splendid golf, Legg finished 1 up in the first half of the finals. Legg started off at top form and had Sheehan 2 down in the first nine holes, Sheehan having given up the fourth when he drove into the creek, and lost the eighth when Legg holed out a 30-foot put from the edge of green for a 3.

Sheehan then cut down Legg's lead by capturing the 12th hole, after the Minneapolis man had driven into the bunker, but Legg took the 13th when his approach which was over, struck a tree and rolled back within an easy put of the hole. Legg resigned the 14th, the "pop" hole, after three ineffectual puts. Both men then halved the holes up to the 17th, when Legg, after getting bunkered and pitching his approach into a sand trap beyond the green, resigned the hole and made the match all square. On the 18th, Legg missed a put for a 4, but Sheehan missed the fifth stroke and Legg won, ending the round 1 up.

Nearly every hole won by Legg was won by taking advantage of Sheehan's inability to run down puts. The cards follow:

H. G. Legg, Minikhada:
Out	6	4	4	3	3	4	4	3	4
In	4	4	5	5	5	4	4	*	5
Sheehan:
Out	6	4	4	*	3	4	4	4	4

*Resigned.

Starting on the afternoon round, Legg was 1 up, and took the 19th in 4. Sheehan won the 20th and 21st, making the match all square after Legg had been wild on his second shots on both holes. Legg won the 23d with a perfect drive approach and put, and also took the 24th, when Sheehan missed a 6-foot put. The 25th hole saw Legg in trouble. He pulled his drive into the long grass and overplayed his second shot out of bounds. This gave Sheehan the hole in 5. Sheehan lost the next hole, however, taking two strokes to get out of a bunker, where his Brassey landed him. On the 28th, Legg topped his drive, put his second into a water hazard and his third into a trap bunker, guarding the green and Sheehan again was only 1 down. Sheehan won the 31st with the aid of a fine cleek shot, which put him dead to the hole, and again the match was all square. Legg won the 33d hole, 5 to 4; the 34th was halved, and Sheehan took the 35th, after Legg's approach had dropped into a sand trap. Then came the hole which decided the championship and the runnerup. The afternoon scores:

Legg, out	4	5	5	4	3	3	4	3	1
Legg, in	6	5	5	6	4	4	4	5	5
Sheehan, out	5	4	4	4	4	4	5	6	3
Sheehan, in	5	5	5	4	4	5	4	4	6

A Trio of the Best Shortstops Now Playing Ball

Two of the best shortstops in the major leagues, and who seem to be "going back." The two large figures are Bridwell (on the left) of the New York Giants, and Tinker of the Chicago Cubs, who, since the falling off of Hans Wagner, are conceded to be the best shortstops in the big leagues. Wagner is shown above. From his work this season he appears to be deteriorating.

K. C. Loses to the Zooz 6-5

Kansas City wasn't any harder for those Zooz to handle than the Cheyenne Indians, and the home team copped the opener from the Missourians yesterday, 6 to 5. The same teams hook up again this afternoon, following a game with the champions of the Fountain valley and a fast local squad.

The Kansas City speed boys started off like a Missouri cyclone, and, before the Zooz got the dust out of their eyes, Mr. Wilson, the second man up, dashed across the pan with an unearned run. The runs oozed in one at a time for three rounds before the sun came out and thawed Mr. Ackley's flipper. Ack is not a cold weather flinger, and the sun is about all that saved him from slow death by freezing.

Mr. King Cole whiffed in the opener, and Wilson walked on four wide and wet balls, took second on a wild heave to catch him off first and third on an error. While half the Zoo team was trying to run down the error between first and second, Wilson ambled in from third. That's all.

A couple of long wallops in the second scored another, and an error and a double sent one more tally across in the third. The Zooz started in the fourth, and a series of hits and two bases on balls scored five for the locals. Wells switched over to first, and Glenn came in from the field to do the hurling.

The hitting of Counts, who pushed out four clean safeties out of five trips to the dish, was the feature of the game, although Mr. Fowler got in two timely safeties. There will be a double-header at the Zoo yard this afternoon, the first game starting at 1:30. Score.

NEWS AND COMMENT HEARD ON THE SPORTSMANS BEAT

DENVER WAS GIVEN its first view of the much discussed Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures yesterday afternoon. There wasn't any mad riot in the theater where the show was put on and it wasn't necessary to call out the militia to quell a miniature war. As yet, wherever the films have been exhibited, the most radical reformers who predicted such dire results if the pictures were permitted to be shown haven't had a chance to say "I told you so!" Judging from comments of the pictures they are not particularly interesting because of the great amount of infighting indulged in during the earlier rounds. After seeing the films the chief question seems to be whether Jeffries was actually "in," or whether he simply quit at the finish. No arrangements have been made for exhibiting the pictures in Colorado Springs.

BEFORE A HANDFUL OF spectators a world's championship was fought out last Thursday when Richard Arnst of New Zealand defeated Ernest Barry of London for the world's championship sculling honors. The race was rowed over a three and a half mile course on the Zambesi river a short distance from the famous Victoria falls, Arnst winning by three lengths. The Zambesi was selected for the big acquatic struggle because Arnst, who has held the world title for the last three years, asked a prohibitive price to go to England and meet Barry, the challenger. Barry asserted that it was impossible for him to go to New Zealand and a promoter finally induced a number of South African financiers to subscribe a purse of $5,000 to have the scullers fight it out in the heart of the dark continent. The winner received three-fourths of the purse and the loser the remaining quarter. Barry is a Thames waterman, holder of the English sculling championship, and considered the most scientific oarsman ever produced in England.

SINCE HIS FISTIC but not financial eclipse at Reno last month Jeffries has been advertising $150,000 to loan, according to western coast newspapers. He found a place for $50,000 the other day in a mortgage on the plant of a Los Angeles laundry, at a healthful rate of interest and for a long term. Jeffries will be clipping coupons when other fighters are old and hungry. Engravings in green and orange with certain words and figures, and in proper quantities will go a long way toward alleviating the pain of a damaged optic or a broken heart.

WE ARE IN RECEIPT of a written chastisement signed "A Fan," because we neglected to state that the Zooz won their second game with Cheyenne with the help of the umpire. "Chance couldn't have brought his Cubs here and won that game," says the writer, and to say that the umpire handed the game to the Zooz on a platter would be putting it mildly. It is no honor to win games that way, and it is bound to hurt the national game in your city."

So far as we are concerned personally this is not the open season for umpires, and for that reason we didn't shoot him full of holes with a broadside of linotype. We haven't run across a ball team yet that doesn't run the umpire, whether he has it coming or not. Its been a habit since the first ump called the first batter out on strikes away back in the stone age of baseball. The chances are that it will continue so as long as the enslaved athlete toils for $9,000 per. Some of the decisions in the Cheyenne game referred to didn't appear right, but from the coop we couldn't tell whether a ball cut the corner of the plate or was half a foot wide. That's the reason why we didn't order the umpire shot at sundown.

IF KETCHEL IS THE physical wreck that news dispatches assert, it would appear now that the most logical fight for middleweight honors should be between Billy Papke and Sam Langford. Papke, under the clever and guiding hand of Hugh McIntosh, is to tour Australia with his bride, and incidentally prepare for four bouts in the antipodes that will guarantee $20,000. Since calling off his six-round boxing bee with Al Kaufman in Philadelphia, Langford is still hanging around the Quaker city, just why no one seems to know. The eastern fight trust has passed him up and the doors are also closed on the coast. Langford might have cleaned up a trifle more than $6,000 in less than half an hour a few evenings ago, but he demanded $7,500. Now he is out his forfeit money, $2,500, and no battles in sight.

THE "SCHOOL BOY" GOLFER cut a pretty wide swath in the Transmissisippi annual tournament which closed in Denver yesterday. First it was Lawrence Bromfield of the Denver Country club who loomed up as a possible successor to Harry Legg, the champion, and yesterday is was Willie Sheehan of Des Moines who faced the title holder in the finals. They both lost, but the Minneapolis star was forced to extend himself to retain the title.

"DOC" WHITE, THE WHITE SOX flinger, has booked up with the song writers' brigade, according to report. Assisted by a well-known Michigan piano pounder, the Philadelphia tooth carpenter has compiled a ditty entitled "Little Puff of Smoke, Good Night." Sounds catchy, doesn't it?

BOSTON IS CREDITED with having the greatest throwing outfield as a whole in the big league in Speaker, Lewis and Hooper. Each of this trio has a wonderful whip for strength and accuracy, and base runners take no liberties with any of them.

M. WILSON, the Kansas City Missourian's second baser, says that Mr. Brown will fling in today's game with the Zooish goats. Mr. Brown is the young man who made Trinidad behave and he will try to duplicate the trick against the home team.

NOW THAT THE College Tigers and the High School Terrors each have a whole coach, the anvil chorus is prepared better than ever to send up a wail of protest at the first opportunity. Rehearsals are being held already.

EGAN SETS RECORD IN LONG GOLF GAME

LAKE GENEVA, Wis., Aug. 20.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, defeated Walter E. Egan of Exmoor in the finals for the Lake Geneva cup here, in the longest game ever recorded in a golf tournament in the west. The contest reached the forty-first green before Evans was returned the victor.

Naughton Says Joe Gans Was All in When Met Rat Nelson

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—With the passing of Joe Gans, the prize ring lost a man who will probably be remembered for his cleverness as long as the sport of the gloves is regarded with favor. Gans was not what you might call a natural fighter. He wasn't given to hooking or swinging, or tearing in towards an opponent with lowered head. He stood for all that was clever in sparring.

When at work, his temper was never inflamed. He was coolness itself, and he judged every offensive and defensive tactic to a nicety. He seldom struck at his man unless there was an opening and he was well within striking distance, and by the same token he seldom missed the mark. After delivering a blow successfully, he was certain to note the effect of it, and if there was anyone among latter-day boxers who reduced the game of the ring to a science, Gans was the man.

Before his strength began to wane and with his strength naturally his rapidity of movement and precision in hitting—it was a rare treat to see Joe Gans in action. I know of more than one resident of San Francisco who used to say: "I have no particular liking for fighting, but I always go to see Gans box."

His gracefulness and his effectiveness were a revelation, even to those who did not pretend to understand the inwardness of leading and blocking. Above all, he was never cruel. Whenever Gans had his man in a bad way, the look on his face plainly told that he invited interference from some quarter.

It would be interesting to know just when consumption first fastened its grip upon Gans. It seems to me that Gans' lungs were affected earlier than many supposed. It was the nature of the man to conceal any physical shortcomings and I know that for many years Joe rebelled strongly at the rumors and suggestions that he was afflicted with tuberculosis.

The campaign in Goldfield, when, in accordance with an eleventh hour demand, he was compelled to reduce himself to skin and bone almost to make weight for Battling Nelson, probably developed the disease that was lurking in his system. Gans never made much of a fight after that. Whatever victories he scored were simply on account of the superior class.

He had his opponents awed and utter lack of confidence helped towards their defeat as much as the punishment they received. If Rudy Unholz, for instance, had not been reduced to a condition of bewilderment by Joe's timely taps and baffling tactics, he might have done what Battling Nelson accomplished later.

Without wishing to besmudge Nelson's reputation as a world beater in the slightest, candor compels expression of the opinion that Gans was a consumptive when he went down before Nelson's aggressive milling in July, 1908, and again in September of the same year. It will be remembered by any one who attended either of the contests in question, and who watched closely for developments, that Gans was practically fought out before the fifth round of either affair was finished. He went back to his corner with his eyes glassy and lips parted, as if figthing for breath. In one of the fights—the last, I think—he was shivering as though with ague many rounds before the end.

BISSELL AND DUBACH WIN MENS' DOUBLES

In the finals in the men's doubles in the Antlers tennis tournament yesterday, Bissell and Dubach won from Fawcett and King in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. While Fawcett and King played brilliant tennis in streaks, Bissell and Dubach played in top form, with almost faultless team work, covering their courts in first-class manner and being steady and sure in both service and return.

Fawcett was successful several times in getting his forehand drives over, which were too speedy to be handled by his opponents. The losing team made its service good on numerous occasions, only to lose the next two points on errors. It all added a cut service which made returns extremely difficult.

The smashing and overhead work of Bissell, and the steady, effective play of Dubach, won the match. In the opinion of those who have followed the tournament at the Antlers, Bissell and Dubach are a pair that will make a strong bid for state honors. The result of yesterday's play gives the winners' cups to Bissell and Dubach and the runner-up cups to Fawcett and King.

Tomorrow morning Lockhart and Dubach will meet in the singles at 9:30, the winner to meet Gall on Tuesday morning at the same hour. Interest also centers in the mixed doubles between Mrs. Harvey and Lockhart and Mrs. Farnsworth and Gardiner, to be played either tomorrow or Tuesday. The time has not yet been decided officially. The consolation singles will start Wednesday morning.

Hedgewood Boy Beat Lady Maud

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 20.—Although the weather was anything but propitious, a large number of enthusiasts went to the track today and were repaid for their pains. Four high-class races were on the card and each one furnished exciting contests and real sport.

The best time in the regular events was made by Nancy Royce in the second heat of the 2:10 trot, when Charlie H. forced her to step in 2:07¼. Favorites won in all of the other regular events.

In the big event of the day, the race between Minor Heir, Hedgewood Boy and Lady Maud C., Hedgewood Boy won by a half length from Lady Maud C., and by several lengths from Minor Heir. The time was 2:08¼, only 2¼ seconds slower than the stallion's record. In view of the slightly muddy track and the fact that rain fell during the race, the performance of Hedgewood Boy is considered remarkable. It showed the great son of Chimes to be in the best condition of his career. Most of the horses here, including the Savage stable, will be shipped to Galesburg, where next week's great western meeting will be held. Summary:

First race, 2:10 trot, $900. Charles H. won third, fourth and fifth heats and race. Nancy Royce won first and second heats. Vito third. Time: 2:09, 2:07¼, 2:07¼, 2:11¼, 2:12¼.

Second race, 2.25 trot, $700.—Castledome won in three straight heats, Miss Moshier second, Dell Dillon, third. Time 2:13½, 2:15¾, 2:14¾.

Third race, 2.25 pace, purse $1,000.—Nathan R. won in three straight heats; Jessie Gentry second, Lacon Intermatora third. Time 2:09¾, 2:11¾, 2:15¼.

Fourth race, 2.16 pace, purse $700.—Evelyn Patchen won first, fourth and fifth heats and race. Bucky B second; Swiftwood third. Time: 2:13¼, 2:13¾, 2:15¾.

Grand Special—Hedgewood Boy, first; Lady Maud C. second, Minor Heir third. Time, 1:30½, 1:07¼, 1:33; 2:04¾.

Local Lightweight Matched to Meet McFarland Next Month

Friends of Young Tillman, the local lightweight, will look forward with interest to his approaching bout with Billy McFarland, the Yampa, Colo., champion, which will be staged at Oak Creek this state, on the night of September 12.

Tillman has been out of the game all summer, but he has kept in good fighting trim and is now in active training in preparation for the go with McFarland. The men will meet at 142 pounds, ringside, and at this figure Tillman will give weight to his opponent.

"The mill is scheduled for 15 rounds," said Tillman last night, "but it won't go the limit if I bring about a different ending. I am going to try to get away from these draw propositions and win by the knockout route if possible. My last fight was with Young Bruce in February. It was put on at Aguilar, Colo., and the referee gave me the worst of the decision by calling the go a draw after 11 rounds."

Young Tillman, who is William Theleman in private life, has been managing the auto department of the Hassell iron works during the summer and has been in light training for the last two months. He has not dissipated during his temporary absence from the ring and is in shape to go a long route now with a few days' preparation. For his engagement with McFarland, Tillman is being trained by Billy King, who will also be his chief second and adviser in the ring.

STEARNS CAR WINS 24-HOUR RACE AND MAKES NEW RECORD

BRIGHTON BEACH MOTOR-DROME, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The Stearns car, driven alternately by Cyrus Patschke and Al Poole, broke the track record here tonight and easily won the 24-hour automobile race begun at 8:30 last night. The new record established was 1,253 miles, as against 1,196 miles made by a Losier car last October. An accident to the Matheson car gave the Stearns the lead. Patschke and Poole were never again headed, but continued to open a wider and wider gap.

Second place went to the Matheson, driven by Charles Basle and C. P. Whalen. The Houpt-Rockwell was third, and the Cole fourth. There were several accidents, but none resulted in serious injury, although Wally Owen, driving a Marion, was badly cut when his car turned turtle. He might have continued if his car had been able to resume. Out of seven cars which started four finished.

The 8:30 p. m. or twenty-fourth hour score:

SPRAY WINS CUP

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The yacht Spray of the Chicago Yacht club, skippered by F. A. Prince, by taking today's leg of the contest for the Sir Thomas Lipton cup won the cup with a percentage of 2714. The Spray has held the cup one year, winning it easily in the 1909 races.

BOWLING CONGRESS, JAN. 21

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Officers of the American Bowling congress here today completed arrangements for the next bowling congress. It will be held in the Coliseum, beginning January 21, 1911, and concluding February 7. The Coliseum was leased for five weeks, which will give sufficient time for putting down the 16 alleys.

NOVELTY WINS $21,000

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Novelty, running in the colors of [illegible], won the Hopeful stakes, six furlongs, here today. The stake was worth over $21,000, and, by Novelty's victory, Hildreth's total winnings for this year are a little over $100,000.

M. E. M'LOUGHLIN MAY PLAY BEALS WRIGHT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—A match forecast by close observers since the beginning of the All-Comers tournament on the Casino courts for the national lawn tennis championship, will be played on Monday, next, when Beals C. Wright, former champion, will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin, the brilliant young player of the Pacific coast, and last year's internationalist.

The match will be in the sixth round, the last before the semifinals. Each has come through the tournament thus far with comparative ease. The belief is general that the survivor will come through the semifinals and finals with little trouble, and will meet champion William A. Larned in the challenge round.

The defeat of F. C. Inman, champion of New York state, by Dean Mathey, Princeton champion, caused an upset in today's play in the fifth round.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 20.—At the Hibernian athletic games here today, Matt McGrath of the I. A. A. C., New York, broke the world's record for throwing the 56-pound weight for height, with a throw of 16 feet 2½ inches. McGrath held the previous record of 16 feet ¾ inches.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 20.—Running at Olympic park here today, Melville W. Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic club, New York, added another odd distance running record to his laurels by going two-thirds of a mile in 2:44 2-5. This clips a second from the record held by Lunghi, the Italian.

Manager Roger Bresnahan of the St. Louis Cardinals, who is not only the captain-pitcher of that team, but recently demonstrated that he can pitch as well. He twirled the Brooklyn Dodgers into seventh place by going on the mound after Zmich and Beckman had been hit all over the diamond. This made some of the older fans recall that when Manager McGraw of the New Yorks signed up Roger, he took him on as a twirler. Later, however, Roger developed into one of the best catchers in the National league.

President Taft Sees American Yachts Again Defeat Spain's Challengers

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 20.—The President Taft cup, the principal trophy in the yacht race between America and Spain, was won today by the Harpoon, owned and sailed by C. F. Adams II, treasurer of Harvard university. Although it required three victories to secure the cup, the Harpoon actually finished first in all four races of the series, losing one race by voluntarily disqualifying herself on a foul.

The Beaver, owned by C. H. V. Foster, was the second best in today's race, while Guy Lowell's Climax came in two minutes later. The Cheata, leading Spanish boat, was two miles behind when the Harpoon finished, and the Mosquito II and Papoose were still farther astern.

President Taft saw the race from the presidential yacht Sylph. After the leaders had crossed the line the presidential yacht joined the Harpoon and the flagship Emerald, saluting the Spaniards as they came from 22 to 27 minutes later.

The Beaver, Cima, and the three Spanish yachts will race for the Governor Draper cup, but the trophy lies between the Americans. The Beaver has already secured 20 points toward this cup. The Spaniards show no disappointment over the outcome of the races. They reiterate that they came over solely for pleasure and to get an insight into American methods, and that they are well satisfied.

FASTS 46 DAYS TO REGAIN HEALTH

DENVER, Aug. 20.—Rowland Miller, a young student of this city, has not tasted food for 46 days. Water he drinks in great quantities. He purposes to eat nothing for 10 days more.

Suffering from catarrh and being too poor, he says, to obtain professional medical attention, Miller decided to fast until he regains health. He came to Colorado a year ago from Wisconsin in the hope of bettering his physical condition.

The young man weighed 148 pounds at the beginning of his heroic treatment and up to now has lost 46 pounds. He was quite strong and able to be about until a few days ago.

DELTA MAKES BID FOR ADVENTIST SANATORIUM

DELTA, Colo., Aug. 20.—At the annual conference and camp meeting of the Seventh Day Adventist church, to be held in Grand Junction next month, the question of establishing an industrial school and sanatorium on the western slope will be settled. It is probable that the institution will be established in Delta, where a 20-acre site has been offered free of charge.

COURT REPORTERS MEET AT DENVER

DENVER, Aug. 20.—The twelfth annual convention of the National Court Reporters association will be held here August 22 to 26. Sessions will be held in the supreme court chambers. Governor Shafroth and Senator Hughes are among the speakers on the program. President Oscar L. Detweiler of Philadelphia will preside. Tuesday the second shorthand speed contest for the championship of America will be held.

GRAFT CASES SET FOR EARLY HEARING

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—John M. Taylor, former general storekeeper of the Illinois Central and who, with Frank B. Harrison, former general manager of the road, and Charles L. Ewing, former superintendent of lines north of the Ohio river, is charged with conspiracy to defraud the road, was arraigned before Judge Cottrell in the municipal court today.

Taylor requested a continuance until August 23, but Chief Justice Olson ordered Judge Cottrell to set the case for the chief justice's court next Monday. The cases of Harriman and Ewing are set for next Friday.

AMERICANS INJURED ON MEXICAN RAILROAD

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 20.—An unidentified Mexican was killed and four Americans were seriously hurt today when a caboose being moved by a construction crew on the Mexico Northwestern railroad, near Casas Grandes, Mex., 125 miles south of here, jumped the track and rolled down the embankment.

The injured:

E. E. Eck, contractor.

J. L. Bouse, civil engineer.

FORGER QUICKLY ARRESTED

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Aug. 20.—R. Wilson, a printer who had worked on the local daily papers for several weeks, was taken from a train at Eagle last night and placed under arrest on a charge of forgery. He was arraigned this morning and pleaded guilty to cashing five checks for $18 each to which he had forged the name of H. J. Holmes, editor of the Avalanche-Echo, his last employer.

THE HELL SHIP

With the Passing of the Sailing Ship Has Come a Better Time for the Sailor.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

With the passing of the windjammer the "hell ship" has ceased to haunt the poor sailor's dreams with visions of cruelty and tyranny worthy of the dark ages. The slugging mate, ruling by brute strength alone, finds no place on a steam vessel, and his methods would not be tolerated for an instant by the modern sea captain.

But less than a dozen years ago there were vessels which every sailor mentioned with a shudder and avoided like the plague. One of the worst of these floating torture chambers hailed from New York and traded in the Pacific, and a complete record of the tragedies that reddened her decks during her long career (now happily ended) would rival the history of the Chinese tongs.

Most of the atrocities practiced by her giant mate will never be told, but a few came to light when he was arrested in San Francisco, tried and sentenced to seven years in Folsom prison on complaint of a young collegian who shipped before the mast for his health, and whose eye was gouged out with a case knife by the brutal officer before the ship had left the Narrows on her way to the Golden Gate.

This ship never reached any port with the same number of men signed on when she sailed—brutal treatment killed some and drove others to suicide, and if a sailor fell or was washed overboard he was left to his fate. The only way to desert her on reaching a port was by dropping into the sea under cover of the darkness and swimming ashore, but very few of the wretched crew had courage enough to try it, being pretty certain to be brought back and whipped worse than before. A man's spirit was broken by the process known as "trimming" long before the first port of call was sighted, and he stood in such abject fear of the officers that he dared not make a complaint to the authorities.

Inhuman Practices.

Most of the crew were "shanghaied" aboard, as no sailor in his senses knowing the reputation of the ship would sign on her. The men never had more than a few dollars apiece coming to them at the end of a voyage, owing to a system of fines, and the majority of the crew was encouraged to desert by increased ill-treatment near the end of the trip, thus forfeiting their wages, which were divided and pocketed by the captain and mate.

A brief account of the tragic events that took place on this typical "hell-ship" on her final voyage shows how well she deserved her name. A Swedish sailor was so terrified when the mate pursued him with a belaying pin that he sprang to the rail, and, steadying himself by the ropes with one hand, drew his razor with the other, cut his throat and toppled into the sea. Another man sought refuge from the mate's fists in the yards and jumped overboard. He was left to drown.

The cabin boy brought a cup of coffee to the captain one morning which was too cold for his taste, so the lad was promptly keelhauled and went raving mad from the experience. An Englishman had his arm broken by the mate, gangrene set in and he died.

It was on this voyage that the unfortunate collegian lost his eye, and on reaching San Francisco had the mate arrested.

SINCERE SYMPATHY.

From an Exchange.

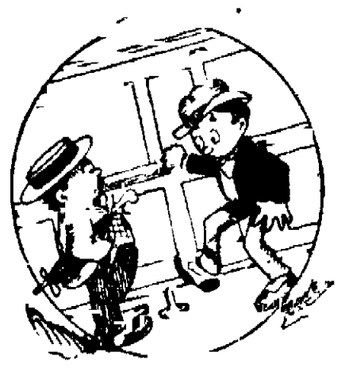

President and Mrs. Hadley were on a train bound for New York, where Yale's president was to speak before a national convention. He made use of the hour and 20 minutes he spent in the train by rehearsing his speech in a low voice, using his hands to emphasize certain passages.

A kindly matron, who was sitting directly behind Mr. and Mrs. Hadley, and who had been watching and listening, leaned forward, and tapping Mrs. Hadley on the shoulder, said feelingly: "You have my sincere sympathy, my poor woman. I have one just like him at home."

HOW OLD WAS SHE?

Toward the close of a recent lawsuit in Massachusetts relates Everybody's magazine the wife of an eminent Harvard professor arose and with a flaming face timidly addressed the court.

"Your honor," said she, "if I had told you I had made an error in my testimony would it vitiate all I have said?"

"Well madam," said the court, after a pause, "that depends entirely on the nature of your error. What was it, please?"

"Why, you see," answered the lady more and more red and embarrassed, "I told the clerk I was 28. I was so flustered you know that when he asked my age I inadvertently gave him my bust measurement."

CITY PARKS

WITH 3?? days in the year in which the people of Colorado Springs may indulge in out-of-door life and recreation what could be more profitable for its 40,000 inhabitants than the provision of numerous beautiful parks and pleasure grounds where the people may enjoy these gracious gifts of almost perpetual sunshine in the open. [illegible] Canon park is probably the most [illegible] a recreation and picnic ground. Entrance five miles southwest of Colorado Springs, contains numerous cascades, weird rock formations and other striking features. West of Cascade avenue and extending along the Rio Grande railroad for two miles [illegible] is Monument Valley park, 200 acres in extent. Shaded walks [illegible] through a picturesque territory along the banks of Monument creek. Here is a remarkable mineral spring, free to the public. Palmer park to the northeast, noted for the extensive and imposing view to be had from the summit and its fine drives. Dorchester park on the southwest edge of town, the children's play ground. South park or Court House square and North park, both in the heart of town, where free concerts by the Colorado Midland band are given alternately every week, on Monday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons.

PALMER LAKE, COLO.

ON THE main line of the D. & R. G., Colorado Midland, Missouri Pacific, A. T. & S. F. and C. & S. railways, 52 miles from Denver and 23 miles from Colorado Springs and Manitou. Palmer Lake is the finest and most attractive of resorts, where you can enjoy cool, bracing mountain air, pleasantest of horseback rides and most delightful drives, tally ho rides, etc. Steam heated swimming pool, bowling alleys, pool, billiards, tennis and golf and other amusements, yet closely connected with the outer world being half way between Denver and Colorado Springs, with train service averaging every thirty minutes connecting with these points. Experienced guides for riding or hunting parties can be secured. Good deer hunting (in season) and fine trout fishing. If you are in doubt where to spend your summer vacation, you might well trust the people of Denver, who, knowing every spot in the state, have quite unanimously chosen Palmer Lake in preference to others. Pine Crest, the new resort, is one mile from the station and Glen Park three-quarters of a mile. Address town clerk for illustrated booklet.

"THE CRYSTAL PARK AUTO TRIP"

ONE of the grandest trips in the Pikes Peak region. Your visit is incomplete until you have motored in one of the luxurious Packard automobiles to Eagle's Nest, [illegible] in the famous loops and wonderful mountain scenery [illegible] by burro over a beautiful trail to Crystal Park, embracing over 1,000 acres of forest and meadow and teeming with grand views. Twelve mile auto ride to Manitou Pass and return $1.50, children under 16 years half rates; burro ride Eagle's Nest and return including park privileges, 50c. Divided skirts provided for ladies at Eagle's Nest free of charge. Tickets can be procured at all hotels and at Colorado Springs ticket office, Red Cross Pharmacy, 107 East Pikes Peak avenue. Cars leave Red Cross Pharmacy, Colorado Springs at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. daily. Autos leave from Manitou Station near Soda Springs Pavilion, on the hour from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. This is one trip that does not mean an immediate return for you have the privilege of picnicking and enjoying the beauties of nature to your heart's content and gathering wild flowers of which the park abounds. Go early and [illegible] all day.

MANITOU IRON SPRINGS

SUPPLIED with mineral springs or established medicinal properties the Iron Springs Pavilion has received the attention of invalids and health seekers who appreciate the marvelous powers of these waters. The Ute, Ouray and Little Chief springs are considered the most wonderful springs in America, the water from them being especially recommended as a tonic for diseases of the blood, dyspepsia and kidney disorders. The water at the Pavilion is free to those who wish to partake of it and a few cents a quart is charged for water taken from the Springs in bottles or jugs. This charge is made to protect the management from imposition by a possibility of such persons selling it. Mr. J. C. Hiestand, the proprietor of the Iron Springs, is also proprietor of the Summit House on the Peak, and for the benefit of those who wish to make the ascent of the mountains for the magnificent sunrise and sunset this popular house will be conducted on the American plan. $3.00 will be the charge for accommodations at the Summit House this season. For any information regarding rates and accommodations address Mr. Hiestand, Iron Springs, Manitou, or phone Purple 12.

TROUT FISHING

THE mountain streams of Colorado by reason of their clear and cold water are particularly adapted for the various species of trout, conceded to be the gamiest fish that is caught with hook and line. To enumerate all the waters in this vicinity where trout can be taken would be to recite the name of every lake and every stream in this section. To most of these streams and lakes the public has easy access and the fisherman is sure of abundant reward for time spent. The laws of Colorado provide that trout not less than seven inches long can be taken with rod, hook and line held in the hand from June first until October thirty-first. No license is required for either residents or nonresidents. The angler's pride in his tackle adds a hundred per cent to his anticipation and pleasure. The stranger who places himself in the hands of a reliable man such as W. J. Lucas, dealer in up to date tackle, sporting goods, bicycles, etc., at 16 North Tejon St., Colorado Springs, and indicates where he wishes to do his fishing will make no mistake. Mr. Lucas is a practical fisherman thoroughly acquainted with all varieties of fishing equipment and the trout streams of this vicinity. Phone 599.

C. & S. EXCURSION TRIPS

A TRIP to Colorado would be incomplete if it did not include the trip over the world famous Georgetown Loop to Silver Plume and Mount McClellan, the highest point on the high est regular railroad in the world [illegible] feet above the sea. Beautiful Estes Park [illegible] miles from Loveland, Colo., is located at the [illegible] and can also be visited at [illegible] Denver and Loveland from which [illegible] splendid [illegible] is [illegible] in connection with the trains from Denver. Excellent hotel and camping accommodations at [illegible] Park. Among the many other [illegible] Platte Canon [illegible] Denver [illegible] one of [illegible] fishing may be enjoyed [illegible] lodges operated by the Colorado and Southern [illegible] the facilities of any mode [illegible] round trip rates to any of [illegible] points [illegible] while in Colorado Springs [illegible] office at No. [illegible] East Pikes Peak [illegible] headquarters and are at liberty to ask any questions relative to excursion and sight-seeing trips that can be made while in our city.

STRATTON PARK

ABOUT [illegible] Colorado Springs in the shadow of [illegible] pleasure resort [illegible] late W. S. Stratton [illegible] [illegible] Sunday [illegible] beautiful [illegible] quiet and re[illegible] Stratton park is reached [illegible] the canon or "Casino" cars.

CAVE OF THE WINDS

THE Cave of the Winds comprises [illegible] large rooms connected by winding passages. The entrance is on the side of Temple Hill, and the Cave extends three-quarters of a mile underground on a level away from sunlight and into the solid rock. The way is dry and easily walked. The decorations of the rooms are the unusual arbonate and onyx crystals and are astonishingly beautiful. Nature requires in photography perfect darkness in shaping and coloring this veneer. Curtain Hall is orange and pink. Finlay Hall is amber. Majestic Hall and Bridal Chamber are pearl color, white Gypsum Alcove is of the whitest virgin purity. These rare and exquisite crystals are not in small patches but cover solidly like the plaster of a house every inch of ceiling and walls. No Cave in the world is better lighted. The impression upon visitors who view this "Studio of Nature" with the aid of our two thousand candlepower electric lights will remain vividly in memory the balance of their lives. The famous "Temple Drive" in Williams Canon, which is free to the public, is our carriage road to the Cave of the Winds, and a more beautiful drive would be hard to find. Ask your gentlemanly hotel clerk for our other literature.

GARDEN OF THE GODS

OF ALL the points of interest in the Pikes Peak region the Garden of the Gods is probably the most noted and most visited. It is situated about five miles northwest of Colorado Springs, and can be reached with carriage by two routes over the Mesa Road across the plateau to the west of Colorado Springs, or by Colorado Avenue to Colorado City and thence north on West Third Street. The Garden consists principally of red, white and gray sandstone, limestone and gypsum. The red walls rise perpendicularly hundreds of feet, some resembling great church steeples, called the Cathedral Spires and Three Graces, these with other standing walls form the Temple of Montezuma. This wonder is owned and maintained as a Public Park by Colorado Springs and a pavilion at the principal view point supplies refreshments, lunches, curios, souvenirs, etc., as well as an expert photographer with guaranteed ability. At the Gateway is Echo Cave, cleft into this huge red sandstone formation with a ceiling over 70 feet high, and on the opposite side the wonderful change to snow white alabaster and gypsum stone. Genuine souvenirs are carved of this stone, only at the Gateway Pavilion and the artist is proud to show these and the statues carved here. Two or three hours is ample time to make the trip by carriage or automobile.

THE HIGH DRIVE

FROM east to west through the whole of the United States, the famous High Drive, built by the late Gen. William J. Palmer, is known as one of the most attractive in the world and every summer thousands of tourists make this trip. The favorite way to make the High Drive trip is in carriages which may be taken from Colorado Springs or Colorado City, but those who are fond of riding find the trip an ideal one for an outing on horseback. Lunches and souvenirs may be obtained at Bruin Inn. The drive may be made either by going through Colorado City and entering from the Bear Creek canon side, or by going from Colorado Springs through Ivywild and Broadmoor past Stratton Park and returning by Colorado City. Along the High Drive are many wonderful views of mountain scenery, and from the highest point a magnificent stretch of scenery is open to the visitor. Glimpses can also be seen of the famous Short Line track as it wends its way through the gorges and around the mountain tops to the gold camp, and at every turn a new and delightful prospect spreads itself before the spectator. The road throughout is one of the [illegible] and best built in the country.

WILD FLOWER EXCURSIONS

FOR several years during the summer season, it has been the custom of the Colorado Midland Railroad to run special trains into the mountains known as Wild Flower excursions. The idea is a capital one and has met with the hearty approval of both the tourist and the Coloradoan. The trip takes one through the historic Ute Pass, passing through Manitou at quite an elevation, thus giving one an excellent panoramic view of that town, through a series of seven tunnels in the next three miles, past the beautiful summer resorts of Cascade and Green Mountain Falls and Woodland Park, thence to Lake George on the Platte river, a stream noted for its excellent trout fishing. Eleven Mile canon, one of the grandest scenic spots in the Rockies, and on into South Park. This is the end of the trip of over 50 miles. On the return trip numerous stops are made giving the passengers ample time to leave the train and gather the beautiful wild flowers which grow in abundance adjacent to the track, such as the Columbine, Mariposa Lily, Indian Pinks and others peculiar to the Rockies. Further information as to rates and dates is cheerfully furnished at the Colorado Midland city ticket office.

BALANCED ROCK

SOUVENIR photographs are always appreciated by the folks and friends at home, and the best memento of your trip through the Garden of the Gods is a photograph of yourself taken by the side of the wonderful Balanced Rock, either on a burro, carriage, automobile or afoot. The entire western territory of the Garden of the Gods, from and including the Balanced Rock to the car line known as Mushroom Park, is owned exclusively by Goerke and Son, who are pioneers in this district and having a reputation for the past 20 years as the most artistic photographers in this state, their work is unquestionably bound to be the best in every respect, both as to workmanship and materials used. Upon arriving at the Balanced Rock one should not fail to ascend to the deck of Steamboat Rock and view the summit of Pikes Peak and the Kissing Camels at the Gateway through the powerful telescopes provided by Goerke and Son for the free use of the tourists. A short distance from the Balanced Rock will be found their curio shop, and if in search of any oddities an excellent assortment to choose from can be found here at most reasonable prices. No admission is charged to the Garden.

THE SKY LINE DRIVE, CANON CITY

CANON CITY, Colorado, at the mouth of the famous ROYAL GORGE, offers attractions to tourists not surpassed anywhere; a short and pleasant trip from Colorado Springs by either the Denver and Rio Grande or Santa Fe Railroad, also accessible by an excellent automobile road with a three hours' drive through magnificent mountain scenery. An amount of time from a few hours to several weeks can be profitably spent viewing the many scenic points of interest, the most notable of which are the beautiful SKY LINE DRIVE, the summit of the world famed ROYAL GORGE, [illegible] and Temple Canon. Thousands of acres of fruit bearing trees surround this, the summer city of the Arkansas Valley, and present a sight long to be remembered. Cheap summer rates are advertised from Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou and Pueblo, the regular week end round trip rate from Colorado Springs being $1.50, and weekly excursions through the [illegible] hours in Canon City. Most [illegible] through to [illegible] which point [illegible] miles distant. All through tickets to Salt Lake City or the Pacific Coast are good for stop over privileges at Canon City. Handsome descriptive literature may be obtained at any hotel or railroad office. For full particulars address H. S. Maddox, Secretary Canon City Business Men's Association, Canon City, Colorado.

THE ROYAL GORGE

THE crowning glory of the masterpieces of nature is that of the Royal Gorge, the greatest of all among all [illegible] of Colorado, situated on the [illegible] the Denver & Rio Grande between Canon City and Salida [illegible] the front range of the Rockies, it is most spectacular, awe inspiring and magnificent. Down its cleft in the heart of the granite [illegible] waters of the Arkansas, lashed into foam and [illegible] spray [illegible] through the [illegible] is the passage [illegible] point that there was [illegible] [illegible] length [illegible] The Royal Gorge [illegible] them. By stopping off at Canon City [illegible] walk into the Royal Gorge, climb its dizzy heights, ride horseback over its rugged surroundings and drive to the very brink at the top. For excursion dates and rates see Rio Grande ticket office, 16 N. Tejon St.

The Mt. Manitou Scenic Incline

EVERY visitor to the Pikes Peak region makes inquiry regarding the white gash cut in the mountain side just west of Manitou. This conspicuous landmark defines the course of the Mount Manitou Scenic Incline, which is the longest and greatest railway of its kind in the world. It is a cable road one and one quarter miles in length ascending the east slope of Mount Manitou to its summit, rising to an elevation of one half mile above the lower pavilion, which is located 150 feet west of the world famous Ute Iron Springs of Manitou. The one feature especially aimed at in the construction is absolute safety and this has been attained. The magnificent panoramic view obtained from the car while making the ascent is not excelled anywhere on the globe. Ten thousand square miles of plains, mountains and forests lie within the range of vision. Upon the summit of Mount Manitou is situated delightful Mount Manitou Park, covered with most beautiful evergreen trees of many kinds. Among and above the trees tower granite boulders and crags hundreds of feet in height. This beautiful natural park with its entrancing views and its superb location 9,500 feet above sea level is an ideal spot for recreation. Twenty-five thousand people took this trip last season.

MAKE YOUR OWN VIEWS

WHY not have your own souvenirs of the Pikes Peak region? You can buy local views of the scenery around Pikes Peak made by professional photographers, at almost any book store in Colorado Springs, but these views embrace only the prominent points of scenic interest and do not cover a great many just as beautiful views, which you happen to see with your own eyes and which may probably strike you as more picturesque than the more celebrated objects, such as the Balanced Rock and the Seven Falls. Then too these views lack the personal element, the group of your own friends, the children on burros, the picnic lunch in canon. You can have these personal souvenirs by taking a kodak with you and if you take your films to the Weeks Studio, 26 East Bijou street in the afternoon you can have your pictures ready for you the following afternoon and you can be fitted out there with all the photographic supplies you need.

MUSIC AND DANCING

AMONG the most popular attractions in this city offered residents and visitors are the free band concerts and free dances at Stratton park pavilion. The concerts by the Colorado Midland band, one of the most noted musical organizations in the country, are given on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings of each week and on each Sunday afternoon. Classic and popular music are happily blended in the programs. The popularity of these concerts is attested by the vast crowds attending them. Equally popular are the free dances given in Stratton park pavilion on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings of each week. The dancing floor is one of the finest in the country and the music the very best—facts which are attested by all who have attended the dances. These dances are free to the public, the only requirement being to secure a season admission card at the general office of the Street Railway company. It is by means of these season cards that the excellent order and high class of patronage is maintained. Another feature and one of particular app[eal] to the little tot[s] is the [illegible] playground installed by the street railway company. There are swings, teeter-boards, ta[illegible] and innumerable other devices for making the tots happy.

TROUT FISHING

COLORADO'S famous trout streams that are fairly alive with the best of game fish, the lusty trout, are beckoning to you from various points along the Colorado Midland Railway to spend a few cooling, recuperative days on their banks. At this season of the year the speckled brook trout have left their spawning beds and are voraciously hungry and will rise to the lure of the fly or the glitter of a spoon. Good catches are being made daily from the small but game speckled trout to the five to seven pound rainbow and the ten to fifteen and eighteen pound mackinaw. Among the many points of easy access located along the Colorado Midland Railway is Hartsel on the South Platte, Twin Lakes, the Frying Pan river at Nast, Thomasville, Ruedi, and the Roaring Fork river at Basalt, and lastly at the famous Woods Lake resort near Thomasville, acknowledged to be the best for both lake and stream fishing in Colorado. The Midland Route publishes a booklet on hunting, fishing and camping describing each point in detail which can be had at their office, at 9 North Tejon street.

MANITOU SODA BATHS

ONE of the chief attractions of Manitou is its famous mineral springs and the wonderful medicinal values which they possess. One can get the benefit of their properties by drinking and bathing in their healing waters. A large and commodious bath house has been built, equipped with all facilities for giving every known variety of baths—tub, shower, plunge, etc., with experienced attendants for either ladies or gentlemen. Plunge parties are quite the popular thing this summer; can you imagine anything more exhilarating and refreshing after a hard day's climb in hills than a plunge into these mineral laden waters? They instill vigor and new life into the whole body. "It makes one feel good all over" are words that express the thorough appreciation of all patrons of these baths. An hour's enjoyment of this health-giving pastime will make you realize that they are worth any number of doctors' prescriptions. Ladies and gentlemen, young and old, also children receive the same courteous attention of the management and its employes. A 20-minute ride from Colorado Springs will bring you to the Manitou Bath House.

Pikes Peak and the Cog Road

PIKES PEAK is the landmark of the Rockies and one of their chief attractions. It stands at an elevation of 14,147 feet above sea level and over 8,000 feet above Colorado Springs. Ascent is made by the famous Cog Road, an example of modern engineering skill. At a cost of nearly a million dollars this road with an average grade of 846 feet to the mile has been built to its summit. Comfortably seated in an observation car you are pushed slowly up this nine miles of railway until you have reached one of the highest eminences on the globe. Above, the earth, above the clouds, only the sky overhead, the world beneath. Around you an unobstructed view limited by the bounds of vision. On the west lie the vast Cripple Creek district; on the east the plains; on the south appear sharp points of the Spanish Peaks. To the north is Long's Peak, Gray's Peak and the Continental Divide. It is an inspiration, a sight that none forget. The trains leave the Manitou station on the following schedule: [illegible] a. m., returning at 1:15 and 1:30 p. m., returning at 5:15 p. m. Tickets at any of the railroad ticket offices.

South Cheyenne Canon and Seven Falls

SITUATED three and one-half miles southwest of Colorado Springs is South Cheyenne Canon, wherein are located the famous Seven Falls, a name synonymous with Colorado and a [illegible] that is eminent in a scenic line. Its accessibility and pre-eminence over others in all attractions place it as one among the first to be visited by the tourist. From the entrance of South Cheyenne Canon to the Seven Falls is a distance of one mile and [illegible] grandest one [illegible] in Colorado. If your time [illegible] limited take the Stairway on the Seven Falls leading to the top of Seven Falls, where the canon opens in a beautiful valley with numerous waterfalls [illegible] view of this tremendous gorge. From the top of Seven Falls are trails leading to Helen Hunt's grave, Observatory Point and Inspiration Point, which are [illegible] sightseer. South Cheyenne Canon can be reached by street car or carriage. The street car terminus is in Stratton Park. Carriage or burros can be obtained for the round trip from the [illegible] Burro and Carriage company or the R[illegible].

COLORADO'S POTTERY

PROBABLY the point of interest most attractive to those of an artistic nature is the new pottery plant of the Van Briggle Pottery Company. This is where the world famed Van Briggle Art Pottery is designed and made and is easily reached by carriage, automobile or by street car. Van Briggle pottery is modeled from peculiarly adaptable clays which are found in the neighborhood of Colorado Springs and Colorado. Beautiful wild flowers form some of the chief decorations. Van Briggle pottery is especially noted for an individuality of mat glaze which was discovered by Mr. Artus Van Briggle in 1898 and was immediately recognized by the master heads in ceramics. Tourists and visitors to the Pikes Peak region are invited to visit the Van Briggle Pottery where they may learn how the crude rough clay taken from the ground is moulded and colored into the uniquely artistic forms which characterize this product of the Centennial State. The display rooms at the Van Briggle Pottery are open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. The hours for visitors who wish to go through the works are from 9 a. m. to 12 noon and from 1 till 4 in the afternoon.

MAJESTIC ACADEMY

UNDER the direction of Prof. C. E. Cox the Majestic Dancing Academy at 3 East Bijou has become one of the foremost amusement resorts of Colorado Springs. The best orchestra in the city furnishes the latest dance music and the floor is superb. There is plenty of room and not a single post in the way of the dancers. Ample dressing and check rooms are provided. An up-to-date refreshment room is connected with the hall affording the dancers a delightful place to rest and refresh themselves between the dances or while sitting out a number. Regular dances are held every Thursday and Saturday evenings and frequent special dances that are announced beforehand. Every attention is shown strangers. Dancing classes are held every Monday and Friday evenings at which society, stage and fancy dancing and deportment are taught. Private lessons are given by appointment. A letter or phone call to Prof. C. E. Cox will secure an appointment.

CASCADE AND CASCADE CANON

CASCADE is located in Cascade Canon at its junction with the old historic Ute Pass, eleven miles from Colorado Springs on the Colorado Midland Railroad. In point of surrounding scenic beauty and attraction it is justly entitled to its sobriquet "The Gem of the Mountains." Cascade Canon is noted for its succession of cascades formed by the fall of the stream through the canon a thousand feet in half a mile. Cascade has ample hotel accommodations in the Hotel Ramona and Alamo for two hundred guests. It is growing in favor as a place for summer homes. It has pure spring water and has a great many fine summer cottages. Cool climate, good health, outdoor sports and good living. It entertains this season the College Y. M. C. A. June 14 to 20, the C. Y. W. C. A. June 24 to July 4, the Colorado State Baptist association July 21 to Aug. 2, the Young People's Missionary movement August 5 to 13. Bookings should be applied for as early as possible. Accessible over the Colorado Midland railroad or by automobile over the Ute pass stage road. Also all points of interest in the Pikes Peak region are easily accessible from Cascade.

Seeing Colorado Springs Street Car

THE trip on the Seeing Colorado Springs Street Car is generally recognized as the best attraction in the Pikes Peak region. It is an attraction in itself because it affords a person a most delightful outing of two hours' duration in one of those famous Narragansett cars that have a charm of their own, and it takes one to all of the other attractions and enables both the stranger with leisure and the one whose time is limited to see those attractions under the most favorable circumstances. The scope of the trip can be realized by simply stating that with a start from the Old Post Office Building on Pikes Peak avenue it embraces all of the interesting features to be found between that point and Manitou on the West—Cheyenne Canon and Stratton Park on the South and the residence part of the City on the North. The announcing of Mr. Grant Collins, one of the most competent guides to be found anywhere and one of the greatest pleasures is the interesting lecture delivered by him on each trip. The car leaves the Old Post Office at 9:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. daily. The time consumed by this trip is two hours and the distance traveled is over twenty-five miles. The fare for round trip is 50 cents. Further information can be obtained from the C. S. & I. Railway Co.

AUTOMOBILING

MANY of the most beautiful spots in this vicinity are remote from car lines and can be reached only by carriage or automobile. And of these a large number are even too distant to be accessible by horse. Less several [illegible] are devoted to the trip. Among these may be mentioned Dead Man's Canon and Manitou Park, two of the most interesting and magnificent places in the Rocky Mountains. With a good car these trips can be made in a few hours. On a trip like these it is very [illegible] not only absolutely necessary that the car be perfectly reliable to avoid disagreeable delays but also that the drivers be experienced and thoroughly informed as to the roads. The splendid touring cars used by the Paul Auto company, 17 South Cascade avenue, are especially adapted for mountain jaunts and their drivers are all that could be desired for long trips. These cars are new and among the handsomest in the city, and there is no drive too long or too short for them. Prices are very reasonable. All who wish to take a trip in one of these comfortable cars will receive prompt service by phoning Mr. G. H. Paul, Main 214, or calling at 17 South Cascade avenue. Agents for Reo, Overland and Apperson cars.

THE CLIFF DWELLERS' RUINS

PREHISTORIC America is rapidly becoming the subject of great interest to a thoughtful American who are more and more turning to the great ruins of the Southwest. The difficulty [illegible] the many weary hours of hardship and privation one has to pass through in visiting them a very few ways have deterred the average person from seeing these wonderful ruins. However an opportunity has been afforded every one to study at Manitou [illegible] a splendid reproduction of the best-known remains of the Cliff Dwellers. Careful measurements, plans and photographs were made by the best architects and engineers. The company bought cliff dwellings. The walls were taken down and the stones shipped to Manitou where portions of the Spruce Tree House, Cliff Palace and Balcony House were reproduced in the exact size of the originals. A collection of 1,400 pieces of Cliff Dwellers relics, including pottery, stone and bone implements, skulls and mummies are on exhibition. During the summer months a band of Indians are in Cliff Canon giving their native dances and affording an opportunity to see them living under conditions as in their native state. Cliff Dwellers Canon is located on the main highway to the Garden of the Gods and in making your trips insist upon the Cliff Dwellers being included. Admission 50c; children, 25c.

O'er Canon and Crag to Land of Gold

THE Cripple Creek Trip over the "Short Line" has justly assumed first place among the scenic wonders of the West. No one can afford to miss it. The road which is one of the greatest engineering feats in history, instead of following the usual routes, boldly assails the mountain backbone and forces a way over forbidding heights. Carved out of solid rock, it is one of the most wonderful and grandest railroads in the world. It starts where the beauty begins, it chooses the [illegible] as its pathway and seems to lead us to a very high point apart whence we may behold the glories of the earth. There is nothing like it in all the entrancing beauties the world [illegible]. The Cripple Creek District is one of the world's famous places, here one sees several of the richest gold mines in the world, sees how millionaires are made in a day. It is truly "The Grandest One Day Trip in the World." Fare going [illegible] returning Short Line $3.00, going Short Line returning [illegible] route $3.50. Trains leave Santa Fe & S. Depot at 8:00 a. m. and 10:40 a. m., returning arrive at 6:00 p. m. and 8:15 p. m.

PLAYHOUSES

Discussed by J. R. H.

THE first of the independent attractions to be booked in this city for next season is Henry W. Savage's production of the greatest dramatic sensation of the past year, "Madame X." Immediately following Manager Nye's announcement that during the coming theatrical year he will play any and all productions, regardless of trust or antitrust affiliations, Henry W. Savage sent him a contract for the appearance in this city on January 25, 1911, of "Madame X." The contract was signed immediately and returned to Savage.

With both the independent and the syndicate attractions to draw from, the Colorado Springs Opera House should have a most prosperous season this winter. At the present time there are booked about 45 syndicate attractions, which include all the important first companies which will come west. As the independents will send about 40 productions west this year, Colorado Springs should have at least 70 first-class bookings, in addition to the usual number of second rate productions which are continually drifting about the country.

During the month of September, the following companies will appear in this city: September 12, "The Third Degree," with Fernanda Eliscu in the leading role; September 24, "The Spendthrift," with Doris Mitchell; September 26, Billy Clifford, in a new musical comedy; and September 27, Henry Miller in his latest success, "Her Husband's Wife," a comedy by A. E. Mathews, a new American author.

The complete list of bookings for the Opera House for the season of 1910-1911 will be announced exclusively in these columns in the very near future. Although it is the policy of the Opera House not to announce its bookings in advance of the season, owing to the prevailing conditions of theatrical affairs in this city, The Gazette will be able to keep its readers posted as to the very latest bookings and developments at the local theater, as well as in the theatrical world in general.

The production of Bret Harte's "Salomy Jane," at the Opera House during the first part of the present week, is one of the most noteworthy of the entire summer season. "Salomy Jane" was first produced in this country by Eleanor Robson. It was given here about four years ago, with Jessie Izett in the title role. In the present production Cecil Fay will appear in the role of Salomy Jane, a character which should fit her pleasing personality very nicely.

Charles Frohman has announced his receipt of an invitation to produce "The Arcadians" in Rome during the exhibition and fete to be held in that city next spring and summer. It is probable that Mr. Frohman will accept the invitation and send his entire American production to Rome for six weeks.

"The Aviator," a comedy by James Montgomery, will open in Hartford, Conn., September 5, with Edward Abeles in the title role. Abeles will be remembered as the original "Monty" Brewster in "Brewster's Millions."

"The O'Flynn," now being played in London by Beerbohm Tree, and a new play by Justin J. McCarthy have been secured by William A. Brady for the use of Robert Mantell this season.

Robert Loraine, the English actor, who scored so heavily in this country a few years ago in George Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman," will return to the United States this season for a transcontinental tour in this Shaw satire.

Douglas Fairbanks will be seen this season in "The Cub," a new comedy by Thomas Buchanan, author of "A Woman's Way."

Thomas Hardy, the noted English writer, has succeeded the late George Meredith to the Order of Merit.

(1) (2) (3) (4)

1. Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Nightmare."
2. A. E. Mathews, English Comedian, in "Love Among the Lions."
3. Jane Oakes in the same play.
4. Irene Fenwick in "The Brass Bottle."

LOCAL BOY IN "SALOMY JANE"

The production of "Salomy Jane" at the Opera house this week will mark the first appearance here of Russell Barnes, a promising young local thespian, a character of prominence. Young Mr. Barnes has had some experience on the vaudeville and legitimate stages, and has at various times been seen with the Lorch company in minor parts. In "Salomy Jane" he has been given the role of Red Pete, the stage coach robber, a part which requires skill of character delineation, and careful acting. It is quite to the credit of Mr. Barnes that he should be intrusted with such a role in so important a production as "Salomy Jane." "Billiken" Johnson, another local boy, will also be seen in this offering.

Theatrical Calendar

Monday, "Salomy Jane"—Bret Hart's beautiful poetic story of California in the days of '49 will be produced at the Opera House Monday evening by the Lorch Stock company, with Cecil Fay in the title role, one of the very best she has ever played. "Salomy Jane" will run three days, with the regular mid-week matinee Wednesday afternoon.

Thursday, "The Man Who Does Things"—This modern society drama, with which the Lorch Stock company opened its season at the Opera House in June, will be revived for two performances only, Thursday matinee and night. "The Man Who Does Things" tells of a builder of bridges, who tries to build a bridge across the gap which lies between the aristocratic and the middle classes.

Friday, "Forty-five Miles From Nowhere"—Theodore Lorch of the Lorch Stock company, which is now playing a stock engagement at the Opera House, has written two plays. The first of these, "The Servant of the Law," was produced at the Opera House last week with much success. The second, "Forty-five Miles From Nowhere," a story of the plains, will be given three performances this week.

Majestic Theater—Commencing Monday matinee and all week. Sullivan and Considine Imperial Vaudeville. The original school act, Sam J. Curtis and company, in the one-act musical farce, "A Session at School." High-class vocalists, Charles and Madeline Dunbar, presenting Father and the Girl at the Zoological garden. Versatility to the highest degree, the Holdworths, singers, dancers and wizards of the banjo. The height of scenic gorgeousness, an oriental dream, Phasma, the Goddess of Light. Majestiscope, absolutely first-run film. Majestic Concert Orchestra.

"SALOMY JANE."

Bret Harte's delightful California romance, "Salomy Jane," which has not been seen in this city since Jessie Izett played it here three or four seasons ago, will be produced at the Opera House tomorrow night by the Theodore Lorch Stock company, with Cecil Fay in the title role. "Salomy Jane" fairly breathes the odors of the great pine forests of California. Its people are God's own and its locale one of the most glorious in this country. Salomy Jane is the pride of the whole mining camp. All the men hope to marry her. A stage coach is held up and a man killed. Red Pete, the bad man of the district, is suspected and held for the robbery and murder. His partner, known in the play only as "The Man," is being hunted down. He comes upon Salomy Jane while she is in the woods, and begs her to help him escape. She does. This happens in the first act. The other three tell a most poetic story of Salomy's love for the man. "Salomy Jane" will run three nights and a matinee.

"THE MAN WHO DOES THINGS."

"The Man Who Does Things" was first produced in this city June 10, when the Lorch Stock company opened its summer engagement at the Opera House. At that time it was given only three performances. This modern society drama will be revived at the Opera House for two performances only, Thursday matinee and night of this week. "The Man Who Does Things" is a builder of bridges. He tries to span the chasm that lays between his position in the middle class and that of his employer's daughter, who is in the aristocracy. He finds he is not so successful in building social bridges as he is in actual steel construction work in the open, so he gives up the social game.

"FORTY-FIVE MILES FROM NOWHERE"

When Theodore Lorch presented his own drama, "The Servant of the Law," at the Opera House last week, he scored a bulls-eye success. He will now offer local playgoers his other dramatic work, "Forty-five Miles From Nowhere." This drama will be produced at the Opera House Friday and Saturday evenings of this week and Saturday matinee.

So many people have expressed a desire of meeting Mr. Lorch that he has been prevailed upon to sell tickets in the Opera House box office from 2 to 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when he will handle Monday evening's tickets for "Salomy Jane."

MERRYMAKING STARS COMING TO MAJESTIC

If there is anything that makes the average theater audience feel good it is to see a jolly lot of actors who seem to be trying to please and to find a lot of fun doing it. Good nature behind the footlights is infectious upon the people in front of them, and if for no other reason the new bill that opens at the Majestic tomorrow is sure to be immensely popular, for the performers and as merry a lot as is often the pleasure of theatergoers to see, and they make it plain that they want to give everybody as good a time as possible.

But even were this not true, the coming show could not fail to score a big hit, and for the simple reason that it is one of the classiest offerings imaginable. Every act is a big one, and the variety is most pleasing. It might be mentioned, too, that the Majestiscope will show something par excellence in the shape of motion pictures, as Manager Tammen has arranged for first rights on the films of one of the leading exchanges in the country, and from now on the Majestiscope pictures will show an improvement even over the high standard maintained in the past. Here is the list of this week's acts, which will be supplemented by an attractive musical program by the Majestic concert orchestra under the popular and efficient direction of George Hockenberger

Sam J. Curtis and company in "A Session at School," a hugely entertaining one-act musical farce that is sure to bring down the house. It has been doing so all over the circuit.

Phasma, "The Goddess of Light," in a wonderful spectacular act, consisting of beautiful dances with dazzling effects, the like of which have never been seen in this city.

The Holdworths, banjoists and vocalists, in a delightful musical act that will appeal to everyone. Their songs are new and well rendered and their banjo playing is simply great.

The Dunbars Charles and Madeline—presenting father and the girl in the zoological gardens, one of the cleverest musical acts on any circuit. They are fine singers and their specialty is full of fun and novelty.

Performances at 3, 7:30 and 9:10 p. m. Admission, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

MADAME NATURE'S ART GALLERY

A good many years ago, before you or I or any of us began to think of Colorado as the playground and showplace of America, the tribes of Ute Indians who wandered where the village of Manitou now stands, were attracted to an orifice in the cliffs near the foot of Pikes Peak, from which, at intervals there issued strange sounds. Being at a loss to account for it, the Utes enshrouded it in mystery, and wove their weird legends concerning it. Later the white men came, and unburdened with aboriginal superstitions, they discovered another entrance, entered, investigated, and found that the song of the cave was caused by the wind, which whistled through it's peculiar formations. It was then that the "Cave of the Winds" began to attract international attention. Soon geologists and men of science, who visited it and explored its recesses with torches, discovered that, in variety and beauty of formations, the cave was unique in the history of geology. Its entire 15 rooms were an ever-changing panorama of Nature's sculpture in varied materials.

As the years have passed, the cave has grown in reputation, until tens of thousands visit it yearly. Without in any way marring its natural wonders, it has been rendered as easily accessible as a house, and brilliant electric searchlights reach every nook and crevice, bringing into strong relief each glittering crystal formation. The cave is easily reached by carriages up beautiful Williams Canon, and it is open to visitors both day and night.

Henry Miller has postponed his London invasion, and instead will commence a tour of the Pacific coast September 5, opening in Kansas City. "Her Husband's Wife," his success of last season, will be used for this trip. On his return to the east Mr. Miller will appear in a new production.

Marie Doro has returned from London to begin rehearsals of William Gillette's new comedy, "Miss Electricity," in which she will star this season. Later she will support Gillette in a revival of "Clarice," the comedy which first brought Miss Doro into prominence.

Max Figman will open his season on Labor day in Boston. After a preliminary tour of the east in "Mary Jane's Pa," Figman will be seen in New York in a new comedy, now being written for him.

Madame Tetrazzini will make a concert tour of America this fall under the direction of Oscar Hammerstein. Outside of a few operatic performances in San Francisco, it is not probable that the famous prima donna will be heard in opera in this country this season.

LORCH MAY START SCHOOL

Theodore Lorch, who is now playing a summer stock season at the Opera House, is seriously considering the founding of a dramatic school in this city. Since he opened his engagement here, two months ago, he has been besieged by numberless ambitious local people, desirous of going on the stage, who want to learn the profession by "suping" in the Lorch productions. In some instances, Mr. Lorch has used local people. If he returns to this city next summer, he says he will open up a school in connection with his company; place the school under the direction of some well known eastern director and then give the pupils actual experience in his own company. If the pupils advance sufficiently during the summer season and show real talent Mr. Lorch will either put them in his own company or else place them in some other road organization.

NEW PLAYS IN NEW YORK
Reviewed by Calvert

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The 1910-1911 theatrical season is again under way, and Broadway is gradually arousing itself from its brief summer stupor. Several of the plays that opened last spring, and took a brief respite during the sweltering July weather, have returned to the firing line, and two brand new attractions, fresh from Charles Frohman's ice box, have had their premiers. The two new plays are "Love Among the Lions," a comedy by Winchell Smith, which was put on at the Garrick theater, and "The Brass Bottle," another farce, by F. Austey, which opened at the Lyceum theater.

At the Herald Square theater, "Tillie's Nightmare," with Marie Dressler in the stellar role, resumed a successful run, which was interrupted the early part of last month, owing to Miss Dressler's indisposition; while Jack Barrymore returned to the Gaiety theater in his phenomenal success, "The Fortune Hunter," which ran all last season, and bids fair to extend well into next.

To build an entertaining play upon the meager foundation of a bridegroom's terror at the prospect of being married in a lion's den, as a rather difficult proposition, and a less capable theatrical craftsman than Winchell Smith would probably fail in the attempt. Mr. Smith, however, has accomplished this, if nothing more, in "Love Among the Lions," at the Garrick theater, and, although he is not responsible for the idea, his work being the dramatization of F. Anstey's novel of the same name, he supplied a great deal of original matter to develop the main situation.

"Love Among the Lions" is described as a farcical romance in four acts, and has the honor of being the first production of the 1910-11 season. The heroine is an exciting, loving young woman by the name of Lorano de Castro, who is greatly dissatisfied with her commonplace existence in the home of her stepfather, Professor Charles Polkinson. And, after a glance at the professor, one could hardly blame her. Then, too, her mother had at one time an exhibition of white mice and trained canaries, which gave the family a great deal more publicity than the professor's occupation as a teacher of elocution.

She longed for some excitement and opportunity to commit some deed that would bring her before the eyes of the world. By thinking along this line, she conceived the idea of getting married in a cage of lions, performing in a cheap circus. Although bridegrooms get comparatively little notice at a wedding, they are nevertheless essential, and Lorano accordingly began a quiet hunt for the individual, who would help her carry out her plans.

The victim soon made his appearance in the person of Theodore Sanders, a mild mannered, painfully thin gentleman, whose reputation lay in his ability as a tea taster. He falls madly in love with the charmer, and, although the idea of getting married in a lions' den causes him to shiver all over, he finally agrees to the proposition.

All preparations are made, but, as the two are about to enter the arena from different rooms, they collapse with fright, and, on being removed, decide to get married under less nerve-racking conditions.

The ceremony that takes place in the arena unites the lion tamer and his assistant, who, with the bride's stepfather, her friend, a young woman reporter and her barrister clerk of a suitor, form a background for the two lovers.

To the reader, the plot would seem decidedly bare, but it offers numerous humorous situations. The play might be remedied by rolling the first and second acts into one, as the second merely repeats the preparation for the climax, somewhat tardily accomplished in the first.

One of the play's assets, however, is Mr. A. E. Matthews, the English comedian, who is making his first appearance in this country. In the role of Theodore Sanders, the cowardly bridegroom, he was exceedingly funny, and if this is a fair indication of his future work, he may be considered a valuable acquisition to the local stage.

The scene in which he was preparing to enter the lions' den was the best in the play.

He occupied what he believed to be his few remaining months on earth rearranging and unarranging. He grew emaciated in contemplation of the meal he thought he was about to make Chevalier Niona's fierce pets. As the hour of the martial happiness approached, he looked as though he could not furnish a respectable repast for a kitten. His absent-minded toilet for the ceremony was a bit of genuinely comic acting not untouched with pothos the pathos of arrant cowardice—and the final collapse in abject fear brought almost as much sympathy as laughter.

The remainder of the cast, however, was not in the same class with the English comedian. Jane Caker played the role of the emotional bride and gave a creditable performance, while Miss May B. Caney was interesting as Mlle. Leonie, the lion trainer's assistant. The lesser parts were played by Richard Sterling, Ernest Cassart, J. E. Miltern, Miss Elsie Carens, and a few others.

Imagine a tale of the Arabian Nights mingled with the every day life of the Twentieth century Englishman and you have a fair conception of "The Brass Bottle," a new farce which was recently produced at the Lyceum theater. F. Anstey, one of the editors of London Punch, is not only the author of a book of the same name, but is responsible for the dramatization.

Like all farces, "The Brass Bottle" has its faults, but they are not beyond being remedied. A great deal of unnecessary dialogue might be done away with without affecting the play, and to the relief of the audience. The plot, however, is very unique, and the situations afford excellent opportunities for a great deal of fun.

Briefly, the story is of one Horace Vettimore, a young architect, who buys an antique bottle, uncorks it, and finds himself confronted by Fakrash-El-Amash, the Genii of the Jinn, who insists upon rewarding him, as is the fashions of such spirits, and who to Horace's intense disgust, proves to be a sort of original and Simon-pure Mr. Fixit, with that gentleman's family propensity for making trouble.

He transfers Horace's modest rooms into an oriental palace, forces the young man to feel his unsuspecting guests upon queer-tasting and queerer-smelling viands, and otherwise discommands him and them. He finds for Horace a client who wants a home built, then builds one overnight, much to the chagrin of the would-be patron, who is looking for modern conveniences, and doesn't appreciate the antiquated oriental architecture of the new dwelling.

Further, he turns the dignified Professor Futvoye, Horace's prospective father-in-law, into a wall-eyed mule, and then, offended at Horace's ingratitude, leads the family to believe that the action has been instigated by Horace, who, in consequence, naturally comes very near losing his sweetheart. But eventually, through awe of a stronger power than his own—the spirit of progress the Genii is led to ask for imprisonment anew in the brass bottle, and Horace gratifies the desire after having forced the spirit to bring forgetfulness of the in-

The book is said to have surpassed "Three Weeks" in passionate depiction of love scenes. Mrs. Orthwein recently explained that her book was no three weeks—it was a generation. According to her publisher, "The open framework of the narrative encloses inner tragedy of mighty passion with its [illegible] and resolve." Mrs. Orthwein recently sailed for Europe, where she is said to be arranging for the production of her story as a drama.

JOHN KNOX [illegible]-TAIN-

[illegible]-T, SEPT. 1 [illegible]D 2

The great John Knox entertainment, which has drawn thousands in the eastern cities to the great playhouses, will be given in this city on the nights of Thursday and Friday, September 1 and 2. It will be given under the auspices of the Ladies union of the First Presbyterian church of this city. Fully 100 will participate in this religious drama. At least 70 of these were present at the first rehearsal, which was held at the church on last Thursday night. One of the largest and best drilled choruses gathered together in this city for a long time will participate, under the direction of Dr. Charles G. Woolsey. The costumes worn in the Glasgow university and court scenes are true to the times in which the story is laid, that of the sixteenth century. The Caledonians of this city have been invited, and many of them will participate, especially in the scene presenting the Highlanders arrayed in their true Scottish regalia, and doubtless led by the far-famed Scottish bagpip Nothing has had so unique in all history as the beginning of the Presbyterian movement in Scotland under the mighty preaching of the great John Knox. The Puritan movement dates back to these sturdy men of the sixteenth century, and out of this came the pilgrimage to the shores of our own New England. Between the acts there will be given a stereopticon lecture by J. Wesley Hummon, who is the lecturer supplied by the Interstate lyceum for this purpose.

To the boy and the girl between the ages of 10 and 20 who sell the greatest number of tickets for these entertainments, resulting therefrom the greatest amount of money, a splendid gold watch will be presented to each These will be on exhibition at one of the downtown stores Tickets may be secured of Mrs. J. F. Thomas, 126 North Weber street, or by inquiring at the church. Here is a chance for a boy and a girl to receive an elegant present and aid an educational enterprise For every $5 worth of tickets sold a 50-cent ticket will be presented, so all can earn something, though, they fail in the contest.

cident to practically all of those who have had a part in the experience.

Richard Bennett, comedian of excellent ability, is at the head of the cast, or I should say, is supposed to be. He plays the role of Horace Vettimore, the young architect, which is rather a stupid role for such an excellent actor. He did the best he could with his part, but that was merely to supply one or two leading figures in the farce with their cues.

In the role of Fafrash-el-Amash, Edwin Stevens scored a hit. He worked the humorous idea for all it was worth. His gaunt, slate-colored features, wispy beard and robbin's-egg blue gown and turban, and the mock magical manner which he assumed and preserved until he was clapped back in his bottle, all combined to make him a genuine laugh-provoking, fantastical figure. No better actor could have been found for the part than Mr. Stevens.

Irene Fenwick was the architect's sweetheart, and although she was pleasing to the eye, her histrionic ability is not quite up to the standard, being slightly amateurish.

Louis Massen played excellently, and Mrs. Whiffen, as usual, added the value of dignity and ease. As the old professor, Mr. Fuller Mellish was amusingly funny. Ive Dawson provided a neat figure, as did Cecilia Radcyclyffe.

It would be difficult to predict the life of "The Brass Bottle." If a few much-needed changes were made, it might prove immensely popular.

John Corbett, erstwhile prize fighter, and widely known as "Gentleman Jim," has made his debut as a minstrel man, appearing as the interlocutor in George Evair's Honey Boy minstrels, which opened recently at the City theater, in a very creditable manner, and is supported by a capable company.

David Belasco has jumped on the band wagon with the other managers and producers, and announced more extensive plans for the coming season than ever before.

His first production will be "The Concert," a drama in three acts, adapted from the German of Herman Bahr by Leo Ditrichstein. This play will serve to introduce Miss Janet Beecher, who will make her first appearance as a star Mr Ditrichstein will play the leading role.

Blanche Bates, whose "Girl of the Golden West, and "Madam Butterfly" have become famous, will appear in a political play entitled "The Machine," from the pen of William De Mille, whose "Seven Days" was one of the greatest hits of last season.

Another of Mr. Belasco's productions will be "The Case of Becky," by Edward Locke, the author of "The Climax"

For David Warfield, Belasco's brightest star, there will be a play written by the priestly-looking manager himself. The name or nature of this production has not as yet been made public. Warfield will also appear in the role of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice."

After nearly 40 years' connection with the press, during which time I have had an abundance of proof that the great leaders in the newspaper field are sincere in their asseration that they offer "a fair field and no favor," I do not hesitate to ask for space enough to make a statement that will help fair-minded men to a rational conclusion.

During the past 10 years the moving picture industry has developed from its crude experimental stage as a cheap amusement for the populace into a form of entertainment that appeals to the most intelligent classes of people in all civilized countries.

In its vast diversity of attractive features the taste of a vast majority is fully satisfied and the bearer of the slender purse is able to enjoy himself on equal terms with the richest.

Like every other great innovation that threatens to diminish the power and revenue of established institutions, the moving picture was bound to meet with violent opposition by jealous, greedy and fanatical opponents; but, notwithstanding all the obstacles put in its way, the moving picture is firmly established as the dominant entertainment of the masses.

The cause for the rapid and tremendous expansion of the moving picture industry is obvious. A man can take his entire family to such an entertainment for the price of one seat in the gallery of a "regular" theater. Thousands upon thousands of men who had spent their leisure hours and money in saloons and gambling houses, whom the reformers could not bring to a realization of their wrong-doing, now find it more profitable and agreeable to spend their spare time and money in the "picture houses" with their wives and children.

The usual program of pictures presented at all the moving picture theaters of the better class consist of three reels of 1 000 feet of film each; one reel a "drama;" the second a "scenic" or purely educational series of pictures, and the third a "comedy."

Taking the "scenic," "industrial" and "educational" films as a group, there is no gainsaying the fact that they impart a general knowledge, for a few nickels, that would cost many dollars and many days of study to acquire, let alone such expenditure as would be entailed for personal observation. In this group we find marvels of nature otherwise accessible only to the adventurer of unlimited means. We see achievements of men so stupendous that no description or ordinary picturing would avail to give even a faint conception thereof. The famous show places of the world, that the very small minority alone have hitherto been privileged to admire, are brought before our eyes for a nickel or a dime, expanding our knowledge of the world and its strange inhabitants, both human and animal, as nothing else would enable us to grasp the reality of its vast and incomparably interesting diversities.

Whoever will take the trouble, as I have, to listen to comments and to enter into conversation with enough patrons of the moving picture theater to obtain a correct opinion, will retain no doubt as to the worth of these productions as a factor, a powerful factor, in improving the minds of men and women, of boys and girls, who have neither time nor money to inform themselves otherwise, who find in the moving picture the only available models to fit them to become good citizens. Every such earnest student of social problems will agree that the benefit derived from the moving picture has been manifested beyond questioning

Eminent educators and clergymen in constantly increasing numbers declare the moving picture to be a most valuable aid in their respective fields, and some of these are so convinced of its value that they strongly advocate the installation of projecting apparatus in the schools and churches, realizing that studies that can be entertainingly illustrated are more fruitful in good results than instruction that is taken solely as a duty and is considered irksome and laborious

To be cheeringly entertained is one of the absolute needs of the people The "comedy" film provides that enjoyment and relaxation in proper measure at far less cost and risk than it is elsewhere obtainable.

In view of the indubitable aim of the leading producers of moving pictures to raise the standard of this industry with most commendable persistence—no less in the aspect of its art than in its utilitarian possibilities—and, moreover, in view of the undeniable fact that no class of business men has been so ready to conform to regulation by civic authority, however unreasonable in some instances it appears to many to be high time that the rightful claims of those engaged in this popular business be given as fair a hearing as the vilifications of its fanatical enemies

Miss Venita Fitzhugh (at top) and Mrs. Ida Fitzhugh, her mother, who says that 20 years of stage life has convinced her that the stage is a proper environment for a young girl—much safer than the office of the average business man. Miss Venita, just out of the Ursuline convent, is only 17 years of age, but owing to her beauty and excellent voice, she has been engaged to appear in a musical comedy

Plays and Players

James O'Neil will remain in the support of Viola Allen on her tour to the Pacific coast this fall, in F. Marion Crawford's "The White Sister." Mr O'Neil was to have starred this season, but because of requests made by both Miss Allen and Mrs. Crawford, wife of the late author Mr O'Neil has consented to stay in the cast for the western tour

Theodore Lorch may play a winter stock season in Little Rock, Ark. Manager Frank J. Head of the Capital theater of that city is [illegible] company for Little Rock, and if arrangements can be made, Mr. Lorch will open there October 1.

"Madame Sherry," which ran an entire season in Chicago with Lina Abarbanell in the title role, will have its first New York hearing August 29.

Zelda Sears has been engaged for a prominent role in the support of Thomas Ross in "High Life in Jail."

Madame Maurice Bernhardt, daughter-in-law of Sarah Bernhardt, died recently in Paris. Her mother was Louise de Mohr, a famous actress

Richard Jose, the well-known contra tenor, will open his second season in his comedy drama, "Silver Threads," early in September in Kansas City

Rose Melville, of "Sis Hopkins" fame, has purchased property in Los Angeles. She will build a $[illegible] home in that city.

Dustin Farnum has returned from Europe, where he has been motoring. After a few weeks' rest at his home in Buckport, Maine, Farnum will begin his tour of the south and west in "Cameo Kirby," his last season's success.

"The Family," by Robert H. Davis, editor of the Munsey publications, will be produced in New York this season by the Shuberts This play was tried out last season on the road by Henry Miller with success

Jeanette Loudie, who will be remembered by theatergoers of this city as the brightest spot in John Philip Sousa's "The Free Lance," will play the leading role in Henry W. Savage's production of "The Wife Tamers."

Mabel Wilbur and Charles Meakins head this season's production of "The Merry Widow." Others in the cast are Robert E. Graham, Edna Fisher, Leona Brandt and other well-known players

Justina Wayne will be starred in "Beverly" by Delancey and Norris. Next season Miss Wayne will be seen in the dramatization of a new novel by a popular author.

May Stewart and her mother, Mrs. Sylvester, are spending the summer in Colorado. Miss Stewart's past season included 29 weeks of one-night stands, covering 28,000 miles. Her new term opens the latter part of August.

Macklyn Arbuckle, under the management of Joseph Brooks, will be seen in a new comedy, "Welcome to Our City," adapted from the German by George Herbert. The opening will take place at the Bijou theter, New York, September 12.

"The Civic Functions of the Stage," was the subject of the address which Percy Mackaye, the author, delivered at the University of California July 19. Mr. Mackaye's latest play, a comedy, called "Anti-Matrimony" is being played by Henrietta Crosman on the coast and will shortly be seen in New York.

Mary Garden was given a tremendous ovation on the last representation of Strauss' "Salome" in Paris. She was acclaimed by the entire audience. The production was a superb one.

Madame Sallaman-Stevens, of Chicago, has been selected to sing the leading role in "Parsifal" at the forthcoming Wagnerian festival at Bayreuth, Germany.

Edgar Atchison Ely has been substituted for Julian Eltinge in the play originally intended for Eltinge, which will be under the management of Al H. Woods. "He Married a Man" is said to be one of the titles considered for the piece.

Blanche Walsh, after an absence from New York of several seasons, will be seen in that city in November in a new drama by J. Hartley Manners, entitled "Barbareza."

Mrs. Leslie Carter will open her season in Cleveland October 3. She will go to New York the latter part of the month. Rupert Hughes is the author of her new play.

"The Gamblers," a new play by Charles Klein will be produced in New York in September.

HIGH LIVING IS LIVING HIGH.

A Generation Ago the Florist Grew Potatoes and the Plumber Was a Farmer.

They were commenting as usual on the high price of pork tenderloin and the general expensiveness of living on their way home in the front vestibule, and they were taking it out on the trusts when Jorkins interrupted, seeing a man pushing a lawn mower

"Guess I'll have to see the man about cutting my lawn," he remarked

"I'm going to economize and cut mine this year myself" Brindle came back from his seat against the brass handle of the sliding door "This high cost of living—"

Whereupon McTavish snorted "High cost of living" he repeated "I'll bet when you were kids that you didn't hire a man to cut your lawn Also you didn't cut it with a lawn mower You mowed it with a scythe or maybe you hacked it off with a sickle. There you have the chief element in the high cost of living—the fact that we are living high Things that your father would have considered a luxury you consider—"

"You are quoting John Stuart Mill badly" put in Jorkins "What he said was that the luxury of today is the necessity of tomorrow Now go on."

Chickens for Potatoes.

"I don't care who said it, it's true. You are taking a lot of men out of productive farm work and setting them to making all sorts of little luxuries You not only have to pay for the luxuries, but you have fewer necessaries produced If I have a garden and raise potatoes and you have a henhouse and raise chickens right next door to me, we can exchange my potatoes for your chickens over the back fence and get the most possible out of our trade. But if I have to [illegible] then have to hire another to carry the sack of potatoes over to your house and bring back the chickens, why there are four of us have to make a living off the potatoes and chickens instead of two, so the share for each of us is cut down.

"When I was a kid and Saturday night came around we dragged a big wooden washtub into the kitchen, heated the water on the stove, and took our baths. Now we have a lot of complicated plumbing in the house all of which has to be manufactured and kept in repair at a lot of expense and we buy a heater to attach to the pipes to heat the water for the baths, and maybe we use a fifty-cent bottle of sea salt in the water I remember how I used to have to go up to the town pump for water when I was a boy. The water works are the modern town pump, but they cost more. The water didn't use to cost our family a cent. Now it costs us $20 to $30 a year.

The Luxuries of Shaving.

"Take such a minor matter as shaving I still shave myself, but I use a modern safety razor. The blades are a constant source of expense. My father kept his razor in condition without any expense. He used the family soap for lather. I use a powder that smells good and costs 25 cents a can. He never used witch hazel or talcum after shaving. I have succumbed to the advertising and use both. My mother used to cut my hair around a bowl that she put over my head and she used to wash it out for me. My son's hair is cut by a barber, who gives him a shampoo.

"The kid has a bicycle and a wagon and a cart that's propelled by pushing and pulling on a bar. None of those things came along in my day, except that once in a while a boy had a velocipede. If I wanted a wagon I made one sawed out the wheels or dug up an old baby carriage.

"Which suggests another thing. Part of this high cost of living is due to the fact that we have stuck for the eight-hour day at home as well as everywhere else. Every man used to expect to spend a good deal of his spare time tinkering around the house. Now we hire the tinkering done. If we wanted a door bell father installed it himself. He and we kids sawed and split the wood and carried it in When the house needed painting father and the boys did the job at odd times. Any number of families in towns put up their own hay and had their own eggs, and kept a cow. Even when we got our milk from a neighbor I went after it every evening. There was no extra charge for delivery.

Carried the Groceries Home.

"The expense of delivery must be an important item in the modern cost of living. I don't believe there was a delivery wagon in the town where I was brought up. We always expected to go to the store and buy our groceries and carry them home. Groceries didn't come in fancy packages then. We ate oatmeal instead of prepared breakfast food.

"When we kids played baseball we made the ball by winding string around a piece of an old rubber. The bat we shaved down from a piece of cord wood. Now a boy has to buy bats and balls, and masks and mitts, and shoes and uniforms. We had a melodeon in the parlor. Now you must have an inside piano player. Lots of people are skimping on the meals to buy Caruso records for their talking machine, which hadn't been invented forty years ago. Coal oil lamps or tallow dips were good enough a generation ago. Now we have electric lights. And telephones—why, my washerwoman has a telephone. And no family is complete without its camera to take a snapshot of the baby about three times a week—copies to be given at eight cents apiece to all the friends.

"I noticed that one agency sold $400,000 worth of motor cars in Kansas City territory in March. The millions of dollars invented in cars every year is withdrawn from productive industry. See how the florists shops have multiplied. There were mighty few of them twenty years ago Now I suppose Kansas City spends thousands of dollars a week on flowers. And magazines. Look in the windows of the newsstands and estimate the amount of money spent on them. When I was a boy we had to go in with a neighbor and subscribe for Scribner's. That was all we had We never thought of taking a daily newspaper When we rode on the train we sat up all night, and we carried hard boiled eggs and cake in a pasteboard box. Now we sleep in the Pullman and eat at a table de'hote dinner in the dining car which is finished in costly woods and decorated with flowers.

Conveniences Are Costly

"My point is this: We are consuming a lot of stuff used to be considered luxuries. So we are destroying capital that otherwise would go into productive industries. If we weren't buying flowers, for instance, the florist would be raising potatoes. So we are keeping a lot of men at work on the luxuries who would have been raising things to eat a generation ago. The consequence is that we raise less food, and what is raised has to support [illegible] proportionately, of course than was the case when we all lived youngstown."

"What you going to do about it?" inquired Jorkins. "Have us go back to the simple life of our barefoot days?"

"Nope," McTavish retorted. "We can never go back. We like the conveniences too well. But we've got to make up our minds to pay the bill"

WAR SPIRIT IS KEPT ALIVE BY POLITICAL SEERS

Germans Warned Against Being "Blinded by Peace Sun Now Shedding Its Rays so Brilliantly"—New Minister of Foreign Affairs Expected to Be Another Bismarck—King Peter Succeeds as Diplomat.

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—Never have the German people expected greater things from any minister of state than they do from their new secretary of foreign affairs, Herr Von Kidderlen-Wachter.

A pupil and disciple of Bismarck, the new minister is expected to lose no time in steering the ship of German diplomacy back into old time Bismarckian channels. The international situation is pictured by German political publicists as offering peculiarly attractive opportunities for his talents. Events both in the far and near east, he is assured, require Germany to be on the watch with more than ordinary vigilance, and on the moves she makes in the immediate future may depend, we are informed, not only the Fatherland's imperial future but the peace of the world.

Herr Von Rath, one of the popular political seers of the day, adjures Herr Von Kiderlen Wachter "not to be blinded by the peace sun now shedding its rays so brilliantly," not to overlook "the perils which will perhaps threaten us in the near future." Herr Von Rath thinks that the English prime minister's recent rosy speech should not divert German attention from "the possibility that we shall have to wage war on several fronts within a short time." From a variety of quarters the hope is ardently expressed that Herr Von Kiderlen, above all, will avoid the suspicion that he is a pacifist.

Interpreting this view, the "Post" resents angrily the suggestion that the kaiser should accept the Nobel peace [illegible] Germany has grown big and [illegible] through wars and there are still plenty of papers that dread the very idea of eternal and universal peace.

In Austria Herr von Kiderlen-Wachter's first move as German secretary of foreign affairs, his recent visit to his Austrian colleague, Count von Aehrenthal, at Marienbad even before he actually took up the duties of his office in Berlin, produced an exceedingly favorable impression.

The Austrian press lost no time in pointing out that the meeting between the two ministers was another striking illustration of the intimate relationship existing between Austria-Hungary and the German empire and the firmness of their alliance. Definite proof of this had already been placed before the world during the Servian crisis last year, and it is now looked upon as the strongest of the political forces of the day. The success attained last year by the two allied powers has been of immense benefit to both, and serves to strengthen the conviction that, acting in concert, they are invincible in their own sphere.

It is stated in well-informed circles at Vienna that the conversations of the two statesmen at Marienbad had no special reference to any particular question, but dealt more generally with the whole political situation, and that both ministers were in agreement on all pending questions.

The new German secretary has been a lifelong friend of Count Aehrenthal, and it is expected therefore that the intimacy of the Austro-German alliance will be even more pronounced in the future, consequently, than it has been in the past, if that is possible.

King Peter of Servia has every reason to feel proud of the fact that a commercial treaty between Servia and Austria-Hungary has at last been signed, for it is entirely due to his personal efforts, and his subjects fully realize that the treaty was absolutely vital to the kingdom of Servia.

The principal obstruction which had to be overcome was the strong opposition of the agrarian party in Austria, but by making concessions which really meant no loss to Servia King Peter succeeded in overcoming it and proved himself an exceedingly skillful diplomat and effectually ending the Servian crisis of 1909.

The Irish-German alliance is still in a bad way. The offer of armed assistance to Germany in the event of an Anglo-German war which was recently tendered by the president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians at Portland, Oregon, evoked a heartlessly cold douche in Berlin.

The Post, the well-known Conservative and government organ, declares that Germany would consider the help of the North American Irish, in case of hostilities with Britain, of very doubtful value. The Ancient Order of Hibernians are reminded, too, that they are unquestionably living in a fool's paradise if they imagine that a German triumph over England would mean the "liberation" of Ireland. This would seem to imply that when the conquest of Great Britain is effected the Emerald Isle will be annexed as well.

The British preparations for a possible advance of a military force into Tibet have excited adverse comment here, where they have come in the nature of a surprise. It is pointed out that England's action is contrary to the convention concluded with China and Tibet and to the Anglo-Russian treaty regarding Central Asia concluded in August, 1907. The clause regarding the prohibition of scientific expeditions into Tibet, however, will expire in a month's time, and it is asked ironically whether the advance can be styled a scientific one.

The Vossiche Zeitung says: "Why does England send forces into Tibet? Is the expedition intended to compensate England for Russia's progress in the north of Persia and the position she has attained in Manchuria? These questions are unsolved riddles. The real purpose can scarcely be any other than the restoration of the Younghusband treaty, which the English government repudiated after its conclusion."

Lady Wolseley, who has founded a farm home in order to give duchesses, countesses and other members of London's exclusive circle an opportunity to live close to nature.

King Peter of Servia, who has proved himself exceedingly diplomatic in bringing about a commercial treaty between Servia and Austria-Hungary.

CARNEGIE BUILDING PALACE OF PEACE

THE HAGUE, Holland, Aug. 20.—Andrew Carnegie's dream of a palace of peace will be realized in 1913 when the stately building now rising in the grounds of an old Dutch palace between The Hague and Scheveningen, will be completed. The building where the international court of arbitration is going on as Mr. Carnegie hopes to "settle the quarrels of the nations and to banish war," is being built after the designs of the eminent French architect, L. M. Cordonnier.

The plans provide for a building of brick and stone, with roof of blue Welsh slates, in character partly Flemish and Dutch, of a type reminiscent of some of the old Belgian town halls.

On the left a tower rises to a height of 260 feet. The court or council chamber is a hall 70 feet, 40 feet wide and 33 feet high. Three windows on one side face three imposing galleries on the other.

The upper floor is set apart for the rooms of the administrative council and permanent officials and for the library of 200,000 volumes.

AMERICAN ENGINEERS MOVE ANCIENT CHURCH

BRUSSELS, Aug. 20.—Two American engineers with eight workmen are engaged [illegible] moving [illegible] the [illegible] 1,200 tons, which is 600 years [illegible]. New foundations have been prepared for it and an elaborate arrangement of machinery to move it along. The journey is expected to occupy a week.

GRECIAN SITUATION IS CAUSING UNEASINESS AMONG DIPLOMATS

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Only a few days after the announcement that the Cretan executive committee had yielded to the invitation of the protecting powers and allowed the Mussulman deputies to sit in the assembly without taking the oath of allegiance to the king of Greece, a distinguished diplomat met me at the garden party of the Elysee.

"Ah," he said, "nous sommes tranquilles pour six semaines." He was a good prophet. The truce is hardly likely to last longer, and there are already signs of trouble in the expressed determination of M. Venizelos to run for the Greek parliament. Evidently, if he adheres to his decision, the worst is to be feared. He gives the French fresh occasion to say that England has dallied with this question, having ulterior motives to serve.

There is a disposition in official circles here to abandon the whole matter and let events take their course. France is half inclined to sulk under her tents and allow England, Russia and Italy to fight it out as they please. This state of mind is due to the reluctance of the English minister of foreign affairs to adopt any decision.

The present attitude is perfectly illogical, observed a keen student of the situation to me today. It is impossible to secure unanimity and any action of effective sort is immediately paralysed by the non possumus attitude of England. It is really too ridiculous. Let us decide what we are going to do, and let us do it—the present situation is intolerable, and will end in inflaming Turkey into a war, already irritated as she is by her difficulty with Bulgaria. The Liberal cabinet in England seems to be under the domination of the old Gladstonian fetish of phil-Hellenism.

Captain L. Sazerac de Forge of the French army, who is one of the enthusiasts for aviation, has given his views on what he calls humane services to the army which aeroplanes are destined to render in future warfare. It is sometimes supposed that the extensive use of flying machines would only add to the existing horrors of warfare, but according to him, they are more likely to reduce them. Dropping of shells or bombardment from flying machines, he says, is out of the question, and will never be attempted.

Aeroplanes in future wars will be used in saving lives formerly wasted in scouting. When the general in command wants to be informed of the strength and position of the enemy the aviation officer will get his flotilla of four aeroplanes ready. Two very fast flying machines, provided with special projectiles and mounted by a single aviator, will lead and commissioned to protect the advance of the other two aeroplanes, on which there are two officers.

Speeding along rapidly at a great height the flotilla passes over the enemy's outposts, inspects the ground below and detects the troops massed under the cover of houses, trees, or along the roads. The sight of artillery, which cannot be concealed, will reveal the strength of the force. In a few minutes the officers will have taken in everything and will return to headquarters with a precise report far more valuable than one retained by a skirmish.

ITALY BUILDING AN AERIAL FLEET

ROME, Aug. 20.—Early next year Italy will have an aerial fleet for which parliament has stood an appropriation of $3,000,000. Twenty four dirigible balloons are to be constructed during the coming autumn and winter, twelve on the plan of the existing military airship and twelve of a larger pattern. Two airships will be attached to each army corps and a special corps of aeronauts will be formed.

SOLDIERS IN INDIA BECOMING TEMPERATE

BOMBAY, Aug. 20.—Army temperance is apparently on the increase in India, judging by the report of the Royal Army Temperance association for this year ended March, 1910. The actual percentage of soldiers and non commissioned officers who have taken the pledge now amounts to 41.9.

"BIG FOOT SOCIETY" ORGANIZED BY WOMEN

The baroness [illegible] whose [illegible] [illegible] woman from Berlin attempted to enjoy mountaineering wearing small French shoes with high heels—the limit in unsuitability, discomfort and absurdity.

The society has several hundred members, who pledge themselves to appear everywhere even at dances and court functions in shoes of the largest possible size with sensible heels, and they further undertake to educate their children in the same principles.

ITALY TO SUPPRESS OBJECTIONABLE FILMS.

ROME, Aug. 20.—Objectionable moving picture shows are to be suppressed by law in Italy for the reason that the government believes that they are the main cause of the terrible increase of juvenile crime. According to the new law which the government has framed all films must be submitted before exhibition to local commissions for approval.

Objectionable films will be destroyed. No children under 14 will be allowed to witness the entertainments unless their parents are with them.

ZORN AIRSHIP IS GREATEST AERIAL WONDER

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—One of the most remarkable developments of German aeronautical science is the airship Zorn, which is considered to represent the latest advance in this domain of invention. Designed by Herr Zorn, from whom it takes its name, this, the newest aerial wonder, is really an aerial train, the three constituents parts of which can be uncoupled from one another during flight, so that the vessel can be divided at will into three separate airships. In its complete condition the Zorn airship bears some resemblance to the Zeppelin vessels, and belongs to the rigid type. The rigid frame is made of wood, whereas that of the Zeppelin ships is made of aluminum. The airship is 390 feet in length, and has a diameter of 42 feet and a capacity of 480,000 cubic feet.

The peculiarity of the airship is that the motion of the three sections can be inclined upwards or downwards or also to the right or left. The fore section for instance, might be pointed upward and the aft section downwards simultaneously, or the fore section might be inclined to the right and the aft section to the left simultaneously. The movements of the airship in its complete condition therefore resemble those of a fish or of a wriggling worm. For this reason the vessel has been nicknamed the "worm" airship. The different sections can be separated from one another in the air within two minutes and both fore and aft sections can be separated simultaneously or singly. The fore section has a length of 97 feet, the central section a length of 195 feet, and the aft section a length of 98 feet.

Each section supports three cars, two of which carry motors, while the third is reserved for the crew. In its complete condition the airship has nine cars, six of which carry motors and three the crew. Supposing the airship when in use for military purposes has made important observations, the fore section might be detached and sent back to headquarters with the supplementary information and photographs. If one of the sections suffered serious damage, its crew could board the other sections, and the damaged part could be cut loose and abandoned. Each of the smaller sections is divided into four airtight compartments.

After landing, the entire frame can be easily taken to pieces, packed and transported, so that in this respect this rigid airship offers equal advantages to those of the semi-rigid and unrigid types. The total cost of the Zorn airship is approximately $150,000. Many experts regard it as superior to all existing types owing to the remarkable facility with which it can be handled in the air, to its easy division into two or three parts, its reduced vulnerability owing to the rapidity with which one or both of the injured sections can be cut adrift, and to other technical advantages. The airship is fitted with a new type of motor invented by the German engineer Bucherer.

PRINCE IN DISGUISE INSPECTS HOSPITAL

LONDON, Aug. 20.—King George related a Haroun-al-Raschid adventure of his when visiting the London hospital, Whitechapel, the other day. While he was Prince of Wales he had been concerned to read newspaper articles alleging bad treatment of women in the out patients department of the hospital. The prince was deeply interested in the welfare and management of the hospital, and determined to see for himself if there was any truth in the accusations.

In the guise of a medical student the prince visited the department, taking Sir Frederick Treves, the famous surgeon, and Secretary Morris into his confidence and pledging them to secrecy. The prince left the hospital "perfectly satisfied that every possible care for the efficient, respectable and decent treatment of women was taken."

So well had the secret been kept that members of the hospital committee heard it for the first time from the king's lips.

From the Indianapolis News.

There are nearly half a million horses and motor vehicles of all kinds in Paris today, with 30,000 hand carts and 9,000 wheelbarrows. In 1909 8,870 accidents were caused in the Paris streets by 81,868 vehicles. These statistics are contained in a report drawn up by M. Emile Massard at the request of the Paris municipal council streets. One of M. Massard's calculations shows that the street traffic of Paris, if stationary, would occupy 44 acres of the 2,079 acres of streets which Paris possesses. Last year 800,000,000 persons traveled by omnibus and tramway, and there were 294,000,000 passengers on the underground railway.

KING GEORGE CONTENT TO LIVE IN OLD BUCKINGHAM PALACE

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—King George has announced that there is no truth in the rumor that he is dissatisfied with Buckingham palace and wants another royal residence to be built in London.

The ugly old building is very comfortable inside although it does not begin to compare with the town residences of several New York millionaires. It is, of course, not nearly as vast as King Alfonso's huge palace at Madrid. It is smaller than one wing of the Hradcany at Prague, and would go easily into the courtyard of the winter palace at St. Petersburg, but as King George has a much smaller income than that of Alfonso, the kaiser or the czar, he really cannot afford to maintain a larger palace, and as he is known to be of very economical habits this fact has probably something to do with his decision not to ask for another residence, even if many of his subjects would like to see him living in greater splendor.

The announcement that Jack Johnson, who has proved beyond doubt his claim to the heavyweight boxing championship of the world, is coming to England this month has caused but mild interest in sporting circles. Perhaps this is because it is imagined that since England has no heavyweight who can reasonably be matched against the champion, his visit will be merely to undertake a series of music hall engagements. But if my information is correct—and it comes from a source upon which I place complete reliance—Jack Johnson is to meet either Sam Langford or Tommy Burns at a venue—probably Stamford Bridge or Olympia—to be fixed over here in September.

The really correct thing for duchesses to do these days is to live the primitively simple life. The corollary is the Farm Home for the Elite.

There is a west end club—the Ladies Park club, situated in Knightsbridge, all the members of which have very blue blood indeed. The head of this institution, Lady Wolseley, conceived the bright idea of giving bored duchesses, countesses, and other ladies of title an opporunity of seeing life in the farmyard.

As a result, the Park club has formed a sort of sideshow, called the Home Farm Club for Ladies. It will give unheard-of opportunities to society folk of calming their overwrought nerves.

At a sequestered corner of the earth near Heston (Middlesex) an antique country residence has been bought and an army of painters, paperhangers and gardeners is at work. The farm is to be run on novel lines for the edification of the smart set who want to commune with nature.

Life there is to be almost severe. All meals will be plain, wholesome, farm meals of good simple food. It is the blackest sin for the lady member to play bridge or smoke within the sanctified walls, although she may perhaps sneak away from it for a whiff with the cows in the byre when no one is looking.

There are to be experts on the premises who will teach the members to keep bees, make bread, run a poultry farm and spin. The spinning is included in the category because the elect of society seem inclined to revert to that pastime. Therefore, at Heston they are to be able to spin between making the bread and feeding the pigs.

A remarkable flying machine embodying the rotary wing theory of flight is being built on original lines, and has little in common with the aeroplane. In point of size, it eclipses everything that has hitherto been done by builders of heavier-than-air machines.

The machine has already cost over $25,000 and a further $25,000 will be required to complete it. When finished, it will weigh over six tons, and it is designed to carry 20 to 30 passengers.

The advantages which the inventor claims for this machine are that it can travel in any kind of weather, by its own power it can raise itself vertically from the ground; the rotary wings, with their horizontal movement, enable it to hover in the air. It can attain a speed of over 150 miles an hour.

Mr. Davidson's theory of flight has been evolved from a prolonged study, extending over 27 years, of the natural laws which govern the flight of a bird. His machine bears a resemblance to the form of a bird.

For the wings he has two gigantic gyroscopes or rotary fans, 27 feet in diameter. They revolve horizontally, like inverted saucers, on either side of the body of the machine. The body of the structure reminds one of a double-decked street car on a slightly smaller scale. A salon for the passengers takes up the whole of the top portion and below is the engine room in which will be installed two 60 horsepower steam engines.

In front the machine tapers to a point like the stem of a boat, and ends in a beak or forward vertical rudder, which governs lateral direction. At the opposite end it is fitted with a horizontal rudder corresponding to the tail of a bird for controlling the elevation and equilibrium of the machine. The rotary lifters or gyroscopes are sufficient, the inventor maintains, to raise a weight of ten tons from the ground.

To satisfy himself as to the lifting power of the gyroscopes the inventor built a full size [illegible] machine in Colorado [illegible] and the series of tests which took [illegible] that year were [illegible].

Angel of Crimea Is Buried With Simple Services

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Florence Nightingale, the angel of the Crimea, who died August 13, at her London home, was buried this afternoon beside the bodies of her father and mother in the church yard of the little Hampshire village of East Wellow.

In accordance with her often-expressed wishes for a simple, private funeral, the ceremony was of the quietest nature, the only feature reminding of her great services to the army and the nation being the presence of a squad of Grenadier guards, who acted as bearers.

Outside of these, only members of the immediate family and a few retainers were present.

Public tribute was paid at a memorial service at noon in St. Paul's cathedral here, at which King George, Queen Mary, the Queen mother, Alexandra, the war office and admiralty and the greater part of the British public bodies and colonies were represented.

The United States ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, and Mrs. Reid were present.

The cathedral was crowded with the official representatives and thousands of private persons who had come to do honor to the dead, were unable to find places inside the church and stood outside during the ceremony.

Among the flowers sent were a number of wreaths contributed by American Nursing associations, and many prominent members of the American colony in London attended the service.

NEW BATTLESHIP IS BIGGEST AFLOAT

PORTSMOUTH, England, Aug. 20.—The Orion, Great Britain's newest and greatest battleship, was launched here today in the presence of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain.

Compared with the armored cruiser Lion, of 26,350 tons just launched, the Orion will displace only 22,500 tons, but her 10 13.5-inch guns and her new, deadly equipment of torpedoes render her by far the most powerful battleship afloat.

The new torpedo to be carried by the Orion weighs nearly a ton and its range will exceed 11,000 yards at a speed of 40 knots.

The torpedo carries a charge of gun cotton weighing 250 pounds. The Orion will have a speed of 21 knots and will carry 4,000 tons of fuel, giving her an unusually wide radius of action.

PIPES BECOME FASHIONABLE

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Pipes, if we are to believe the Figaro, are again in favor. The high taxes on tobacco have been the triumph. Our contemporary says that the pipe has invaded the fashionable world. There is no longer any doubt about it, and the reason for this is the increased price of cigars, cigarettes and all high grade tobacco.

EUGENIE GRANDET

A CLASSIC IN A PAGE

COPYRIGHT 1910, BY IRVING KING. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

"Eugenie Grandet" is as well known and as much read as any of the works of Balzac. Indeed, it has a claim to being the best known of his novels. It appeared first in its entirely in the first volume of his "Scenes from Provincial Life." In it Balzac strikes a chord which never will cease to vibrate in sympathy with the human heart, let it be struck in fiction or in real life—the chord of pure yet hopeless love. In this story, also, Balzac does not introduce, as he does in many of his works, so much of that dwelling upon vice in its various phases which, while it may pass as "art" or "a true portrait of real life," is, nevertheless, unmoral in its execution and immoral in its effects. When Balzac in his lifetime was accused of immorality in his writings he was much pained, and called attention to the many good women he had put into his books. Pre-eminent among them is Eugenie Grandet. In his way Balzac was sincerely and devoutly religious, and if, as Victor Hugo said at his burial, "it is not darkness now with him, but light," perhaps he would rather be judged by the novel of "Eugenie Grandet" than by many of his other writings.

M. GRANDET, the wealthiest citizen of Saumur, like "Leodogran, the King of Camelaird, had one fair daughter and none other child." There was no doubt that M. Grandet was the first citizen of the rather considerable French town. He was a cross-grained, heartless old miser, but he was a power and few of the citizens but had at one time or another felt that power. While all the people feared him and most hated him, they had, nevertheless, a certain local pride in the possession of a man of such wealth, and used to boast that there were three millionaires in the place, and as for M. Grandet he was worth so much that it was doubtful if he could tell how rich he was himself. Apprenticed in his youth to a cooper, Grandet had made up his mind to get on in the world, and in anticipation of the higher station to which he had resolved to climb at whatever cost he learned to read, to write a fairly legible hand and to keep account in an entirely accurate if not a very scientific manner.

Thus equipped, he worked his way up to be a master cooper and saved his money, doing a little loan business upon good security with the necessitous and taking all the interest he could get. Grandet was 40 years old before he could decide upon matrimony, and, because of his reticence and gravity beyond his years people were beginning to call him Father Grandet. Grandet did not delay marriage thus long because he was finicky in his choice, but because he was exceedingly particular about the dowry his wife would bring him. At 40, however, he selected the daughter of a rich wood merchant, who, at the command of her father, married him and never knew a happy day thereafter.

Those were the days of the wild, swift movement of things in France, and fortunes and thrones were beginning to change hands, the old order had been thrown into the melting pot and if men like Bonaparte, Murat and Bernadotte could mold crowns out of it, men like Grandet could mold fortunes. When the new republic, strong and glorious in battle, gory, cruel and destructive in government, offered the church lands for sale in the Saumur district Grandet saw a bargain and putting together his own small fortune and his wife's dowry, he bought an old abbey with one of the finest vineyards in the district and several outlying farms for a small fraction of their value. Now, indeed, was he become a man of real importance, a landed proprietor, and gave up his coopering. Citizen Grandet he was now, and people began to treat him with respect whether they felt it or not.

At first they laughed at his crude peasant ways and ridiculed him behind his back. But they soon ceased to laugh at anything pertaining to Citizen Grandet, for they found to their cost that he and his affairs were no laughing matters. Gradually they learned to obey instinctively that stern, inflexible, merciless will and when Grandet wanted to be mayor, mayor they made him.

He made a good mayor; no one could say that he did not govern justly, though his justice was never tempered with mercy. Grandet neither neglected his business as mayor nor those many little methods of honest "graft" whereby high-placed officials are enabled in every age to enrich themselves if they choose to do so and which were at that time in France particularly numerous and profitable. Of course, Grandet was a most pronounced republican. It paid to be in those days. But as the consulate began to fade before the shadow of the coming empire the great Corsican who had been busily at work regenerating France even in the government of the most distant provinces, had at last introduced such reforms as greatly to [illegible] the worthy mayor, and so reduced his pickings that when the emperor finally dismissed him Grandet was not sorry to give up his job. There was no money in it.

With his growing fortune Grandet did not change his manner of living. He still dwelt in the modest house in which he had lived for so many years and where one servant sufficed for his household establishment. This one servant was a character in her way, and from her great height—she was a tall, bony, muscular woman—was known as le Grand Nanon. Nanon had gone from door to door in Saumur in the days of great distress for bread, begging for employment. But until she came to the door of Grandet none would have her, she looked so gaunt, so slatternly, so incompetent. But Grandet looked at her, saw that she was capable of doing the work of two ordinary women and hired her for the magnificent salary of 60 francs a year. Grandet had bought Nanon because she was a bargain—nothing else. But Nanon never forgot that he had taken her in when no one else would and loved her master and looked after his interests like a [illegible] dog, obeying his most harsh and unreasonable commands with alacrity and good will.

As for Mme Grandet, as she was now called—for the ex-cooper had become monsieur—she had long been reduced by her husband to the condition of a trembling slave. He treated her with harshness or indifference, often with cruelty, seemed to regard her as an incumbrance upon the money she had brought him and to begrudge her the very food she ate, in spite of the fact that, through her, Grandet ultimately came into the possession of three considerable fortunes—which he added to his own—the fortunes of Mme. Grandet's mother, that of her grandfather and that of madam's grandmother on her mother's side.

When all these riches had been added to the wealth the stern old miser already possessed, there was no doubt of his pre-eminence in wealth among the people of the district of Saumur. He had a hundred acres of vineyard, 13 farms, the old abbey, 127 acres of meadow land and the house in which he lived. But besides this he had personal property, the extent of which was known to no one. Two persons, however, amused themselves by making rather shrewd guesses at the personal estate of the great man, while the populace let its fancy range regarding it.

The two who from their relations to M. Grandet were best qualified to make a guess at his unseen wealth were M. Cruchot, a notary, who was most useful to Grandet in his money lending business, and M. des Grassins, who did the biggest banking business in Saumur, and with whom Grandet was a silent partner. M. Cruchot had a nephew who signed himself C. de Bonfons, because he had an estate called Bonfons, worth 7,000 francs a year. This nephew was 33 years old, and president of the civil courts of Saumur. Also M. Cruchot had a brother, the abbe, and M. de Bonfons expected to inherit the property of both uncles, who were reputed very wealthy. There were 20 families of standing in the town connected by blood or marriage with the Cruchots. Altogether, they formed a little party of their own, and were at enmity with the party of the Des Grassins, which consisted of the banker his wife, their son, Adolph, aged 23, and many cousins and allies.

Now, the cause of the enmity of the Des Grassins party and the Cruchot party, an enmity which, though not openly displayed, was nevertheless violent enough to divide the society in Saumur into two hostile camps and keep it continually agitated, was the desire of the Cruchots that M. de Bonfons should capture the hand and fortune of Eugenie Grandet, and the determination of the Des Grassins that the prize should be carried off by Adolph. So they hated each other, conspired against each other and fought each other like the Montagues and Capulets, only they stabbed secretly with words instead of swords and stilettos and tried to outdo each other in rendering service to old Grandet.

It was a dreary life that Eugenie lived in the house of her father, a life not only without luxury, but one in which even necessities were cut down to the most economical point. Nanon cooked and washed, went late to bed and was up early. Mme. Grandet, weak and complaining, was gradually dying under the cold oppression of her miserly husband. There was little or no company. Grandet neither accepted nor gave invitations to dinner—dinners cost money. He went nowhere socially and permitted Eugenie to go nowhere. Once in a great while the Cruchots and the Des Grassins were allowed to come in of an evening and, if it was a festal occasion, two candles were lighted and there was a mild game of lotto in which Mme Grandet took part. If she won the old man was pleased. If she lost he scolded her. Usually the evenings were passed by the light of a solitary tallow candle, the family sitting gloomily before a scanty fire.

Grandet spoke but little anywhere and "I don't know," "I will see about it," and "I will not" were about all he was ever heard to say in public, except when, desiring time to make a decision he would declare that he must first consult his wife, as he never took any important steps unless with her permission. All the world of Saumur knew that this latter statement was a lie, that Mme Grandet was a mere wretched cipher, never having any knowledge of her husband's affairs and still less consulted. But so great is the power of wealth everybody to whom he said it tried to make himself believe that he spoke the truth.

Grandet had a brother in Paris who like himself, had been successful amid the opportunities afforded by the Revolution. This Paris Grandet was mayor of one of the arrondissements of the capital, a colonel of the national guard and a judge of the commercial courts. He held himself as being well on the way to become an aristocrat, a species of being now come rather into favor again—and had nothing to do with his miserly brother of Saumur. His brother, on the other hand, did not concern himself about his Paris relative, and considered him a fool, in spite of his business success, for his aspirations to [illegible]. [illegible] the Paris Grandet had not only wealth, but a son, Charles, now a young man of 22, a handsome fellow and one of the greatest dandies in France.

Some of the older people in Saumur nodded their heads wisely and declared that old Grandet would never let his money go out of the family, and that, in spite of the fact that the brothers had seen each other but twice in 20 years, they would not be surprised if some day the elegant Charles should come to Saumur and carry off the prize from beneath the noses of both Cruchots and Des Grassins. Eugenie dreamed, as other girls dream, and the thought of her Paris cousin, perhaps, came occasionally into her dreary life, so that she pictured what he was like and asked herself whether she would love him or not.

Eugenie's birthday was in the middle of November, and as Grandet loved his daughter as much as it was possible for him to love anything but money, he celebrated it in a manner which was, for him, extravagant. To begin with, the fire in the living room was lighted for the first time since it had been allowed to go out early in the previous spring. Then he went to his daughter's bedside early in the morning and gave her a real gold piece, with instructions to hoard it carefully. In the evening the Cruchots and the Des Grassins were invited in after dinner, and the living room was illuminated with two candles. So the years passed, one much like the other and each cheerless and comfortless, until revolving time brought around Eugenie's twenty-third birthday. The father gave her the customary piece of gold in the morning and the mother gave her a winter and a summer dress. Two dresses a year, presented on her birthday, was considered quite enough for the girl. In the evening the usual company assembled. There were Mme. and M. des Grassins and the young Adolphe, looking his best and putting on his most agreeable [illegible]; there were the Cruchots, the notary, the abbe and the titulated nephew, M. de Bonfons.

Each and every one of them exerted himself to his utmost to pay court to the miser and his family, the Des Grassins being especially obsequious in order to offset a recent advantage gained by the Cruchots in the warfare by reason of a little skill in manipulation on the part of M. de Bonfons, the president of the civil courts, whereby, through the advantages afforded by his official position, he had been enabled, with the help of his uncle the abbe, to secure to M. Grandet the purchase, at a great bargain, of the large estate of the Marquis de Froidfond, who had got into financial difficulties. The company played at lotto—all except Grandet who sat and watched them with a grim smile, saying all the while to himself that he saw through his guests and their obsequiousness. "They all want my money," said he to himself, "but they will be fooled. Yet they are useful to me and I like to see them grovel. I use them for my own purposes and the fools think to use me." The stakes were small in the lotto game, but when Mme Grandet won a pool of 16 sous her husband was almost kind to her.

As they sat there, the old cynic gloating over them and madame joyful at her winnings, there suddenly came a knock upon the door which made all the women start, so loud and thunderous was it. With a growl the old man told Nanon to take one of the candles and accompany him to the door. Madame, sure that it must be a robber who knocked so loud, called and ran after her husband. But he roughly told her to go back to her lotto and continue winning. But the company could no longer put their minds upon the game, the noise of heavy luggage being carried up stairs so excited their curiosity. Finally Grandet returned to the room, ushering in a handsome young man, richly dressed in the height of fashion and with a rather supercilious but aristocratic bearing, whom he introduced as his nephew, M. Charles Grandet of Paris. Eugenie's heart gave a little jump. Here was the youth of whom she had dreamed, her cousin Charles. And he was more than all her fancy had painted him. How he outshone the two provincial beaux, De Bonfons and Adolphe des Grassins.

Charles had come down into the country prepared for conquest. His father had sent him, he did not know why, to visit this miserly old uncle, and he had [illegible] it and take the opportunity to dazzle the country folk. So he had brought along the most splendid clothes in his wardrobe and was presented to the assembled company arrayed like Solomon in all his glory.

The advent of this young man was but illy received by the Des Grassins and the Cruchots, and in the presence of so great a common danger they made common cause against him. They looked him over with affected disdain and tried to be mighty sarcastic, not even the danger of offending old Grandet being sufficient to make them fully control their tempers. But Charles took everything with an easy nonchalance, seemed not to be aware of their agitation and treated them with an easy condescension, which had just enough of patronizing insolence in it to make them more furious.

Old Grandet took one of the candles and, retiring a little to one side, opened and read a letter which Charles had handed him upon his arrival. It was from his father, Charles had said, as his uncle would see upon breaking the seal, and though he did not know its contents, his father had told him it would declare the cause of his unexpected visit. Old Grandet read the letter through in silence, and when he had finished glanced up from it to his nephew, his face looking drawn and haggard, with a sacred look upon it in the light of the flickering candle. His air was almost humble as he turned to Charles and asked him if he had warmed himself after his ride. The young man assured his uncle that he was now thoroughly warmed and the miser asked his wife sharply if the young man's room was all ready for him.

The company at this hint took their departure, and, madame going to see that Charles' chamber had been properly prepared, the uncle and nephew were left alone together. Grandet looked at the Paris dandy in silence for a moment and then said, "We will talk of the contents of the letter tomorrow. It is too late to talk tonight. We go to bed early here. We breakfast at 8. We shall find some suitable time tomorrow to talk over some serious matters. Meanwhile, good night." Gracefully saluting his aunt, who had now returned, and bidding a courtly good night to his uncle, Charles sought his room to dream of conquests and of the way in which he would make the country beaux green with envy by his city clothes.

Old Grandet had a rather troubled sleep that night. The contents of the letter had been of the most startling sort. In it his brother had stated that he had failed in business and was penniless, that by the time the letter came to the hands of the person to whom it was addressed he would have blown his brains out, being unable to survive the disgrace of his financial ruin. He commended Charles to the care of his nearest relative and trusted that Grandet would treat him as a son and provide for his future. Grandet knew that his brother was a man of his word and that by this time he was cold in death—a suicide and pauper.

Next morning Charles did not appear at the breakfast table and Nanon reported that she had gone to awake him, but found him sleeping soundly. "Let him sleep," replied Grandet. "What he will learn when he awakens will not please him. His father has committed suicide." "My poor uncle!" exclaimed Eugenie, while her mother cried out, "Poor Charles!" Grandet expressed no feeling of pity or sympathy, but said that the young man would have to make his own living now. He was utterly destitute and must go to work at once. Eugenie began weeping bitterly and her father said gruffly: "If you are crying over that young dandy, save yourself the trouble. You will never see him after a few days, for I am going to send him off to the West Indies as soon as possible. And you, Mme Grandet, will also spare yourself the trouble of sympathising with my penniless nephew. Also you will not say a word to him concerning what has happened. I will do the talking." Taking his hat, Grandet went out and it was not until noon that he returned home.

Meantime Charles had arisen and, making his toilet with great care and deliberation, had arrayed himself in his most becoming suit of clothes, put on his most gorgeous waistcoat and come gayly down to the living room. Eugenie and her mother received the young man with a tenderness which surprised and flattered him. He saw that they were sad as well as tender, but attributed the sadness to some matter which did not concern him and in which he was not interested. Charles was impressionable and Eugenie caught his fancy. He exerted himself to be agreeable to her and to win her fancy in return.

It was not until Grandet had received from Paris a confirmation of the news conveyed to him in his brother's letter that he told Charles of what had happened. The young man, who had suspected nothing, was overwhelmed. For several days he was in a state of collapse and unable to leave his room. They could hear him sobbing and groaning there and his grief stirred afresh, through sympathy, the grief of Eugenie.

All her life Eugenie had a firm and steadfast faith in her father. She never had thought of questioning what he said or what he did even in her most secret soul. But the coarse, cruel and unfeeling manner in which the old man commented upon the grief of Charles opened her eyes to what sort of man he really was. All the implicit faith, the reverence and humble confidence in him vanished. He stood revealed to his own child in all the miserable hideousness of his sordid soul. This was because Eugenie (though she did not know it) loved her cousin, and love works changes which reason is powerless to accomplish.

Old Grandet scolded his family roundly for their sympathy with the young man. He declared that in his letter his father had requested that Charles be sent out to the West Indies, and that as soon as he had done with his weeping out to the West Indies he would go. He would have no penniless dandy hanging about his house and the best thing Eugenie could do was to forget that there ever had been such a person as her cousin. Mme. Grandet, though deeply sympathizing with Charles, was herself [illegible] at the [illegible] her that if she was not careful her sympathy would grow into love, and that her father would permit her to marry a man without fortune was something not to be for a moment imagined.

Meantime Grandet was investigating his brother's affairs. He found that he had failed for four millions and the assets would nowhere near meet the liabilities, even if the debts were bought up cheaply. Grandet consulted De Bonfons in regard to the matter. That shrewd lawyer saw that the only thing which really grieved Grandet, now that the first shock of his brother's suicide was over, was the disgrace which would be brought upon the family name by a bankruptcy. So he suggested that, instead of throwing his brother's estate into bankruptcy, it might be placed in liquidation. It sounded better, would give more time and was, altogether, the best thing to do. It was with satisfaction and confidence that the creditors of the dead insolvent heard that Grandet of Saumur had taken up the matter of his brother's estate. They had no doubt that, to save the family name, Grandet of Saumur would pay everything in full. The financial standing of the old miser was well known even in Paris. But Grandet of Saumur planned to save the family name—not to pay. His nomination of Des Grassins as one of the liquidators was well received by the creditors and a banker of Paris was associated with him. Then Grandet set to work to buy up his brother's debts for as little as possible and twisted and turned to make the little the dead man had left go as far as possible. At this sort of business Grandet was a wonder.

Charles recovered from his grief, which after all had been largely grief for his own hard fate. The young man had every appearance of noble ideas and lofty sentiments without having them—he was a man of the world and a child of Paris. He had been rather taken with his cousin but now that he found himself penniless he forgot Eugenie herself in contemplating the advantage which he might derive from the possession of Eugenie's fortune. But to Eugenie Charles was a hero and demi-god in distress. He was the first who had brought love into her life. His presence had made the dreariness of her existence bud and blossom into something rare and strange to her and unguessed before.

But the time came when, at the stern command of old Grandet his nephew was to leave the house and begin his journey out into the world to seek his fortune across the ocean. Eugenie went to him with the little hoard of gold composed of the pieces which her father had given her upon her birthdays and pressed the pitiful treasure upon the man she loved. Charles did not refuse the offering. He did, however, have the grace to open his traveling dressing case and show her a secret compartment in which were two portraits, one of his father and one of his mother, set in frames of gold enriched with pearls. He gave her the case, saying that if he should die, or should not be able to repay her what she had advanced him, the pearls and the gold would recompense her.

Eugenie looked at Charles with a glance of rapture. How noble, how thoughtful he was! He saw the look and seizing her hand kissed it fervently. "Oh, what to us is sordid gold or miserable pearls!" cried Charles. "Between us there can be, from now henceforth, only feelings and the sentiment of love." On the eve of his departure Charles managed to see Eugenie alone and the young people exchanged their vows, each promising eternal constancy. He pressed rapturous kisses upon her lips and she returned them. "I am thine forever," they repeated to each other over and over again as they embraced.

Old Grandet felt mightily relieved when he saw his nephew set out the next morning. He kissed him on both cheeks and bade him go and make his fortune. "Come back rich," he said. "In the meantime I will take care of the honor of your father. You can leave his name safely in my hands." So the handsome Charles went forth to do battle with the world and Eugenie sat herself down to dream and to wait. The ocean rolled between her and Charles, but her thoughts flew over it, swift and strong, to the palm-covered isles where the man she loved was toiling for her, toiling that he might come back and make her his own. If she was pensive, she was not unhappy for she believed and loved, and if the time seemed long to her, she was cheered by the vision of what awaited her at the end of the dragging years.

The liquidators of the estate of Grandet of Paris paid 45 per cent of the claims against it with commendable promptness, but when the creditors, after a long wait, asked for another dividend, the liquidators were [illegible] that they had no further funds. The creditors wrote off to Grandet of Saumur. The old man threw the letter into the fire and let the creditors rage. The estate was in liquidation. They must wait. Finally, the birthday of Eugenie came around once more and according to custom her mother gave her the usual two dresses and the father went early to her bedside with his gift. Something prompted the old man this time to see Eugenie's little hoard. Perhaps he wanted just to gloat over it. He loved the sight of gold. After hesitating a while Eugenie confessed with tears that she did not have it. Her father was furious and rushing upon her demanded what she had done with it. The mother, who was present, cried out that his conduct would kill her, but he replied that in her family people obstinately refused to die. The mother sank fainting to the floor and Eugenie called out that he had killed her. "Oh, I am dying," cried Mme. Grandet. "Nanon help me to my bed."

With a curse the old man turned to leave the room, roughly commanding Eugenie to come down to him as soon as her mother had been placed in her bed. Eugenie still refusing to tell what she had done with her golden hoard was confined for a time by her father in her room and fed upon a diet of bread and water. It was only the evidently rapid decline of Mme. Grandet that finally caused the father to set the girl at liberty. Mme. Grandet lingered on for some months and it was only when she was near death that the hard hearted old miscreant her husband would allow her to have a physician. Before she died, she said to her daughter: "Eugenie, there is no happiness on this earth—only in Heaven. We women are born to suffer—and die."

Left alone now with her father the years went dragging along their weary length until five of them had been numbered. And in all that time Eugenie received no word from Charles. She tried to account for his silence in various ways. Perhaps he had not succeeded and was ashamed to write until he had. Perhaps he would come the next day rich and proud, to claim her hand. And then the horrible thought—perhaps he was dead. But had he been dead she would have heard of it, she thought—her father would have been informed. Then her father one day fell down in a paralytic shock and Eugenie tended him with tender care until he died, telling her with his last words to take care of his money, as he would demand an accounting of her when they met after death. Eugenie was now quite alone in the grim old house with no one but Nanon to talk to her. She found herself enormously rich—but alone. Oh, where was Charles? This she kept saying to herself sometimes aloud and Nanon tried her best to comfort her.

It was not long after the death of his uncle that M. Charles Grandet returned from the West Indies and returned with a very considerable fortune—in fact he who went out penniless returned a millionaire. But he did not hasten to Saumur, he went to Paris and lingered there. On his way home Charles had made the acquaintance of one M. D'Aubrion, a gentleman of the court of Charles X. M. D'Aubrion and his wife had dissipated their fortune, and were possessed of an ugly daughter whom they wished to marry without a dowry to some rich person desirous of social advancement. In Charles Grandet D'Aubrion thought he had discovered the very person they had been looking for. He invited him to his house and Mme. D'Aubrion struck the bargain. She had still a great influence at court, and promised that, if Charles would marry her daughter, he might have a royal license to assume the name and arms of D'Aubrion and Captal de Buch. Charles was delighted with the contract and began to think and speak of himself as the Count D'Aubrion.

He believed that his father's affairs had been settled by his uncle, and was, therefore, greatly disquieted when, hearing of his return, Des Grassins called upon him and told him that 200,000 francs was still needed to pay off his father's creditors. But, quickly recovering himself, Charles declared that he would have nothing to do with his father's affairs. Des Grassins told him that in a few days his father's estate would be declared bankrupt. Charles replied that that meant nothing to him—it would not besmirch his name for in a few days he would bear the name of D'Aubrion and not that of Grandet.

As for that little cousin down in the country—well, Charles thought he might as well write to her. She had been kind to him and had given him her little stock of money to begin life on. So he wrote, telling her of his approaching marriage and sending her a check for the principal and interest of the amount she had loaned him. Also he said she might send the dressing case he had left with her to the Hotel d'Aubrion, Rue Hillerin-Bertin. "Alas, as my mother said," exclaimed Eugenie as the letter fell from her hands. "No happiness in this world. Suffer—and die." Through Des Grassins Eugenie learned of the banker's call upon Charles and of his refusal to pay his father's debts.

That evening M. de Bonfons called. He was rich now and prominent. Talking alone with him, Eugenie said that she was well aware that he wanted to marry her—and aware why. She would make a bargain with him. He could have her hand and her fortune if he would leave her free during her whole life and swear to claim none of the rights which marriage would give him over her. She would give him friendship but nothing more. And he must perform a service for her first. He must go to Paris and pay from her funds the debts of Charles' father, delivering the receipts into Charles' own hands.

M. de Bonfons [illegible] accepting the proposal and Charles was [illegible] to get the receipts into his hands. [illegible] when he heard from De Bonfons of the immense fortune which his uncle had left to Eugenie he thought that, perhaps, after all, he had made a [mistake] in not [illegible]. De Bonfons [illegible] rapidly in public office after his [illegible] and was on the way to become a [illegible] when he died. His fortune, [illegible] was very great, went to Eugenie by terms of their marriage contract. [illegible] Eugenie was alone again. She was possessed of [illegible] wealth but not happiness. She lived on in the simple manner in which she had always lived and spent her money in works of charity, [illegible] the [illegible] opportunity until, at length, [illegible] in Heaven that happiness which she [illegible] known on earth.

BISMARCK ON WOMEN.

New York Press.

Berlin suffragists bring out Bismarck as a champion and are spreading a leaflet of hitherto unpublished conversation which Bismarck had with a beautiful young woman just before he retired to private life. "Mark my words," said Bismarck, "the day will come when women will be called to co-operate in politics. We men are all clumsy. We Germans especially are bears. So are the diplomatists. Moreover, if women were in politics, fewer secrets would become public, for a clever feminine mouth can keep silent. Yet, in the midst of innocent conversation it understands how to extract many a secret which it keeps from us men. Woman chatters so delightfully about the gravest topics that one—when one is an old donkey—fails to notice one has said more than one wished. In everything that has to do with slyness woman is our superior. What I am I have become through my wife. I respect every woman who elevates us men, teaches us religion and morality, preserves our ideas and scatters roses along the path of our earthly life. I have long wished for the co-operation of women in politics, but we are not yet advanced enough. Women should not encroach upon men, but should influence and soften them and lead them to good works. If Germany's men become weak, Germany's women will become strong."

DENIED HIMSELF THE PRIVILEGE

From the Detroit News-Tribune.

"Waal, some ways I'd like to an' some ways I guess I wouldn't," said honest Farmer Bentover when the suave dispenser of encyclopedias had paused in his siren song. "Ye see if I was to sign for that ere cyclopedee in 40 parts including the index an' appendicitis I'm sorter afraid I'd hev to work so hard to pay for it that I'd be too tired to enjoy readin it, while if I read it at my leesure as I'd ort to, in order to get the good of it I wouldn't hev time to earn the price. So, all things considered I guess I'll hev to deny myself the privilege, as it were. Looks sorter like rain off to the south-west, don't it?"

$3,500 for 8 Rooms

This fully modern house, in first class repair, is in the very choicest part of the city, and has been steadily tumbling in price from $4,500 to that given above. In our judgment, for a moderate priced home it is the "best buy" in the city. An ideal place for high-class roomers and from $500 to $800 less than its actual worth. If there is another bargain like this, we don't know where it is.

Classified Advertisements Bring Answers by Mail.

NEARLY every time the postman makes a delivery to The Gazette Office he has a big bundle of letters for the classified advertisers.

When you want to buy or sell; when you want an employe, or when you want a position, you can advertise without having it known all over town. You can have the answers to your advertisement delivered to The Gazette Office, and nobody will know who is advertising until you want to let them know.

You'd be surprised to know how many people avail themselves of the conveniences of The Gazette Office. Last week, a widow, quite prominent in social circles, decided that she wanted to rent one of her rooms in her spacious house. Of course, she didn't want the whole town to know that she was taking in boarders. She placed a little WANT AD. in THE GAZETTE and had the people who wanted that kind of a room send their letters in care of THE GAZETTE. She called, received the letters, and answered the ones that looked right to her. Today she has a boarder, and her neighbors don't know that she advertised.

CHOCOLATE FOR BEAUTY.

Popular Science Siftings.

An eminent physician is accustomed to prescribe, for many of his young women patients, half a pound of chocolate daily—to be eaten whenever the lady feels like it. It is prescribed for beauty. It is considered that the chocolate is beneficial as a food; but he prescribes it, in case of complexion trouble most particularly, for no other purpose than to make the patient thirsty and thereby compel her to drink water. Two facts may be set down as undeniable. First, that few women drink as much water as they ought to drink. Secondly, that this habit of not drinking enough water is largely accountable for troubles of the complexion. Medical science tells us that purity of complexion depends first and fundamentally upon the condition of the interior of the body. If the latter be not thoroughly cleansed, the skin will be muddy. Hence the necessity of drinking plenty of water, which is the only effective agent that can be utilized for the purpose.

SINCEREST FLATTERY.

From Lippincott's Magazine.

"Harold," said the one, "I've just seen your triolet in the Spread Eagle Magazine."

"Ah!" exclaimed the other, a pleased expression coming into his face, and with the air of a man preparing himself against a burst of praise.

"Yes," continued the second poet, "and, do you know I heard rather a neat little compliment passed on it by a young lady of my acquaintance."

Harold seemed still more pleased. "May I ask what she said?" he quiered.

Whereupon the first minor poet gurgled, "Why," said he, "she wanted to know whether I had written it."

DAHLIA AND POTATOES

Dundee Advertiser.

By a curious horticultural irony, the dahlia, which is the popular idol of all our early autumn flower shows, has a dreadfully prosaic parentage. It has been developed from the Mexican tubers, introduced about 120 years ago by the Swedish naturalist, Dr. Dahl, for the purely commercial purpose of supplanting or supplementing the potato. They did not "catch on," and the dahlia dish soon disappeared from British dinner tables, but our gardeners at once perceived the great potentialities of the flower, and proceeded to produce the double dahlia and other delightful floral fantasies. The tubers of the dahlia, too acrid for our insular taste, are still eaten in some parts of France.

"Seen Abroad"

Simple Foulard Gown, Shirred Skirt.

An Odd Foulard with Turkish Bordure.

"Lucile" Model Afternoon Gown of Chiffon.

IADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, writes each week a fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches or photographs from her exclusive model.

Lady Duff-Gordon's article to-day deals with the fashions of the Riviera, and the latest word from Paris and Vienna is shown.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

I HAVE just been taking a trip through the Riviera and it has occurred to me that you would be interested in knowing what is the last word of fashion from Trouville, Royan, Vichy, Biarritz and Monte Carlo.

The craze of the moment is for practical fabrics nainsook, linon, muslin, English embroideries and piece laces all that are worn over color transparencies—vie with shantung, linen, tussore, foulard and fabrics of which tailored suits are made and which are often not even lined.

The jackets are in an extraordinary number of fashions. Some have broad, turned-over collars, some are of empire style with shortened waists, shirred at the waist line with small velvet bias around the encolure, finishing in a cravat, the ends of which are embroidered in colors, edged with velvet. Soutache braid is still very popular. Some jackets are rounded off and fastened on the left with a belt of the same material or a border of hidden kid. In this tyle the collar is cut out in some pretty shape of silk, linen or other tissue in contrasting shade, with embroidered buttons encircled with broad black galon, which is repeated twice on the sleeves and twice on the basque.

A new jacket model has a large, turned-over collar, made of coarse silk, the sleeves are shirred, with gauntlet cuff of silk to harmonize. Passementerie adorns the collar cuffs and basques and the tab.

I saw another little jacket. It had a straight front and adorned with the loveliest black and blue satin bands, which border the whole jacket, the seams in front and continued at the back in the form of panels.

My transparent jackets have been curiously adapted, and I saw copies of them everywhere, generally in black, in white or in the color of the frock. They are very charming, but I must admit that I found it hard to recognize some of my artistic children.

The skirts which accompany the jackets harmonize in the bias pleats, panels and trimmings with the respective jacket worn. And, oh, my, what a variety! Some skirts are classical, short trotteau, very simple and paneled most elaborately.

Everywhere one sees the skirt cut in at the hem. But I have not yet seen on a lady of the real world that particularly eccentric bag shaped shirred at the hips and at the knees, with broad, flat bias descending over the invisible feet. This skirt is generally fastened to the carriage and the whole is made of brilliant effect. I will wear a gown in one color. No elegant ladies, even the tall ones, wear khaki and black any more, as these have become too common.

I find that tailored suits of satin and silk are the craze of the moment, and have taken the place of the cloth tailor-made, and even of foulard dresses for afternoon wear. Hats are bigger than ever, but they are worn at a more reasonable angle. The bell shapes, which protect the face so well from the scorching suns, raise their charm with quills, heads of birds, liberty or with the very fashionable Turkish shawls and Jouy linen, of which so many blouses and trimmings are made. The toques take bold and unusual shapes resembling the imperial Bicorn, the policeman's headgear, the toreador's hat, or the Russian or Persian bonnet. The wings are turned up, threatening the sky like the head of a red Indian chief.

Everyone knows that I detest the high collar, and I was glad to see that all young women, except those who are too thin, or ill, or had too ugly necks left the neck bare with a collarette. Only shirtwaists are made with an approach to a high collar, and even that is turned over and loose, which is vastly more becoming.

A curious change, I noticed in some of the skirts. These are shorter at the back than in front. They are, perhaps, not very pretty but the plan is rather clever: they will not get dirty on muddy days. They are generally made in this way—the back forms a panel and the side gores are turned over, and join at the waist line, imitating a cook's apron. It is exactly the reverse of the tunic opening in front of the skirt.

But our own old wide-back English hat of straw and stretched lace will be the success of the hot Summer days. It has been vised by the most artistic of milliners. It is trimmed with big bunches of roses, violets, and all kinds of larger flowers in great masses.

There has been some curiosity regarding what will be worn at the Ascot races, which is the great fashion show of England, and to which the great French dress houses send their models and representatives. Ascot will be "black" to a great extent, at least. This will be particularly so of the Ascot hats. The fashion this Summer seems to run to more enormous hats than ever.

One huge hat is a black Belgian straw lined with black Charmeuse, and a great radiating mass of enormous zebra patterned white and black plumes, which have the appearance of an immense shower of spray from some dark fountain, across which fall bars of shadow. These form the only trimmings to the hat.

These new ostrich feathers, called the Zebra, are, by the way, quite the rage of the moment. I do not deny that they look well upon some women, but I object to any general fashion towards which every one runs.

What can there be individual about such a thing? And individuality is the only reason we have for making pretty dresses, otherwise, we might just as well wear sackcloth or skins, if protection of the body is all that is considered.

Notice the hats!

As a relief to these rather exotic costumes, there is a little "Lucile" model for a girl of eighteen.

This is a afternoon gown of chiffon cloth made over a silk drop skirt, and caught up at each side in drape effect. The short waist line is given by a girdle of soft satin with its long ends falling at one side of the skirt. The neck is cut low and the sleeves are made of the chiffon cloth only.

"The Verth Mother," a Linder Statuette.

A LITTLE TRAGEDY OF GENIUS

Now That Henry Linder Is Dead, After 24 Annual Exhibits of His Sculptures and No Sales, He and His Works Are Famous.

SUPPOSE that you knew you were a genius; that although half-clothed and half-fed, you willingly gave your life to your art; that the greatest critics declared your works to be of the highest order and the public attended your exhibitions audibly marvelling at the originality and beauty of your sculptured conceptions; and that every year for twenty-four years you gave such an exhibition without making a single sale and then found yourself dying, leaving a faithful wife penniless?

To you and to her would not that be the greatest of life-tragedies? Yet these tragedies are so common that the great world looks upon them as "little tragedies of genius."

When the woman sitting in the little house in Brooklyn speaks of the tragedy, her eyes fall. She can tell you of her own struggles without a tear; but she cannot speak of those of her husband without stopping to wipe them away.

"We had no money," she said, with fiercely trembling lips. "But I would not disgrace him by shabby clothes. I made them myself; artists give receptions sometimes, and we had to go looking well, that no one might suspect.

"Oh, yes, he exhibited and exhibited. Twenty-four years, and he gave one every year. You wouldn't think it, would you, when you look at these photographs? They are beautiful; I know it, I don't say it because I'm his wife, but because I'm the daughter of a sculptor, and I know. Look at this and this and this! And he never sold a single piece. No, not one!

"How did we live? I don't know. Once in a while he made a private sale or so—just enough to keep us from starving. We've lived four of us, on fifty cents a day.

"He was American-born, but he studied in Lauterecken with my father, Adam Bock. He went to Munich, too, and was under Professor Knabel of the Academy. After that he had a year in Rome. He was always working and striving and creating from the time he was seventeen years old.

"This is his picture then. Don't he look happy and hopeful? Isn't it a face any woman would live—that's harder than dying—for? And look at this. It's taken just before he died. It's a grieved face, isn't it? That's the way he got to look after twenty-four exhibitions, where never a single piece was sold.

"Did you see his last exhibition? It's just closed. You want? I'm glad, for it's the last we'll—I'll ever give for him. Did you see 'The Rose?' This is the photograph."

The photograph Mrs. Linder held up was that of a slender girl in a swirl of floating drapery with an arch, mocking smile and one hand toying idly with a rose [illegible] side of leave drap- [illegible] even in the picture [illegible] as if a breeze had just set them fluttering, and the modeling of the whole figure was as solid and sure as if the girl had been standing before one.

"People said he never did anything big," went on Mrs. Linder, a yearning gleam of resentment in her tired eyes. "He never had the money. He broke up nearly all the things he modeled to get plastoline to model more. Plastoline is plastoline to model; we couldn't afford but a little. 'Oh, Luise,' he would say [illegible] days, if I only had a little more—just a little more; the ideas come so fast—and then he'd break up one of his loveliest images to get the plastoline to model another. He made everything; decorative panels—did you see 'Triumph of Music' and-irons, [illegible] nels for sleeping rooms and halls, [illegible]ishes, bowls and heads and one of the best things he did was this garden seat. Don't you think it worth while?"

The seat in question was a marble bench, exquisitely curved at the back and ends, and supported by three childish figures, of distinctive and unsurpassed modeling. The poses of Linder's children, at once original and naive, are among the most charming specimens of his work.

"He had just one public commission in all his life, and that was two figures and two groups for the St. Louis exposition of 1904. They represented Oriental art, and he worked day and night on them. He was always working; no man ever toiled harder, and now his talent has just been discovered." Dr. Kuns says he should be famous. After twenty-four years one doesn't much care."

Dr. Kuns is a fellow member of the National Sculpture Society, and in a speech at a recent dinner given by the society in memory of its departed member, he said:

"No member of this society ever manifested a more retiring, modest and unassuming character than did Henry Linder. Those who knew him found him a model of gentle kindliness and appreciation. Those who met him never forgot the charm of his manner. But Linder, for all his unobtrusiveness, had gained a firmer hold on our affections than we knew. He was like the vine that grows about the trunk and upper branches of a tree; during the years his genius spent itself in sending out rootlets and tendrils about the tree, he made no move to attract attention to himself, yet now that he is gone and his really great talent is in a fair way to gain some of the recognition that persistently eluded him during his lifetime we realize with a pang the void his death has left.

"One need only glance at the exhibition about us to know how truly he loved children, how well he understood them, and how faithfully he has perpetuated some of their sweetest expressions.

"Had he elected to remain in his father's native land he undoubtedly would have met with the appreciation he signally failed to receive in the United States. When at last he turned his eyes that way it was too late. Life's journey had been too severe and disappointing. Some of us have only recently learned what endless care, privation and worry he endured—why his face was lined so deeply.

"And yet in spite of unceasing privations, he told a fellow member a year ago that if he could live his life over again he would endure it for the pleasure his art had brought him. There spoke the true artist, and an artist Henry Linder was to the full!"

That the fine feeling expressed in Linder's work was but an indication of the real nature of the man is shown in the anecdote related by Hermon MacNeil. On the occasion of the annual dinner of the Society of National Sculpture, Linder had prepared a special plaster bowl of such remarkable decorative beauty that, among themselves, the artists had decided to have it cast in bronze.

Scarcely was the dinner ended, however, before the sculptor, reaching out among the flowers, tapped the bowl with the stem of his long wooden pipe, breaking it in pieces. It seemed as if he felt that the labor of love had served its purpose and that it would be sullied by being again used. It, therefore, was to go into a memory in honor of his friends.

Pride and faith in the future are the keystones of a character which ended its life in the little Brooklyn cottage, with a smile on the lips and agony of it in the hopes in the heart.

WASH IS FOUND RICH IN GOLD

FINE STRIKE MADE ON IDA MAY CLAIM.

Large Area Averages Ounce to Ton—Price Is Put on Christmas Mine.

Special to The Gazette

CRIPPLE CREEK Aug 20—Police Judge C A Chapman of Cripple Creek and Mick Trout working the Ida May claim Bull hill which adjoins the Jo Dandy on the north and west have opened up the biggest surface strike reported in some time The wash on the surface about 50 feet wide close to an ounce and from the seat which is 20 feet down the screenings will average between seven and nine ounces

This is another of the 'mud' propositions which have proved very successful in this district A vein about two feet wide has been opened up at 20 feet It is literally plastered with free gold A shipment will be sent out this week

Chapman and Trout hold a long-time lease from the Ida May Gold Mining company, with favorable royalties

Samples taken along the entire width of the wash make it plain that this can be shipped for at least an ounce and probably better

Christmas May Be Sold.

The Christmas property located between the Vindicator and Golden Cycle is producing steadily under lessees operations George Potvin, operating from the eighth level to the surface is shipping about five cars a week, the average value being from $34 to $70 a ton

John T Milliken working the lower levels of the Christmas property, has been engaged in dead work the last two weeks but shipments from this lease will be resumed next week From the eighth level down the lease is operated by John T Milliken of St Louis work being carried on through the Golden Cycle The connection from the 1000 foot level of the Cycle with the Christmas shaft was made yesterday

It was learned yesterday that while the Christmas property is not included in the Golden Cycle option yet officers of the Christmas company were approached regarding a possible sale At that time it was stated to the representatives of the English concern that the Christmas would be sold if the sale price said to be a quarter of a million was advanced

In the last year the production from the Christmas mine has exceeded the production for many years back

Trilby Produces Car a Day

Since resumption of work on the Trilby under the direction of J. W. [illegible] as superintendent by the directors production from this property has been a car a day The main ore body is on the 1300-foot level Some development work is being carried on including a crosscut south of the shaft on the 1300-foot level The average value of the ore is an ounce

GOLD KING MINE REOPENED

SILVERTON Aug 20 The Gold King mine at Gladstone again is being operated The [illegible] started on [illegible] work The mine is being operated by a leasing company known as the Gold King Development company It is the intention of the new management to spend about four months in development work before the mill will be started George Becker of Cripple Creek who was foreman of the property under the management of Charles [illegible], will have charge of the work J M Johnson president of the company will spend considerable time at the property and take personal charge of the management

WORK IS RESUMED IN HOOSAC TUNNEL

IDAHO SPRINGS Aug 20—Work has been resumed on the breast of the Hoosac tunnel in Clear Creek with machine drills, after a long idleness and it is stated that the tunnel will be driven to the Hoosac vein 300 feet This vein is the east continuation of the Donaldson and is one of the strongest lodes in the district

The Donaldson vein is being opened at a depth of 1,800 feet through the Rockford tunnel by a lateral, and a raise is being made to surface A continuous streak of ore of smelting grade appears in the lateral and raise and it is expected that like conditions will be encountered by that tunnel just across Clear Creek from the Donaldson workings

Captain Edward D Quigley of Denver is in charge of the Hoosac enterprise, and the stockholders are said to have promised ample funds for the work The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining company has had many ups and downs since its organization but there are several thousand stockholders who are anxious to see work pushed systematically

The Rising Sun claim, owned by the Hoosac company forms a junction with the Hoosac near Clear creek. As the workings are all below the level of the creek and the water flow is heavy at this season, nothing will be done until winter

ROOM IN BLUE RIVER FOR 12 MORE DREDGES

Four Boats Now in Operation Are Expected to Produce $1,000,000 During This Season.

BRECKENRIDGE Aug 20—Gold dredging is proving a profitable industry in Summit county Four dredging boats, costing from $90 000 to $125 000 each, are expected to produce $1,000,000

August 2 the Reiling dredge boat shipped a gold brick worth $11 000 as the result of a weeks run. The other boats are probably doing equally as well Manager H J Reiling of the French creek company says that they have sufficient ground to keep their boat busy for seven years. The Reiling boat lost only nine days' time in seven months operation last year four of these days being for lack of electric power

Colonel D Kingsbury president and manager of the Buffalo company is happy. The big Panama-patterned steam shovel or scoop ordered for his company has reached Dillon within a mile and a half of the company's 1400 acres of gold bearing placers This machine is credited with a capacity for handling 400 cubic yards of placer gravel each 24 hours It runs on a heavy gauge track.

The Snider bedrock tunnel placer in Swan valley is reported to be in 'big pay dirt Some of it is said to go $16 per cubic yard This project was started a couple of years ago to reach some placer deposits which could not be worked by ordinary placer methods The tunnel is equipped with a line of sluices and car track The coarse rock and big gravel are screened out of the soft material and are trammed out to the dump while the fine gravel and nugget weighing several pennyweights each are frequently found

The placer territory of the Blue river valley is are 60 miles long Most of the streams emptying into the Blue river are auriferous, and there is still plenty of room to operate a dozen more gold boats

DRILLS OPEN VUG OF GOLD

RICH DISCOVERY MADE NEAR OURAY.

Wanakah Company Finds Ore in Cave Similar to American Nettie Deposits.

OURAY Aug 20—A notable gold strike is reported from the Finance claim, one of the Ironclad group of mines, owned by the Wanakah Mining company and located in the Gold Belt district within sight of Ouray

The strike consists of a vug hole opening 113 feet from the surface in an adit being driven as a working tunnel for the territory owned by the company, including the Bright Diamond group. The vug is an exceptionally large one, though just how large it may prove to be can not be determined at this time for the reason that one can get only about 40 feet back into the cave Beyond any point that can be reached however, it can be seen to extend The width is from 15 to 20 feet where it was opened and appears to be wider as it goes back into the hill The sulphide and decomposed substance is from four to six feet deep on the floor of the cave and can be shoveled into the sacks as so much sand.

So far as investigation has been made the ore runs from $30 to $500 to the ton, according to assays which indicate an average value of about $200 per ton. From what can be seen at present it is evident that from 200 to 300 tons can be taken from this vug. Usually the casing in these vugs is exceptionally rich in gold.

Compared with the vug holes encountered in the American Nettie, this one is much larger and of as high general value as the average This formation is the lime immediately below the middle quartzite stratum At the point in the adit where the vug was opened it is but 8 to 10 feet below a tunnel driven several years ago which followed the dip of the contact into the hill

The driving of this adit was being done for the purpose of getting a more advantageous outlet at the upper tram terminal The plan contemplated for the operation of the property is a raise from this adit to the older workings of the mine and its execution will make possible the more economical handling of the ore from the workings above where it is mined and blocked in large quantities At present there are 2 000 tons of ore broken in the mine and at least 230 000 tons of ore exposed Though some of this could be shipped directly to the smelter in crude form low grade ore predominates and it will be milled The value of this ore broken and exposed is from $10 to $60 per ton.

FIND MINERAL IN DEEP ZONE

Cambrian Quartzite Contains as Large Ore Bodies as Sedimentaries.

LEADVILLE, Aug. 20.—In the past the Yak tunnel has done much to develop the unknown resources of the district, and will continue to do so for many years to come, as the territory that is being opened by the long bore will take years of active work to develop The work already done has brought more than one surprise, and it is probable that they will continue to come at stated intervals as work advances in unknown regions

For some time the management has devoted its attention to prospecting the territory east of the Silver Cord ore shoot with very satisfactory results At a certain point in the tunnel a winze was sunk 600 feet and from the bottom a drift was run into the Cambrian quartzite some distance, when a good body of ore was opened, so far in places the ore today is 20 feet wide, with values running $30 per ton, in other places the body is not so wide. That is what the work done has already proved, and the work that is being done will prove the ore shoot to be a most valuable one This body of ore in the Cambrian quartzite is 1,300 feet from the surface, and is known as the eighth level It is one of the most important strikes made in the district for a number of years, as it proves the continuity of the Iron hill ore bodies to a greater depth than was at first supposed, and it now remains for the owners of property in that section to develop their claims to a greater depth and prove that the Cambrian quartzite contains as large bodies of ore as did the sedimentaries

Strike in Dinero Tunnel.

Another tunnel that is making a record for itself is the Dinero, Sugar Loaf district Recently a body of ore was opened that is richer than anything so far found in the property At the 3,400-foot point in the tunnel a raise was started and carried up 120 feet then drifting was started and carried for a few feet when the ore was opened Work was continued until the foot wall was caught, and when this done a breast of 5 feet of solid ore was uncovered which runs 135 ounces silver, ¼ ounce gold and from 15 to 25 per cent lead From this body of ore a carload was shipped which netted the company $3,700 On the foot wall is a small streak about 2 inches wide that runs from 15 to 20 ounces gold per ton So far the hanging wall has not been cut and until that is done the width of the vein will be unknown The north drift from the main level of the tunnel has been following a few small stringers which eventually led to a vein of ore 4 feet wide carrying values that run into three figures The opening of those two ore bodies in addition to the ore already opened in the tunnel, is of great importance to the district and will no doubt induce capital to develop some of the idle property on the hill The character of the ore bodies is a black sulphuret

New Monarch Vein Pays.

It was stated recently that a vein of ore had been opened in the New Monarch shaft Little Ella hill and since then it has been opened for 200 feet So far the vein is only 14 inches wide but it is pay ore running $40 per ton and will eventually lead to a larger vein Manager McDonald is satisfied that the vein is an extension of the Fissure vein found in the Silent Friend South Evans After the drifts have been carried some distance further prospecting on it will be done by sinking winzes and upraising

TRADING IS LIGHT IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK Aug 20—On the stock exchange today the volume of business was small even for a half holiday and while the tendency continued irregular, the movement was so narrow as to rob it of all significance London took a holiday Reports issued by the commercial agencies ranged from indifferent to favorable some lines of trade showing a better tone with others at a standstill

The Northern Pacific railroad submitted its figures for the fiscal year showing large increases in freight and passenger revenues which were largely offset by an increase of $8 000,000 in total operating expenses, the whole leaving a decrease in total net revenues of $1,729 206 and an operating income of $2,803,372 Lehigh Valley's yearly report was rather more satisfactory, its total net revenue increasing $1,928,000

The bank statement showed large increases in loans both in the average and actual tables and under the latter system an expected cash gain of five or more million was turned into a loss of over $2 800,000. Last week's surplus was reduced from $55,743,750 to $52,832 575, but the statement as a whole makes more than an ordinarily satisfactory comparison with corresponding periods

The bond market was irregular Total sales, par value, $709,500 U S government's 3's advanced ⅛ per cent and the 4's ¼ per cent on call

KOKOMO Aug 20. When Robinson and Kokomo were at their zenith in the early days the tonnage from the Ten-Mile district was extremely heavy but of late years it has dropped off and to speak generally, none of the big producers have been working The cause of the depression may be laid to the change in the character of the ore bodies with depth to zinc the heavy cost of treatment the heavy cost of extracting and hauling ore to the railroads

The district has enormous bodies of low grade ore and the day is not far distant when they will be worked successfully As a starter in the right direction the Wilson Mining company, which is working the old Robinson ore shoot is at present operating a 170-ton separating mill with success The ore treated by the mill contains zinc, lead and iron which in the crude state could not be shipped to a smelter but with the mill process the three metals are separated and then sent to the smelter The result of this process is that the company has a product that runs 45 per cent zinc and 60 per cent lead

Since the [illegible] the year the company [illegible] shipped a large tonnage to the [illegible] [illegible] lower [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] mill will be [illegible] from the mine

Going Back to School

"School days, School-days,
Dear old golden-rule days."

It isn't necessary to quote the words of this one-time popular song to impress on one the extreme delight of those good old days—those many happy days of school. They are the days that mean much, the very crucible in which the future life of the young folk is cast.

To-day the joy of going back to school is permeating the minds of thousands. Some are returning to the same dearly loved schoolhouse of former years, and others are changing from a lower school to a higher. The vacation days are drawing to a close, and stocks of interesting stories are stored up to exchange with those congenial companions whose companionship is to be renewed or new friendships formed.

Faithful and conscientious study overcomes all difficulties. An irresistible energy is supplied by it, which sweeps aside the most formidable barriers as though they were mere cobwebs. Therefore in the practical pursuit of your education never lose sight of it in the slightest instant, for it is more the disregard of small things, than by open and flagrant offenses that will cause you to fall short of attaining your end. Difficulties are the things which cause the weakling and the coward to shrink back in dismay, but they provoke from the real girl or boy of lofty determination only a smile.

To get the greatest enjoyment out of school life it is necessary above all things to be true to yourself and to be true to your school mates. Never fear to tell the truth, no matter what the consequences, and always scorn a lie and the liar. There is always a right and wrong; and if you ever doubt, be sure to take not the wrong. Observe this rule, and every experience to you will be a means of advancement.

THE inexperienced girl who has never been away to school or college so often makes the mistake of preparing an elaborate wardrobe, when, if she were wise, she would pack her trunk with the simplest of garments. A coat sweater will be one of her most useful purchases, and a plain felt hat in a becoming shape trimmed only with a pretty scarf contrasting well with the other garments. These may be of as good quality as desired. And as for gloves, she will find very little use for many pairs in long and elaborate design, chamois or heavy cape being most useful. With these articles, and a well-cut skirt of conservative pattern and several well-made shirtwaists she will be prepared for almost any occasion.

Problems of Daily Life

BY MARGARET SANGSTER

IF YOU could have your own way about it would you prefer to be plain or pretty? If you answer without thinking seriously on the subject no doubt you will cast your vote for prettiness instead of plainness. If you stop a minute to turn the subject over in your mind you may reach the conclusion that there is something worth having and within the reach of every girl that is much more desirable than mere beauty of face and more grace of figure. In other words, to be pretty or to be plain is of little consequence compared with having charm or being without it. A girl may at the first glance appear plain who on the second is magnetic, winning and fascinating. Her friend, whose features are regular, whose complexion is good, and who, judged by ordinary rules, has a great many points in her favor, may possess little more attractiveness than a doll. We all know girls who are very pretty, who satisfy our ideas of what it is good to look at in a girl, who add to their endowment of beauty everything that is interesting and captivating. A woman like this is a real queen of hearts. Nature has gifted her with angular powers, and if she use them aright she will be a benefactor to the world in which she moves. Among modern instances of women thus divinely dowered with the twin gifts of beauty and charm we think at once of the Empress Eugenie of France, whose story lacks no element of romance both in its triumphs and its tragedies, and of Queen Alexandra, who from youth to age has been one of the most superbly beautiful and completely charming women of her period.

What I am trying to tell you is that, although a young woman is pretty, she is not necessarily an uninteresting as a wax doll. She is perhaps in danger of caring too much for her looks, depending too much upon them for social success and neglecting to cultivate her brain and heart in fact sympathy, knowledge and the other qualities which combine to make a woman lovable, magnetic and delightful. Many very plain girls possess to perfection a charm which many pretty girls miss, and so the balance is kept even.

Of one thing you may be sure. It is that youth is in itself a beauty. No young girl with a pure heart, a kind nature and a cultivated mind can escape having some measure of attraction in her face. Whether she keeps it intact or loses it, whether she grows more charming as the years pass or less so, must depend upon herself.

Grace of motion, an attainment within any one's reach, is one of the arts ignored or despised by many women who never learn how to walk so well that to watch them is a pleasure, or how to enter and leave a room with ease and without self-consciousness. It was said of Queen Victoria, who was a dumpy little woman, never handsome even in youth, that she knew how to move with elegance and dignity, and that she was never afraid of a space in front of her. Can you apply this test to yourself? If you are in a large assembly room with people sitting around the walls, and you are obliged to cross from one end of the room to the other, can you do it without a thought of the onlookers, or even a transient embarrassment? If so, you have acquired a distinction that will make people forget whether you are plain or pretty.

Those who have studied social affairs closely are apt to assert that a tall man and a short woman are often married to one another and that a remarkably beautiful girl often chooses a positively plain looking husband, while the reverse happens; a handsome man marrying a plain girl. When these contrasts take place the observer is seldom mistaken in making the assertion that neither tallness nor shortness, beauty or ugliness were the make-weights in the scale. The attractive quality was charm, the charm that one had for the other and the compelling potency of opposites. We are much oftener attracted by our opposite in friendship than by the person who resembles ourselves.

One of the most elegant and distinguished men whom I ever knew, a man who would anywhere have been noticed for the old-school elegance of his courtly manner and for an inherited share of good looks, married a little lady who was undeniably plain in feature, and whose figure possessed no striking characteristic, except a tendency to avoirdupois. Yet about this little woman, whenever she appeared, a throng gathered. She was a center of pleasure in the drawing room and a leader of women and of men as well in the society she adorned. Her conversation was pleasant, her smile was an illumination, and the touch of her hand made one feel happy in her presence. Pretty women were unnoticed where this plain woman was easily the one who focussed the admiration of an evening group.

On the stage the favorite actress is not always beautiful, if her countenance is critically studied. She seldom fails to have the effect of beauty and her way of walking, standing and sitting at ease are object lessons to the spectator.

Do not waste your time in thinking regretfully that nature has been grudging in bestowing attractiveness upon you. Faces reflect the mind and the soul, and goodness writes its story upon the countenance in characters that cannot be mistaken. Charm is as difficult to define as the perfume of a flower, or the song of a bird. It belongs to little children as their birthright. They often lose it as they leave the unconsciousness of baby days behind them, partly through the foolishness of grown people who talk them over in their presence, or partly through having too much stress laid upon what they wear. The instant a young girl grows out of childhood into youth, worrying about her dress, her hair, her hats and other trivial matters, she parts with some of the unconscious charm that was hers as a child. Any one who can keep the sweetness and grace of the child all the way on through the years of maturity will possess the quality of charm. Not that one should be childish and silly, or put on, as I have seen girls do, little airs of ignorance and stupidity which deceived no one, but that one should keep the straightforwardness and sincerity of the child, is what I am urging upon you.

A good rule is to think very little about yourself. Dress suitably for an occasion if you conveniently can. Try to set other people at their ease and to make every one who knows you happier and more contented because you are near. A daughter always thinks of her mother as lovely, never as plain and unattractive. Mothers have charm for daughters through their sweet unselfishness. Equally the most popular girl in her class, the saleswoman most beloved by her companions in a department store, and the young woman in society who enjoys the most attention is the one who more than the others has the endowment of charm. She may be pretty or she may be plain. The detail is not worth mentioning. She is simply interesting, sympathetic and adorable. "The queen rose in a rosebud garden of girls."

THE MOTHER ATTITUDE TOWARD SCHOOL By Maria Scoll

A WEAK, petulant mother once excused her little daughter from school for several days because she fancied the teacher had shown favoritism and had been unfair in her marks. It is easy to foresee the effect of such a course upon the child's character. Her insubordination increased her fancied ills, emphasized her mother's sympathy, an easy prey, these combined to make her so distasteful to the other scholars after her return and so impossible to control that the inevitable soon happened, and it was found necessary that she should leave the school. As a matter of fact she was never admitted for any length of time to any other school. A succession of governesses "completed" her education. She now shows as a grown woman the same petulant intolerant and suspicious characteristics that marked her as a school girl. All her weak traits are permanently emphasized by her mother's false attitude during her early childhood. This unfortunate combination when focused upon her school life became a permanently destructive force in her development.

This is only one of the many examples showing how much the mother's attitude has to do with her child's success or unsuccess at school. Many things come to a child during the impressionable years of his school life—many more things than lessons learned from books. He is always changing, always developing, always receiving new impressions. These new impressions reach his mother only after they have filtered through his own undeveloped intelligence. Her manner of receiving them has a great deal to do with the permanent effect they have upon his nature. In his mother's face the child reads condemnation or praise, for she is always his greatest teacher. Therefore, her manner of receiving his confidences, her judgment of his friends, his actions, his aspirations—these count more than can be expressed, and the mother's attitude toward all the little complexities of school life definitely affect her child's progress.

The mother should be, before all else, an infuser of courage. This attitude in her will help her children to become successful men and women more surely than will any material advantage she may have at her command to offer them. There are some souls whose mission in life is to fortify the wavering strength of others. These are the souls, after all, who contribute most to the world, because they direct its spiritual output. Every mother should try to be to her children what these strong souls are to the world. The relationship is practically the same. The mother should refuse to be discouraged, refuse to see the narrow personal element in her child's struggles. She should train and cultivate in herself a moral strength and a fortitude that will not be coerced. To have a mother of this kind is the best thing that can happen to a child. She stands behind him in his course. Her hand points in the right direction toward the goal which her imagination paints vividly before his eyes. Her enthusiasm and belief are always wide awake. While giving him sympathy, she gives at the same instant subtle fortitude, born of her trust, which is strong enough to keep him always moving on. He is appreciated, yet at the same time reverenced. He is understood, yet kept about his business by constant supervision and control.

To every child are bound to come periods of depression. He is "worked to death," "too tired to open another book," "sick of everything," "unappreciated," "disliked"—discouragement of this kind will come at times to the most faithful worker. It is at this point that the weak mother allows her sympathies to be preyed upon. Instead of infusing new courage into her child she submits her mind also to his depression, and robs him by the very expressions of her tenderness of what little strength he has left. The tactful mother realises the danger of too much expressed sympathy, her love at the same time appreciating to the full the weight of his temporary distress. But before committing herself in any way, she tries to revive her child's normal tone and spirits by sending him out of doors for a long play, or on some pleasant errand. After a good meal and a brisk walk, he is very likely to return of his own accord to his books, especially if his mother lends her assistance by hearing him recite or by helping him over his difficulties. If the depression lasts and the lessons seem insurmountable, the mother must investigate fully the school methods, and the daily record of her child; but this must be done without his knowledge, and she should seek his teacher, determined to be unbiased, and to give a fair and impersonal hearing to all sides of the question.

Here comes the importance of the mother's attitude toward the teacher. It is absolutely necessary for the child's teacher to have home support if anything is to be accomplished. The mother must be the teacher's ally, for rebellion and insurrection are sure to follow if she takes sides with the younger spirit against authority. However strongly the mother may feel at times against the teacher in her heart of hearts, she must never allow the child to know. She must support the teacher before the child at all costs. As a matter of form and discipline this attitude is absolutely necessary. Allegiance of the two powers—home and school—can be achieved if the child is aware to be a marked success.

It is wise for the mother to see and know the teacher who has control of her child's school life for many reasons.

A visit once in a while, a little friendly talk, a word or two of advice concerning the child's peculiarities of disposition—these may work wonders for him by establishing a personal relationship between himself and his teacher, and by emphasising and stimulating in her any praiseworthy interest she may have felt. By several yearly conversations with her child's teacher the mother will easily get a very clear view through her eyes of his mental and moral deficiencies. It is probably fear of this very thing that keeps so many mothers away from the school where instinct tells them their child is making the best record. It is easier to blame the teacher for unfairness and favoritism, than it is to fight with the child against his peculiarities, defending him from his faults by constant watchful sympathy and care. The mother who wishes to do her best for her child will overcome this natural shrinking within herself, and use every effort to win over for him the personal friendship of his teacher.

A visit, a kindness now and then, real interest in her child's progress—all these she may use, and they are sure to appeal to one who is leading the hard self-denying life of a teacher in a large school.

Every child must do a certain amount of work out of school. The way in which he does it naturally affects his average very greatly, so that the home may also in this way be made a factor in the child's progress at school. The mother can do much in a practical way to help the teacher, by providing for home studies a convenient table, a good light, and if possible, a quiet room. Too often this item is entirely ignored, and the child is allowed to study in the same room with the other talking, laughing members of his family, under a poor light, with his books held upon his lap, or painfully up before his tired eyes. It is not a good thing for the mother to study with her child except very occasionally.

Friends Who Hold Us Back

BY TEMPLE BAILEY

WE usually think of our friends as benefiting us, but the girl who works often finds that some friendships are a menace rather than a help. I think hardly any man or woman who has succeeded is without the knowledge that in a certain sense they have been hampered by the people who love them, and who wish them well.

We all know the old saying of the prophet who "is without honor in his own country." Recognition of ability usually comes more slowly from those who are near us. They have known us at a time when we were commonplace, one, perhaps, of a group of school children, none of whom showed special ability; hence, when we branch out into new things there is often the shake of the head and the incredulous shrug of the shoulder, which are the outward tokens of a lack of belief in us.

In families it is often the case that the child who has real talent is overlooked because some brother or sister has more conspicuous attractions. In communities the same mistake is often made, some precocious infant is told off for future honors, and it is hard for fathers and mothers to understand that some quiet little mouse of a maid or some unobtrusive lad will be the future authoress or statesman.

A famous woman told me not long ago of an experience in her childhood which illustrates my meaning. She said that at a Sunday school entertainment she had been taught to sing a simple little slumber song. Just before her piece was announced a visiting stranger, a child who looked like a big blond baby in her pink silk dress and satin slippers, was brought forward and recited a remarkable poem about a broken doll. She was a forward youngster with a sharp voice and an artificial manner, but in that unsophisticated little Sunday school she was a sensation. She was applauded tumultuously and for an encore she gave with pantomime accompaniment, the little song which my friend had learned with so much effort. Coming on top of the more effective performance the singing of the quiet little scholar proved a failure. She had one of the hearts he and heartbreak that wounded her as she found herself set aside. She heard the prediction as to the blond baby's future. Let who ever hears now of that precocious infant? And the world rings with the name of the one whose slumber song was a failure.

Most of us have had the experience of leaving our own town or village environment and of finding among other people an appreciation of our talents which fills us with sincere delight. Now and then I believe that a woman who works will find greater opportunity for her talent if she leaves the people who do not believe in her, and goes among those who do. By this I do not mean that every girl who fancies herself a genius should cut herself off from the very precious home atmosphere, but there are those who know that they have it in them to do things, and when this feeling becomes so strong as to be a certainty, and when they have some good reason to think they can succeed, surely they have sufficient excuse for some new line of action.

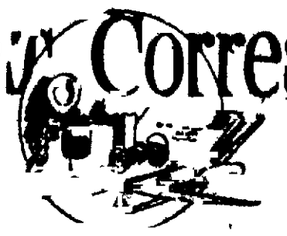

As an example I must tell of a girl who seemed delicate and extremely nervous and who was surrounded by an equally delicate and nervous family. By the advice of her physician this girl left home and stayed with an aunt in a country village. The doctor said the change would do her much good, as there had been at home the constant suggestion of illness. Time proved, however, that it was not simply the lack of a healthy atmosphere that was the trouble, but rather the lack of willingness on the part of the family to allow the girl to enter upon any absorbing or interesting work. It happened that in the country town where she visited a neighbor was taken very ill, and the girl, accustomed to sickness, nursed her. She proved so efficient that the new doctor asked: "Have you ever thought of nursing as a profession?" She had not, and pleaded her delicate health. "But I should love it," she said, and her eyes sparkled. He advised her to stay one year longer in the little town and to take up such practical nursing as might come to her hand, and then to go into training. She followed his advice but when the time came for her to go to the hospital of her choice the family issued peremptory orders for her to come home. She knew however, that she had found her niche and she kept steadily on in spite of the hard work and distasteful duties which almost appalled her. She told me that the first year of her hospital training was so difficult and unpleasant that she would have given up had it not been that her pride urged her on. She is now the head of a training school for nurses and a successful woman. The rest of the family still live in the state of invalidism and they cannot understand this wonderful being who was separated from them for success.

The girl who has had a social life, but who comes to the point where work is a necessity often finds that her friends who have so much leisure hamper her dreadfully. They cannot understand the necessity for endeavor and they think she is very silly to do it. Moreover, they are apt to be jealous of the work she gives to study, and they are always putting before her allurements which draw all who her from the path she has marked out.

The same famous woman who told me the slumber song incident stated that for a time she had worked in her father's office. After his death she was advised to stay in a clerical position in the same office with his partner. She decided that she had earned some money by her singing, but everyone laughed at her, except her mother. They stated that music was a precarious way to earn her living, but she stuck to her point, declaring that she would "rather sing in a garret than pound a typewriter in a palace." Nobody believed in her, as I have said, except her mother, everybody predicted failure, but she succeeded. She knew that she had in her the elements that would help her to win, and she did it.

I am not trying to undervalue friendship. It is the greatest thing in the world but each of us must go our own way, and we must push ahead no matter who tries to hold us back.

Mrs. Moore's Correspondence

Hand-made Handkerchiefs.

K. A. M.:—Although the fact is not widely known, the making of handkerchiefs is a most lucrative occupation for the woman who is an expert with the needle, but fads are as dominant in the matter of handkerchiefs as in other articles of dress, and people who make them in a way that they will readily sell give the matter of supplying the market some real serious thought. The result is that they know when preference is given for a certain kind of lace. One year it may be a narrow hemstitch or a daintily embroidered initial that will have the preference over lace creations by people of good taste.

Certain rules must be rigidly observed, however, in this work. Hand-made handkerchiefs must be made of exquisitely dainty material. Usually fine handkerchief linen, mull or cambric. When lace or insertion are used, both must be of corresponding quality. It never pays to use cheap material on these bits of hand-made articles.

It never pays to skimp. Lace must not only be of fine material, but full enough around the corners. If they are to be hemstitched, or to have an initial worked in the corner, it is important to know how wide the hem must be used and correct size, even of the initial.

A recent vogue offered a special opportunity for the exercise of taste in delicate patterns of colored embroidery, delicate blossoms, tendrils and leaves in sheer stitches. The designs themselves being a legacy from the old courts of France.

People who give orders for hand-made handkerchiefs often choose their own material and leave the design and ornamentation to the taste of the needlewoman. It goes without saying, that she must not only be able to do the daintiest work, but be thoroughly familiar with the latest vogue in the matter of workmanship.

Typewriting.

R. M. M.—If you have speed as a typewriter, you may find it of advantage to combine this with the use of a graphophone. You will find business men who do not care to use their notes, who prefer to dictate to the machine during a leisure hour and leave the transportation of notes for the stenographer to be done at another part of the day.

If you have good speed, you will not find it difficult to learn the use of the graphophone. The agencies handling these machines willingly instruct stenographers in their use. They can and do often get positions for those who are able to take dictation from the graphophone at a salary at least ten dollars a month more than ordinarily paid a stenographer to take dictation from her own notes.

When you take into consideration that the agent for a commercial graphophone will give you the opportunity to learn the use of it gratuitously, it will be worth while to give it a trial.

The opening of Fall trade should give you an opportunity to use what you will attain in that way.

AN ARTISTIC SALAD.

"That is the most artistic looking pineapple salad I have ever seen," said a guest to her hostess. "Most of them look as messy as if they had been gathered from the refuse of plates. How did you ever get the pieces so even?"

"It is the way I cut my pineapple," was the reply. "An old Southern cook taught me. Do not part it, but with a fork, begin at the lowest row of eyes and lift out a chunk of the fruit at a time. Go round the entire melon, then begin at the second row and continue to the top. This removes all the meat save the core.

"When the pieces are out all that is necessary is to cut off the bit of rind and your salad is ready to dress. I leave the pineapple on the ice for two hours before serving.

The Diet Kitchen

BY MAY C. MOORE

WHEN confronted with the problem of earning a living how very, very seldom do we take into account skill in cooking as a business asset.

A woman may have a thorough knowledge of this oldest of woman's old occupations, and although she may not be totally lacking in enterprise, she almost invariably overlooks the value of her homely accomplishments as a means of earning a living.

As a matter of fact there is no other occupation where there exists a greater scarcity of trained ability than in the line of dainty cooking.

Every town needs its caterer, and surely every city needs its delicatessen stores, but a far greater need than either of these and one that apparently has been almost totally overlooked, is the great need of diet kitchens.

Any woman who will give this subject a moment's consideration should see at once the wide and general need of this accommodation.

In this day of hygienic methods the average medical prescription is so often accompanied by the diet prescription detailing the minutest direction for the gastronomic needs of a patient, that the diet kitchen has assumed an importance to many invalids, second only to the pharmacy.

Good cooks there are on every hand, but somehow and for some reason the woman with enterprise for a venture of this kind and the discrimination to foresee this need has not turned her skill to practical account.

As a proof of the scarcity of this accommodation I may cite the instance of an invalid who was ordered by his physician to take a three months' rest. A simple menu had been ordered strictly in accordance with certain well defined rules of dietetics, the preparation of which would involve to some extent a knowledge of the chemistry of cooking.

His case was not serious enough to call for the services of a professional nurse could he have found any one to prepare this simple menu. We had selected a well-known health resort and was quartered at one of the best hotels, his every comfort provided for in a general way, but the special preparation of the food that had been prescribed was apparently out of the question. Not one of the really good restaurants of the place could fill the directions given by the physician.

It was simple enough requiring only intelligent care in its preparation. It merely varied somewhat from the menu of the hotels and restaurants of the place, and was hence impossible to get without employing a trained nurse with this single purpose in view.

Here was a health resort patronized by hundreds of invalids yearly, and in accordance with the present day system of placing invalids on special diets the place should have afforded this simple convenience. Most of the invalids were not only able, but willing to pay a reasonable price for simple, wholesome food, yet nowhere could it be procured.

Nor was this case an exceptional one. It is merely mentioned here to emphasize the fact of the great need of diet kitchens in almost every populous community, as well as at every health resort.

Almost any intelligent woman who has some skill in cooking could give a little special attention to the study of the ingredients and chemical values of food, and not only meet the demand, but earn a good living. Contrary to the general belief, the difficulty of preparing such food is simple, compared to the complicated menu of the average epicure.

The preparation of the prescribed diet is little out of line with just the plain and simple necessities of the average well kept table. A few general rules, such as the fact that starchy foods require long cooking, that albuminous food must be cooked at a low temperature, that soups are never to be thickened with other than the usual ingredients, could easily be mastered by a woman of average intelligence who wants to acquire a general idea of the chemical value of foods and their ingredients. If with this she can have the confidence and the indorsement of local physicians, the rest will be easy.

The demand for health foods of all kinds is steadily on the increase and few families are without their "fad" in cereals, digestible breads, etc.

Now if a woman can establish a reputation for even some one popular table delicacy, she can sometimes make it very profitable.

A notable instance of this is the successful enterprise of a widow who for the last ten years has by the sale of a superior quality of beaten biscuit supported herself and educated her two children.

When this woman undertook to fill a popular demand, as she saw it in her own city, she was holding a position as a teacher in a fashionable private school. Her salary was small, and she believed that by stepping out of the line of salaried places, and opening a small business of her own that she might earn a larger income.

She commenced in a small way during one vacation and never got back to the school room. She supplied the restaurants and the hotels daily with fresh beaten biscuit. She now has the entire patronage of all the hotels and restaurants of her city and has been averaging for some time over a hundred dollars every month as the profit of her work.

She was just a sensible, practical woman. She believed that it was just as easy to do this, and earn an income adequate to her needs, as it was to struggle along with a small salary. She has long since proved that her judgment was correct.

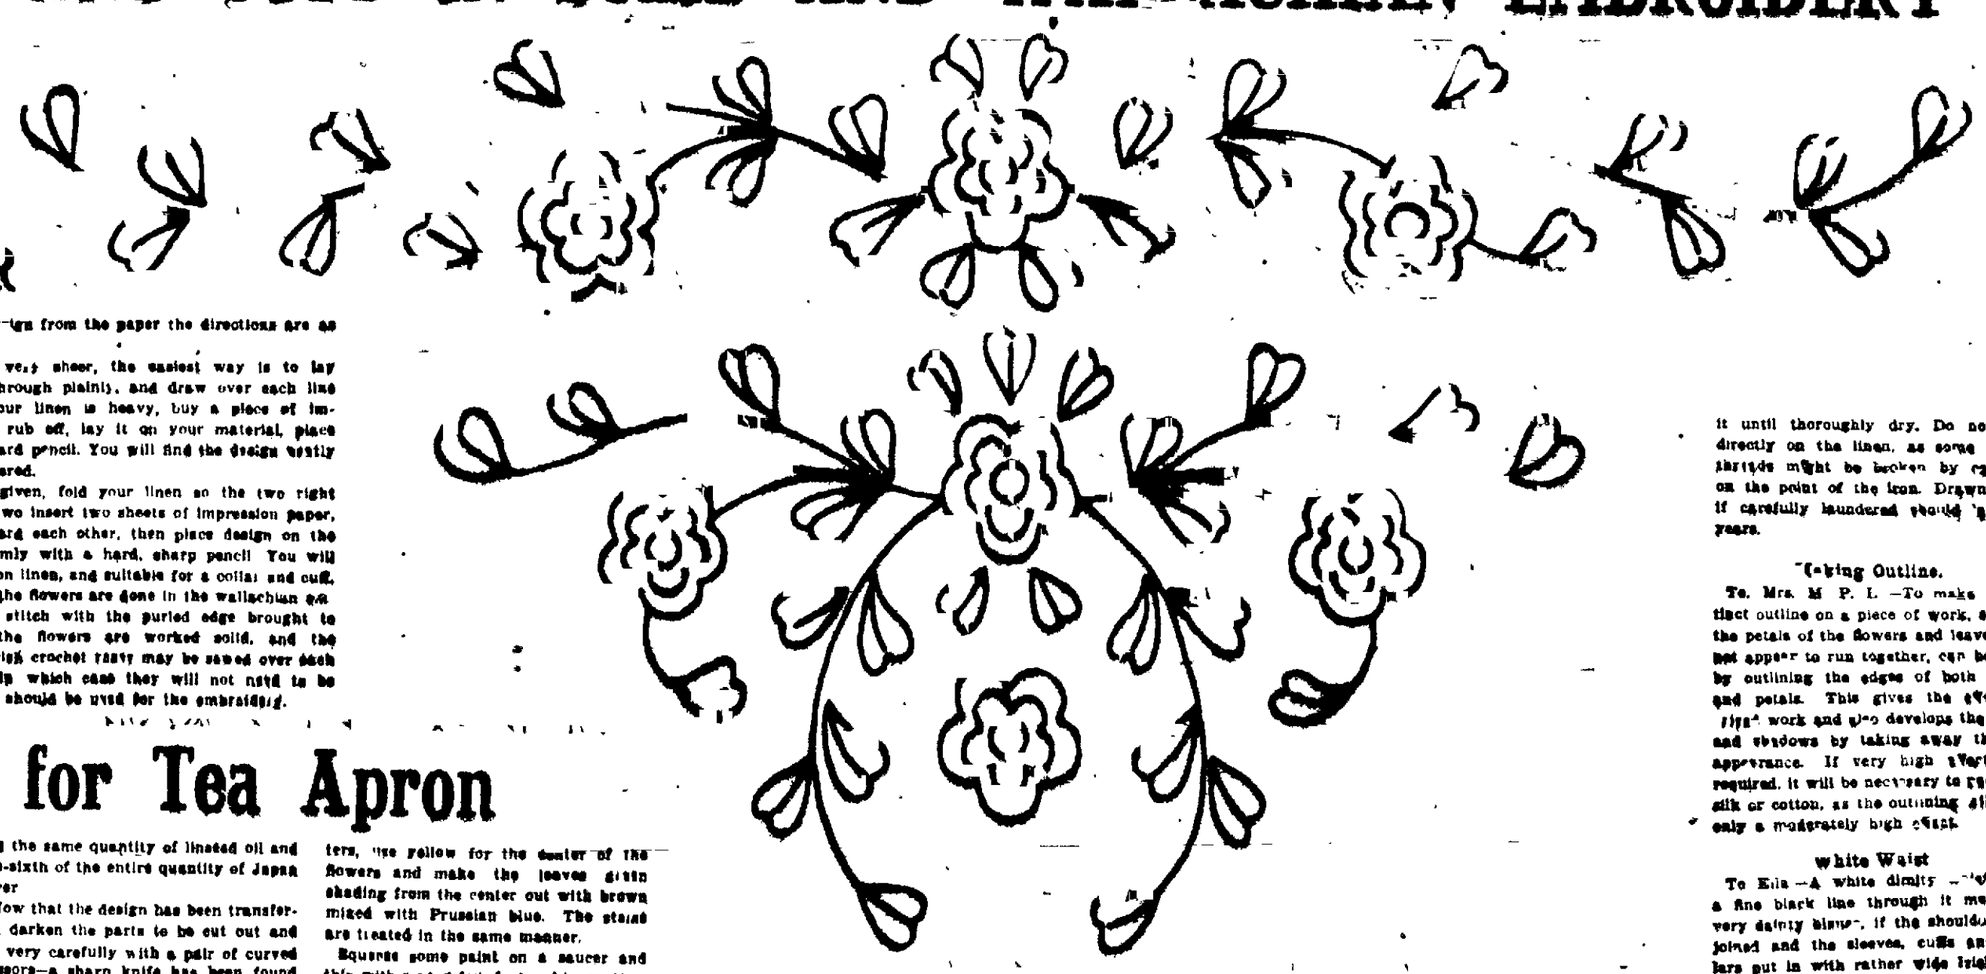

We are very prone to think that it is chance that gives the business world so many thousands of successful women. As a matter of fact, it is just that spirit of enterprise combined with the foresight that some women exercise in the selection of a vocation that bring the results that are satisfactory.

Needlework and Stencilling

COLLAR AND CUFF IN SOLID AND WALLACHIAN EMBROIDERY

Drawn by SARAH HALE HUNTER

If the material used is very sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

In transferring, when one part is given, fold your linen so the two right sides come together. Between these two insert two sheets of impression paper, placing the wrong sides of paper toward each other, then place design on the folded material and draw each line firmly with a hard, sharp pencil. You will find both sides of the design produced on linen, and suitable for a collar and cuff.

The leaves and outside edge of the flowers are done in the wallachian embroidery, which is a close buttonhole stitch with the purled edge brought to the outside. The dots in the center of the flowers are worked solid, and the stems in the outline stitch. Small Irish crochet rasty may be sewed over each flower in the pattern, if preferred, in which case they will not need to be embroidered. Mercerized cotton No. 20 should be used for the embroidery.

Stencil for Tea Apron

With each successive year stencilling is becoming more popular and it is small wonder, when we think of the opportunities it offers to the beauty-loving housewife. The facts that it is so quickly learned and that it requires so little time to produce a most charming effect have placed this art within the reach of even the most busy girl and woman.

The illustration shows a dainty little lace-trimmed apron of fine lawn, with a trailing design of flowers stenciled across the front and a single motif stenciled on the pocket and on the end of each string.

Transfer the design by means of impression paper to the cut oil board or plain manila wrapping paper. The latter will be found most satisfactory if saturated with three parts turpentine and the same quantity of linseed oil and one-sixth of the entire quantity of Japan dryer.

Now that the design has been transferred darken the parts to be cut out and cut very carefully with a pair of curved scissors—a sharp knife has been found advantageous by some for this part of the work. Be sure to follow the outline accurately and leave a generous margin all around the design.

Lay the lawn evenly over white blotting paper over a flat board and fasten the stencil over it with thumb tacks. Now we are ready for the brushes and paints. The paper must be short and stiff, while almost any oil paints will be found better than any other kind, if not too much turpentine is used.

Use scarlet lake for the flowers and shade with crimson lake from the centers, use yellow for the center of the flowers and make the leaves green shading from the center out with brown mixed with Prussian blue. The stems are treated in the same manner.

Squeeze some paint on a saucer and thin with a very few drops of turpentine, mixing well with the brush. Don't take up too much paint on the brush and to avoid disastrous results have an old cloth ready to take off superfluous color. The aim is to get a flat stencil effect and not the appearance of a solid oil painting.

Use a fresh brush for each color and work with a rotary motion when applying the paint on the stencil.

When you have finished the large design be careful in removing the stencil so that the edges will not blur. Clean off the extra paint with a soft cloth and your stencil is ready to use again, if you so desire.

Now place the material for the pocket in position. It is better to do the pocket before sewing it on the apron, as it can be handled more easily. Stencil the single motif on the pocket and repeat on the end of each string.

In every case the material must be stretched well over the board or table, for the slightest looseness will spoil your results.

Miss Hunter's Correspondence

TO Mrs E M T.—An unusually pretty lunch set of centerpiece and doilies is one of rather heavy round thread linen, with a design of morning glories, leaves and tendrils arranged in a circle on each. Part of the work may be solid, and part worked with double outline on the edge, and inside of this another double outline, following the line of the first. The entire design may be worked in this way without any solid work. This will be a very effective set without any difficult work. Finish the edge of each piece with a small shallow scallops.

Centerpiece.

To Subscriber.—Shaded red poppies on tan linen will make a beautiful design for a 12 or 15-inch centerpiece. About six clusters of the flowers can be used, consisting of one open flower and two buds with leaves. The stems starting from the edge, the flowers towards the center. The petals should be worked solid, with shades of red light on the edge and darker towards the center. The center of the flowers, which consists of a seed pod with stamens must be worked with black and green. Still, if the part the stamens is black, ending in a French knot of black, with a thread of yellow. Large shallow scallops are used for the edge. These are to be worked with red twisted silk.

Baby's Wrapper.

A finer one can be made of nun's veiling or albatross or even of white china silk. This can be bound with wash ribbon featherstitched on, and tied with wash ribbon at the neck. The plainer one will perhaps be the most useful, however.

Bureau Scarf.

To Lucile P.—Curtain muslin with a design of bowknots on it will make a pretty simple bureau scarf. The bowknot pattern can be outlined or worked over with silk or mercerized cotton, the color of the fittings of the room, and the scarf finished on three sides with lace and beading run with ribbon to match.

This can be tacked to a lining of silkaline or sateen, the same color as the ribbon and embroidery silk. The pin cushion is covered with the lace with ties and ribbon around the edge and bows or rosettes at the corners.

Cat Stitching.

To Cornelia.—Cat stitching is used for holding down both sides of an open seam of flannel or any other material with a raw edge, or it can also be used for holding down the edges of collars, etc., to make them firm. It is made by pressing the seam open and taking the stitches from right to left on each side of the open seam, crossing and recrossing, always pointing the needle to the left and covering the raw edge.

Drawn Work.

To Barbara.—In making drawn work it is the safest plan to draw the threads from only a small part of the linen at a time, as the threads are so easily pulled out of place or broken. After the work is all finished the linen may be cut away very carefully from around the edge close to the buttonholing.

Drawn work should also be very carefully laundered, so that the threads will not be broken. When it is partly dry place it between two cloths and iron it until thoroughly dry. Do not iron directly on the linen, as some of the threads might be broken by catching on the point of the iron. Drawn work if carefully laundered should last for years.

Eyelet Outline.

To Mrs. M. P. L.—To make a perfect outline on a piece of work, so that the petals of the flowers and leaves will not appear to run together, can be done by outlining the edges of both leaves and petals. This gives the effect of fine work and also develops the lights and shadows by taking away the flat appearance. If very high effects are required, it will be necessary to use silk or cotton, as the outlining will give only a moderately high effect.

White Waist.

To Eula.—A white dimity waist with a fine black line through it makes a very dainty blouse. If the shoulders are joined and the sleeves, cuffs and collars put in with rather wide Irish lace entre deux. The waist should be opened down the front, and on each side of the pleat a row of tiny Irish crochet balls are sewed. These balls can be bought by the yard attached to a narrow edge of the lace.

Slumber Pillow.

To Jennie.—The small slumber pillow which is used by so many can be covered with a very pretty pillow case. One with a plain scallop and embroidered dots following the scallops makes a dainty, simple pattern, or a little running vine following the scallops will be attractive. The dots may also be worked as eyelets. If the initials are used on the case they should be embroidered in one corner, or on the edge, so as not to interfere with the comfort of the owner.

Candle Shades.

To Rosalie.—Linen candle shades are very useful for a Summer home as they are easily laundered, and are made to fit over the wire frames so they can be taken off to be washed. A design of eyelets and French embroidery on white linen will be both simple and attractive. Both edges can be finished with small scallops. If the shades are open in effect a lining of pale pink light blue or green, will show very prettily with the light shining through. The shade can be fastened on the frame with tiny stitches, which will not be seen.

Ornamental Pottery Work

By Josephine Josephare

AFTER you have started on the easier pieces of pottery, if once the joy of the working gets into the soul, you will be looking out for new worlds to conquer. One of the most fascinating of pieces is the candlestick. There is something romantic, even sentimental, in the candlestick that is lacking in the pretzel bowl or tile. By all means try the candlestick, if you are interested in the making of pottery.

First pick out your design and draw it just like the design is, as large as the candlestick you intend to make. Begin with an easy design and don't try to build too high. In the photograph will be seen a picture of a sconce which is very attractive, but one of the hardest pieces to build owing to the inclination of the soft clay to collapse when the shield of the sconce is in the process of construction. The drawing for this is given also, but it is good advice to suggest that this be one of the final pieces attempted by the amateur.

Begin the candlestick as the tile and bowl were begun, by drawing a circle the exact size of the candlestick base on a piece of manila paper and, piece by piece building the base to a height of from one-half to three-quarters of an inch. Then roll a coil with the two hands as in bowl building and lay this around the outside of the base to make the rolled rim seen in both drawing and photograph. Begin the central column intended to hold the candle by placing piece on piece until the height intended for the finished stick is completed. Do not bother as yet about the socket for the candle. When this part of the work is completed have at hand a candle of ordinary size and with such a simple tool as a wooden meat skewer or a boxwood tool made for the purpose and obtainable at art stores, cut out a socket round enough and deep enough to hold the candle that you have at hand.

The next step is the placing of the handle. It may be made of the requisite size and then secured to the candlestick by dextrous manipulations of it and small pieces of clay. Be sure that it is welded into a solid mass else it will crack off in drying or in the firing.

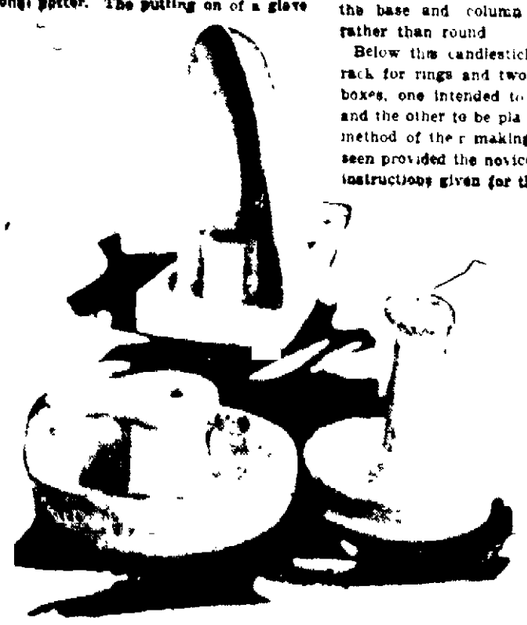

After the candlestick is allowed to harden for a short time turn it upside down and with your tool scrape away the clay of the base so that you have a hollow column. In making all pieces intended for firing and glazing, be sure that a depression about one-sixteenth of an inch is scraped away from the base and about one-half inch from the outside edge else the pieces do not fire and glaze well. The reason for hollowing the column in which the candle rests is that there is always a danger of air-holes becoming filled with steam during the firing process and exploding the piece. It is much harder to preserve a thick piece of clay free from air-pockets than a very thin piece.

The candlestick shown in the photograph was burned and then glazed with a dull green matt glaze. This glazing had better be attended to by a professional potter. The putting on of a glaze requires such an amount of technical skill and proper appliances that the amateur had better leave this portion of the work to the professional workman. However in future articles recipes for several glazes will be given and experiments may be made in this sort of work. Glazed pieces cannot be moved from the pottery until they are fired. So experimentation must be made at or close to a pottery, as shipping is impossible.

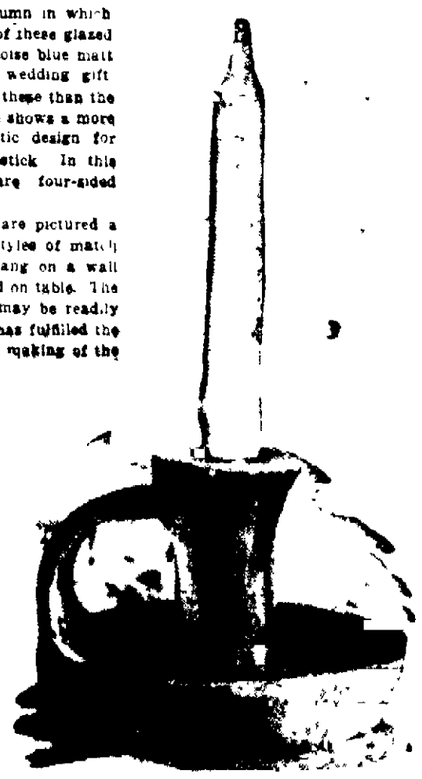

What are known as "green pieces" or pieces of pottery that have simply hardened, but are not yet baked may be packed in excelsior or hay and shipped without much damage, provided the package is made a matter of great care.

As a second trial, it might be wise to try a candlestick such as is pictured in the group of pottery, which is without a handle but has a tall column in which to set the candle. A pair of these glazed in a dull green or a turquoise blue matt make a most attractive wedding gift. It is much easier to make these than the sconce. The small picture shows a more elaborate but very artistic design for this same sort of candlestick. In this the base and column are four-sided rather than round.

Below this candlestick are pictured a rack for rings and two styles of match boxes, one intended to hang on a wall and the other to be placed on table. The method of their making may be readily seen provided the novice has fulfilled the instructions given for the making of the bowl, tile and candlestick. The match boxes are decorated with very simple ornaments incised in the sides. Two holes have been made in the match box intended to be hung on a wall. These holes must be made while the clay is still damp, else the match box may be cracked while the finishing is being done.

GINGER BREAD

Two pounds of flour, two tablespoonfuls ground ginger, one grated lemon rind, one and a quarter pounds brown sugar, one pound of brown sugar, half a pound of butter. Sieve the flour and ginger into a basin and grate the lemon rind on to it. Warm the other ingredients together, stir them into the flour and beat well. Place the mixture in well greased and papered cake tins and bake for one hour in a moderate oven.

WASHING A BRUISE

With the approach of short socks the legs of children are often a case of distraction and cause much anxiety to everyone if the bruise is at once smeared thickly with fresh butter and renewed every ten minutes for several hours.

Much good can be done if the child is instructed when he has given his leg a hard knock to put it at once under cold water and keep it there for at least ten minutes. This tends to reduce discoloration.

BURLAP PORCH PILLOWS

Many women prefer instead of the chintz fish pillows for a porch, the heavier burlap effects. These can now be bought ready made for comparatively small sums and give good service, even standing bad weather.

The newest treatment is to work upon the burlap a bold design in self toned heavy braids soutache or a thick cotton cord. Sometimes black and white braids are selected, but the monotone effect is newer.

A good way to use up odds and ends of raffia is to weave it into a spidery web or other design on burlap pillows. The raffia is fastened in place in a couching stitch in gay colored floss silk or heavy cotton.

Just the Thing for Early Autumn

By Jean Carrington

NATURALLY the girl who is going away to college will wish to purchase her Autumn hat before her departure, and, although the fashions for Fall millinery have not been definitely decided, a few of the styles which will be favorites this season have begun to appear in the shops.

The large hat in the center of the page is of mushroom shape, in beaver skin. It is trimmed effectively with coque feathers and cords, and will be exceedingly becoming to a youthful face.
